DEFENSE LOSES BATTLE TO BAR STORY OF RICHES

Gangster's Income Evasion Told.

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.

Al Capone last night found himself caught in a net of his own weaving. After an all day court battle by his attorneys, Michael Ahern and Albert Fink, Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson admitted into evidence what may be described as a "confession letter," a document in which the chief of Chicago gangland, through his Washington attorney, admitted income as high as $100,000 a year, upon which he paid no tax.

Capone learned a second lesson from the United States government. The first was the dictum of Judge Wilkerson, in ordering him to trial, that "you cannot bargain with the federal court." The lesson yesterday was that "you cannot bind the government."

Offer of Compromise Made.

In 1930 Capone had sought to compromise his indebtedness by an offer of settlement with the income tax department. He made statements at that time as to his activities and income in the teeth of a warning that he would be given no immunity. And when he sought that protection yesterday he found the government coldly facing him with his own words.

The attorney through whom Capone made the statements which his trial attorneys now admit are "most damning" was Lawrence P. Mattingly of Washington, D. C.

Admits $266,000 Income.

On Sept. 20, 1930, according to the testimony of Louis H. Wilson, internal revenue agent in Chicago in charge of frauds, Mattingly, who had a power of attorney from Capone, gave Wilson a letter in which he admitted an income of $266,000 for Capone over a six year period, as a basis of a tax compromise.

This letter, for the first time in Capone's career, puts something of his activities and connections into a court of record. Prior to 1925, the Capone attorney had written, Capone was earning only $75 a week. This was as an employé of Johnny Torrio. During the latter part of 1927 he formed an "organization" with three associates who were not named. The business of the organization was not mentioned, but the fact of ownership of a gambling house is already in evidence.

Possession of Wealth Bared.

During 1926 and thereafter until 1929, and presumably until the present, Capone, according to the statement made by his attorney on Sept. 20, 1930, had considerable sums of money, "by right of possession." He kept no books and always carried his money on his person. The "organization" supplied him with bodyguards. During 1928 and 1929 the profits of the organization were split in this way—one-third to a group of regular employés and one-sixth each to Capone and his three associates. Capone was frequently indebted to his associates, it was stated, in sums as high as $75,000.

Attorney's Figures on Income.

And this was the paragraph in the Mattingly letter which may form the crux of the case and send Capone to the penitentiary:

"Notwithstanding that two of the taxpayer's associates from whom I have sought information with respect to the taxpayer's (Capone's) income insisted that his income never exceeded $50,000 in any one year, I am of the opinion that his taxable income for the years 1925 and 1926 might fairly be fixed at not to exceed $26,000 and $40,000 respectively, and for the years 1928 and 1929 not to exceed $100,000 per year."

And that statement was made by Capone's lawyer, Mattingly.

Assistant United States Attorney Samuel G. Clawson, who presented this line of evidence, evidently does not think this is all the money Capone had, for during the course of his argument in support of admission of his letter he referred to Capone as "this man who has handled millions." All the government has to prove is that Capone had a taxable income of $5,000 a year.

Assailed by Capone Counsel.

Mr. Mattingly's efforts as a compromise attorney were bitterly attacked by Mr. Fink and Mr. Ahern. They declared he had exceeded his authority and did not know what he was talking about and that Capone

LEGAL TANGLE HOLDS UP DEFRERE-BURKE WEDDING PROGRAM

New York, Oct. 8.—(AP)—Refused a marriage license here and at Newark, N. J., Desire Defrere and Mrs. Hilda Hopkins Burke of the Chicago Civic Opera company tonight were seeking a state whose laws would permit them t wed at once.

Defrere arrived on the liner Paris this morning. He and Mrs. Burke planned to be married at once. Officials at the marriage license bureau, though sympathetic, said Mrs. Burke's former husband, who lives in Baltimore, was not served when she obtained a divorce in Illinois.

As a result the license could not be issued. The couple sped to Newark. City Clerk Peter J. O'Toole Jr., equally sympathetic, said the New Jersey law required a lapse of three days after application for a license.

Mrs. Burke won her divorce recently after a two year legal fight.

Defrere, a baritone, is stage director of the Chicago company.

Preston Dies In Chair for Girl's Murder

John E. Preston, 34 years old, convicted by a Du Page county jury nearly two years ago of the murder of Miss Agnes Johnston, died in the electric chair at the old Joliet penitentiary at 5:18 o'clock this morning.

He had given up hope of further delay in the carrying out of the death sentence early yesterday afternoon. One of the prison chaplains, the Rev. Eligius Weir, who marched to the death chamber with the convicted man, said that Preston was calm and ready to meet his fate.

The last visitors were his wife and his sister, Miss Irene Preston, who went to the prison soon after midday. His sister announced as she left that she was coming to Chicago to ask Gov. Emmerson for a reprieve. At the Stevens hotel late last night the governor asserted that he had not been approached with any request.

Attorney Gives Up Fight.

Attorney Eugene McGarry, who had represented Preston in his long fight to escape the death penalty, said that everything possible had been done to save him, but that there had been no chance to do anything more yesterday.

The electrocution was the first of a white man in the old Joliet penitentiary. Several Negroes have been electrocuted there. Warden Henry C. Hill, although delaying in carrying out the sentence until daylight, had let the prisoners believe Preston had died soon after midnight, as there is usually a spirit of unrest among the inmates while awaiting such events.

Crime for which He Paid.

Preston's trial was held at Wheaton in December, 1929. Testimony showed that on Oct. 12 of that year he attacked and strangled Miss Johnston, a 26 year old Chicago stenographer, near West Chicago. A plea of insanity on his behalf was disregarded by the jury and the death penalty imposed.

There had since been three trials of Preston's sanity. In the first he was found insane, a verdict which was set aside on the ground that it was not in accord with the evidence. A second hearing was before a jury composed of seven women and five men. He was found sane, but juries composed in part of women were held illegal and a third trial was held.

Again the verdict stated that Preston was sane. The higher courts upheld it.

Baby Dies After Taking Swallow of Whisky

Buffalo, N. Y., Oct. 8.—[Special.]—Claude Theus Jr., aged 2, Negro, snatched a bottle of whisky from a chair as his mother was bathing him today in their home and took a swallow before his mother could stop him. He was rushed to a hospital for treatment but died.

STOCKS LEAP AHEAD IN A FURTHER SHOW OF NEW CONFIDENCE

New York, Oct. 8.—[Special.]—Stock prices spurted ahead $1 to $7 a share for leading issues on the New York Stock exchange today as confidence returned to Wall street. Volume of trading mounted above the preceding session and the total turnover was 2,900,000 shares. Activity increased as prices rose and nearly 1,000,000 shares changed hands in the final hour.

Among the key stocks United States Steel closed at 78⅞ for a gain of 5⅛, American Telephone at 137¾ was up 7¾. New York Central at 59⅝ was up 6⅝.

A feature of the day was the rise in Auburn, always a volatile issue, which closed at 119 for a gain of 22 points.

All groups of stocks shared in the gains today, with rails and local traction issues showing particular strength.

Bond prices, which had benefited largely from the announcement of the Hoover plan, continued to show strength, although subject to irregularity in certain sections of the list.

The weekly report on brokers' loans showed a decline of $171,000,000 to a new low record of $1,001,000,000.

'Mushroom' Poisoning Puts Family of 5 in Hospital

Six persons suffering from poisoning after eating supposed mushrooms were taken to the county hospital last night. Five of them, members of one family, were Mrs. Anna Ciangi of 824 South Damen avenue and her children, Philip, 23 years old; Frances, 20; Frank, 18, and Susan, 3. Mrs. Ciangi and the child later went home. The sixth sufferer was Mrs. Sophie Matusak, 39 years old, of 1950 West 21st place. Her poisoning was not connected with that of the Ciangis.

U. S. Dusts Off Royal Carpet for Laval Visit

By GENEVIEVE FORBES HERRICK.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Oct. 8.—[Special.]—When Premier Pierre Laval, an informal, folksy sort of gentleman, they say, arrives in the capital of our democracy the 22d of this month he will step onto a red carpet leading him through such elaborate ceremony, such rich ritual, that he may wonder if such a homespun fellow as Daniel Boone ever lived in this country.

For official Washington is preparing to give him the works, socially speaking. And if the visiting Frenchman wants to steal away and buy a cigar, or take a picture of the Washington monument, he is going to have a dickens of a time explaining such plebeian pursuits to the state department courtiers in charge of the fiesta.

Etiquette, under the direction of Warren Delano Robbins, ceremonials officer of the state department, is to go, quite literally, by clock work. Pretty nearly every bow is to be timed ahead of time. And every official person is to be ranked, and woe betide the impetuous congressman who rushes in out of turn to shake hands with the prime minister.

First Bill of Particulars.

Today the state department issued its first bill of particulars for the visit. More will come later. Today's document begins in New York because that is where the Ile de France lands. It deals briefly with the Manhattan ceremonies and gets M. Laval on to a Washington train quickly.

At 4:15 on the afternoon of October 22, the royal red carpet will be waiting to be trod upon at the Union station here. State department representatives, President Hoover's aides and the French embassy staff, all in definite line and all in cutaways and silk hats, will make ready to bow, as Premier Laval steps off the train, accompanied by French Ambassador Claudel. Thence by motor to the Washington home of Walter E. Edge, our ambassador to France.

Once here, the traveler cannot settle down comfortably for a three days' occupancy of his room. Not a bit of it. He's to sleep in a different bed every night.

Day and Night of Hurry.

But this first night, he hurries out to the White House at 6, to make his official call; then hurries back to change his clothes and then hurries back to the White House to an official dinner, then hurries back to Edge mansion for his night's sleep.

Friday his day starts with a visit to the tomb of the Unknown Soldier; ends with an informal dinner at the White House. But some time during the afternoon somebody will have to pack up his bags and tote them to the White House, for he is booked to spend Friday night there.

Saturday, the state department has decreed, he has to try out a bed at Woodley, the handsome estate of Secretary of State Stimson. Shortly after his luncheon date with Secretary of the Treasury Mellon the prime minister will be escorted to Woodley.

For Sunday morning the state department has planned this: "Rest and informal talks at Woodley."

Honor Guest at Garden Party.

In the afternoon he will be guest of honor at a gala garden party given by the Stimsons. From this sanctuary he will shake hands with the guests. These guests will include the heads of all the diplomatic missions.

Once more there will be packing of luggage. This time it goes back to its starting point, for the state department has routed him in a circle and he is to spend Sunday night back at the Edge home.

From the Stimson garden party, the French tourist goes to the French embassy for dinner and then home and to bed, in an Edge bed. He leaves Washington Tuesday morning.

This visit is the first one at which Mr. Robbins, ceremonial officer of the new protocol department, will serve.

BILLION CREDIT CORPORATION IS NOW COMPLETE

U. S. Agencies May Add 2 Billion.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Oct. 8.—[Special.]—The Hoover program for bringing back national prosperity through rehabilitation of the weaker links in the country's banking and industrial structure got off to a flying start tonight with the organization of a billion dollar bankers' pool designed to thaw out credits frozen by the depression.

SECRETARY MELLON. [Acme Photo.]

Word that the organization had been formed reached President Hoover by telephone from New York within a few moments after Mortimer N. Buckner, president of the New York clearing house, had announced that the pool had been completed and that articles of incorporation would be filed tomorrow in Dover, Del.

The new emergency banking organization will be known as the National Credit corporation and its principal purpose will be that of supplementing the reserve bank system by discounting banking and real estate assets not now eligible for discount by the reserve banks.

Two Billion More Possible.

As the bankers went ahead with their plans to aid weaker banks, administration officials began preparation of plans for carrying out the balance of the emergency program for financial rehabilitation of the nation's credit structure. Indications tonight are that in event congressional approval is obtained, federal organizations will be set up which will increase the funds available for depression relief by perhaps as much as two billions.

It was disclosed today that the treasury is considering a recommendation to congress for the creation within the federal reserve system of a revolving credit fund might reach as much as 500 millions. This would be utilized for the advancing of money to suspended banks for immediate payment to depositors, thus forestalling suffering on the part of banks' customers.

Propose Big Revolving Fund.

The President also stands ready, it was said, to propose formation of a government body similar to the war finance corporation which would have a large revolving fund amounting to at least a billion dollars and perhaps a billion and a half. The fundamental purpose of this organization would be the furnishing of assistance to industry, railroads, and agriculture, as well as other parts of the business structure not helped by the private banking pool.

While the first goal of the backers of the pool formed in New York today will be the raising of a 500 million dollar revolving fund, the corporation, on the advice of Washington officials, was authorized to raise funds up to 1 billion dollars and that amount will be accepted if offered. In messages sent to Mr. Hoover, the bankers expressed confidence that the 500 million dollar fund will be over-subscribed.

Report Strain Lessening.

Commenting tonight, administration officials expressed confidence that the full resources to be raised by the bankers corporation never will be needed. Advices reaching the treasury department are to the effect that already a lessening of the strain on the banking system has been noted. The firm tone of the stock market today also brought renewed hope to the backers of the rehabilitation program.

The addition of another $60,000,000 to the federal land banks, doubling the subscription originally made when the banks were founded, also will be recommended to congress. A broadening of the rediscount authority of the reserve banks by making sound railroad, industrial and other bonds eligible also is to be recommended by the treasury, according to present plans.

War Debt Issue Raised.

But while the private bankers' part of the Hoover program went forward swiftly, other developments threatened to endanger those sections of the President's plan which require congressional action. New life was injected also into the war debt and reparations moratorium issue when tain senators who attended last Tuesday night's White House conference charged that President Hoover had attempted to persuade the congressmen to approve an extension of the war debts owed the United States without any proportionate extension of the payment of reparations by Germany by the allies.

The highest administration officials, however, immediately denied that President Hoover had sought to bind congressional leaders to support any plan for further postponement of war debt payments to the United States. It was pointed out that while the war debts and reparations are linked together in the moratorium, congress has nothing to do with the postponement of reparations, but deals only with the war debts.

Moratorium Not Up Now.

One high official asserted that while President Hoover intends to discuss international debts and reparations with Prime Minister Laval of France, this did not mean he was ready to grant an extension of the moratorium for any additional year or two after it expires next July. It was asserted that the time for a decision on the matter of extending the war debt and reparations moratorium had not arrived.

The inference to be drawn from this official's replies was that the President plans to withhold consent to any plan for extending war debt and reparation payment pending some sort of agreement on disarmament. The President is determined, it was said, not to accede to pressure either for postponement of the moratorium or war debt revision before the major military and naval powers have agreed to cut down their armaments.

Raise Discount Rate.

Other developments of a crowded day included the granting of consent to the New York federal reserve bank to raise its discount rate and the disclosure that President Hoover arranged for the formation of the private banking pool at a secret meeting with New York bankers at the home of Secretary of the Treasury Mellon last Sunday night.

An abnormally high circulation of money during a depression period was disclosed by the treasury today, money in circulation increasing 193 millions during September. This high rate reflected, it was said, a probable vast hoarding of money by individuals said to run from 800 millions to 1 billion dollars, largely due to lack of confidence in banks in certain areas.

It was asserted in this connection that the new White House program was formulated to build up public confidence.

Watson Praises Program.

For the three banking proposals—to broaden the federal reserve act, increase the capitalization of the federal land banks, and possibly form a huge government credit corporation—which the conference approved "in principle," there was continued approbation from many members of congress today.

"Judging from the many communications I have received, the results of the conference are most satisfactory," said Senator James E. Watson of Indiana, majority leader of the senate. "People generally regard it, that before winter is over the measures proposed will greatly aid in relieving unemployment and will bring benefits to the farmers.

"The proposition substantially agreed on ought also to aid legitimate banking and in that way result beneficially in bolstering both lenders and depositors."

Senator Joe T. Robinson of Arkansas, minority leader, stated:

"Having reference to the proposal that a 500 million dollar fund be provided by the banks for the strengthening and maintenance of credit and the prudent expansion of paper eligible for discount at the federal reserve banks, it seems clear that these arrangements should prove helpful and of permanent advantage."

Senator Robinson wished, however, contrary to the desire of the administration, to assemble congress in special session.

Opposition Predicted.

Despite these expressions of approval there were still many signs that there would be opposition to the President's program and there were many prophecies that the necessary legislation would not be passed without a struggle.

An effort to pass a large appropriation to be a revolving fund for a government finance corporation is almost sure to be met by a Democratic-radical demand for a like appropriation for more direct relief for the unemployed.

And any attempt to broaden the provisions of the federal reserve act as they deal with the eligibility of paper for rediscount is likely to meet opposition strong enough to defeat it.

Amendments to the national and federal reserve banking laws "to provide for more effective operation" will be presented to the senate soon after congress convenes, Senator Glass announced today.

Meets in November.

The subcommittee of the banking and currency committee of which Senator Glass is chairman will meet in November to prepare its recommendations.

In connection with the forthcoming recommendations Senator Glass held an unheralded conference yesterday in his office with Eugene Meyer, governor of the federal reserve board.

Senator Glass was unable, he said, to forecast the nature of the amendments the subcommittee will recommend, but he was positive the committee would recommend broadening of the eligibility provisions of the federal reserve law to include railroad and industrial bonds, such as Secretary Mellon is reported to favor.

Cites Past Experience.

"We had that proposition up when the federal reserve law was adopted and it was turned down," he said. "We included United States bonds among the eligible paper and they have been so dangerously used for stock gambling purposes that they are largely responsible for the present crisis. If railroad bonds are added to this great volume there will be no end to the facilities for speculation."

In his conference with Gov. Meyer, Glass cited these figures and enumerated other objections to widening the list of securities to be made available for rediscounting. He called attention to demands already being made upon him to include real estate loans. Other suggested eligible paper included municipal bonds, building and loan association securities and installment plan paper.

How Plan Originated.

The White House today, for the first time, made public some of the circumstances surrounding the working out of the agreement between the bankers and the administration for the formation of a banker's pool.

No mention was made, however, of the final arguments which resulted in the banks taking an action that in previous weeks they have been represented as opposing.

It was explained that the development of the program dates back to early in September since which time the President held conferences with different groups representing the government, bankers, agriculture, industry and members of congress. The details of the plan, it was explained, were determined on last Friday.

U. S. Agencies Participating.

The government agencies which participated in arranging the preliminaries were the federal reserve board, federal farm loan board and the treasury department. The banking community as it was termed, was brought into the picture through its agreement to undertake raising a "minimum" fund of 500 million dollars. When the details of the plans were adopted, it was necessary for the President to obtain assurances that his plans would be translated into legislative action and to that end he called a group of senators and representatives into conference at the White House Tuesday evening. It was said at the White House in order to make the plans successful it was necessary to have it wholly interlocked and interdependent in order to give assurance of confidence to the country.

The White House declined to furnish the names of the bankers who met in secret conference with President Hoover at Secretary Mellon's residence on Sunday night, but it is learned that they were Thomas W. Lamont, William C. Potter, George Whitney, Charles E. Mitchell, and Albert H. Wiggin. Gov. Harrison was in Washington on Sunday and it is supposed he attended the conference also, but this was not verified.

FRENCH BANKERS SAIL.

PARIS, Oct. 8.—(AP)—The Bank of France today sent two of its highest officials to the United States. They will study President Hoover's proposals to deal with the financial crisis and so prepare for Premier Laval's visit to the President in Washington. Meanwhile Lord Reading, British foreign secretary, completed his presentation of Britain's financial position to the premier and other French government chiefs. The foreign secretary said no understanding had been reached because "we do not know what will happen in the future."

The newspaper L'Information today stated that J. P. Morgan conferred with Gov. Clement Moret of the Bank of France and other leading financiers.

The officials sent by the Bank of France to study the Hoover proposals are Charles Farnier, assistant governor, and Robert Lacour-Gayet, who has served as the representative of the French treasury in the United States.

FRENCH NEWSPAPERS ASSAIL HOOVER PLAN; CALL IT "INFLATION"

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, Oct. 8.—The French today are pessimistic over the outcome of President Herbert Hoover's plan to form a bank pool. Paris financial circles, according to the semi-official Temps, see in his plan "an attempt at inflation of such a nature as to reduce the potential credit of America. Furthermore, it throws light on the relative acute embarrassment with which American banks have been seized."

L'Information says: "After reflection, the optimism with which the plan was welcomed yesterday has disappeared. Far from creating confidence, the latest gesture of President Hoover has definitely aggravated the prevailing distrust."

Liberte says: "America has launched a very imprudent policy of inflation," and points out that steps were exactly like that with the Germans before their crash in June.

Figaro says: "It is astonishing that anybody recommended as a remedy for a credit crisis the creation of new credits."

BANKERS START RAISING FUNDS FOR POOL TODAY

New York, Oct. 8.—[Special.]—The organization committee of New York bankers which was given the task of drawing up a general plan for a 500 million dollar institution to discount sound bank assets completed its work today.

The new organization, which is to be called the National Credit corporation, will be organized under the laws of Delaware with a nominal capital of $1,200, consisting of twelve shares of $100 par value stock. It will be authorized to issue up to one billion dollars of debentures, of which amount the banks of the country are expected to supply 500 million at once by the subscription of 2 per cent of their net time and demand deposits.

Rest Easily Available.

The remainder is to be raised from time to time, if necessary, by further banking subscriptions or by the sale of debentures to nonbanking interests.

The announcement of the plan was made by Mortimer N. Buckner, chairman of the New York Trust company and president of the New York Clearing House association, who is chairman of the organization committee.

The new organization is to file letters of incorporation in Dover, Del., tomorrow and it is expected that further details, including the personnel of the corporation, will be made public then.

The new corporation is to have the usual corporate officers of president, secretary, and treasurer and a board of 12 directors, one for each of the 12 federal reserve districts. Names of these officers and directors have not yet been decided upon.

It was reported in Wall street that Mr. Buckner would be asked to assume the presidency of the organization. The directors will be leading bankers from their districts, but not federal reserve officials.

The organization will operate through regional clearing houses or banking associations already existing or to be created in the various districts. Each director will be in charge of the particular federal reserve district in which he is located.

These groups, to be composed of banks subscribing to the corporation will each have its own loan committee, which is to pass upon requests for accommodation presented by its members and upon the character of the security offered.

May Exclude Outside Banks.

Although the plan does not directly say so, it is indicated the facilities of the corporation will be available only to banks joining the regional groups and subscribing to debentures of the organization.

In arranging loans the local loan committee of the regional organizations will forward the note of the borrowing bank, and the security pledged, together with a note for a like amount drawn by the regional group itself, to the home office of the corporation in New York.

In this way the members of the group assume liability for the borrowings of each other. Upon receiving the notes, the corporation will advance the necessary funds, to the group, which in turn will pay them over to the borrowing bank.

The liability of each member of the various groups in respect of the obligations of the group to which he belongs, will be in the proportion which his net deposits bears to the total net deposits of all members of the group.

Except under special circumstances, no group will be permitted to make loans in excess of the amount of its subscriptions to the debentures of the corporation. Thus each group will, in effect, provide the funds which are to be lent to its members, the net result being that the banks of the country are banding themselves together in mutual protection societies.

Provision is made, however, whereby a group may draw more heavily upon the funds of the corporation than the extent of its own subscriptions make possible. This will require the consent of a certain proportion of the members of the group, to be specified by the director of the district in which the group is located.

Plan Sent Out to Banks.

The general plan, made public by Mr. Buckner, is being sent out to 391 clearing house associations throughout the country, members of which are expected to subscribe.

The nominal character of the corporation's capital, $1,200, was made necessary by the provision of the national banking act which prohibits national banks from holding stocks. Funds for carrying out the purpose of the corporation had, therefore, to be subscribed in the form of debentures. The twelve shares of stock will, it is presumed, be held by the twelve directors of the corporation, giving them voting control of the company.

In operating the new corporation it is expected that a high rate, some bankers suggested a punitive rate, should be charged to borrowing banks. This rate will probably be fixed in relation to the rediscount rate of the Federal Reserve bank in which the borrowing bank is located. A rate of 2 per cent above the rediscount rate was suggested as likely.

The object in fixing a penalty rate for loans such as the new National Credit corporation will make is to discourage unnecessary use of the corporation's facilities. Banks should only come to the corporation for aid, bankers said, in time of real need. They should not be encouraged to feel that they can always "melt down" their frozen assets without difficulty at the new institution.

INDIA'S CHANCES FOR LIBERTY GO UP IN SMOKE

Gandhi Rows with Premier in "Humiliating" Day.

BY WILLIAM SHIRER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Oct. 8.—In the midst of angry wrangling by representatives of Indian minorities and an open split between Mahatma Gandhi, India nationalist leader, and Prime Minister MacDonald the minorities committee of the round table conference adjourned indefinitely today, admitted its failure to solve the racial problem, and put off, in the opinion of both Indian and British delegates, chances for India to obtain real self-government until the Greek kalends.

If British statesmen had hoped that the Indians would split up into warring factions long before even a semblance of self-government arose for discussion, they must be highly pleased tonight. For St. James's palace, where the round table conference is being held, never witnessed a more weird spectacle than today's meeting. Hindus, Moslems, Sikhs, "untouchables," and Christians fairly flew at each other's throats. Some even begged the British not to withdraw from India.

MacDonald Chides Indians.

And after Gandhi made a moving appeal to attempt to show his colleagues that such wrangling was absurd, "before we know what we are going to get from the British government," Prime Minister MacDonald, who presided, arose and, like a confident school master, chided the Indian leaders, including the "holy man," about their quarrels.

He told them frankly that Great Britain could not offer a thing until they had settled their own difficulties first. The mahatma complained again today that the round table delegates were not representative.

"We are not elected representatives," he said. "We are here by selection of the government. If we knew definitely we are going to get what we want, then we would think fifty times before we threw it away in sinful wrangling. The communal solution can only be the crown of a national constitution and not its foundation, if only because our differences now are hardened by reason of foreign domination. I have no shadow of a doubt that the iceberg of communal differences would melt under the warmth of the sun of freedom."

Premier Calls a Halt.

After other leaders had their say, including Dr. Ambedkar, clever Bombay lawyer, a representative of the "untouchables," whose savage attack on Gandhi brought protests from British and Indians alike, Mr. MacDonald called a halt. He refused Gandhi's motion that the committee adjourn sine die and scorned the mahatma's request that Britain show its hand.

"You know perfectly well the British government will not stand in the way of agreement," the prime minister said. "We are determined to make the round table conference a success."

Then he let out the bad news that the conference was only a consultative one after all, and so how could England offer anything definite, such as Gandhi requested.

"What did we promise you at the very beginning?" MacDonald smiled at the disappointed delegates. "We had only pledged that we would not make up our minds about the future of India until we had consulted you. Do you suggest that in the middle of the consultation we break off and produce proposals?"

Will Take Private Action.

And then he said threateningly:

"If the government produces its proposals, that is as near its last word as the circumstances allow. The British government wants to go on. It will take its action if you cannot, because we are determined to make such improvements in the government of India as will make it consistent with our ideas."

Gandhi and other Nationalists, who have been harping about independence, listened to Mr. MacDonald's remarks dejectedly. The mahatma told friends it was the most humiliating day of his life.

Reporting the failure of negotiations to settle the racial quarrel to the committee, he described "my deep sorrow and deeper humiliation. My failure does not mean my utter defeat, for there is no such word in my dictionary."

He sat visibly moved as Dr. Ambedkar, who later lunched with the prime minister at 10 Downing street, heaped insults upon him in a bitter speech. Angry delegates protested when Dr. Ambedkar accused the "holy man" of being guilty of a breach of promise and called him "irresponsible with his many false claims."

Gandhi Turns Other Cheek.

Gandhi turned the other cheek.

"Thank you, sir," he beamed.

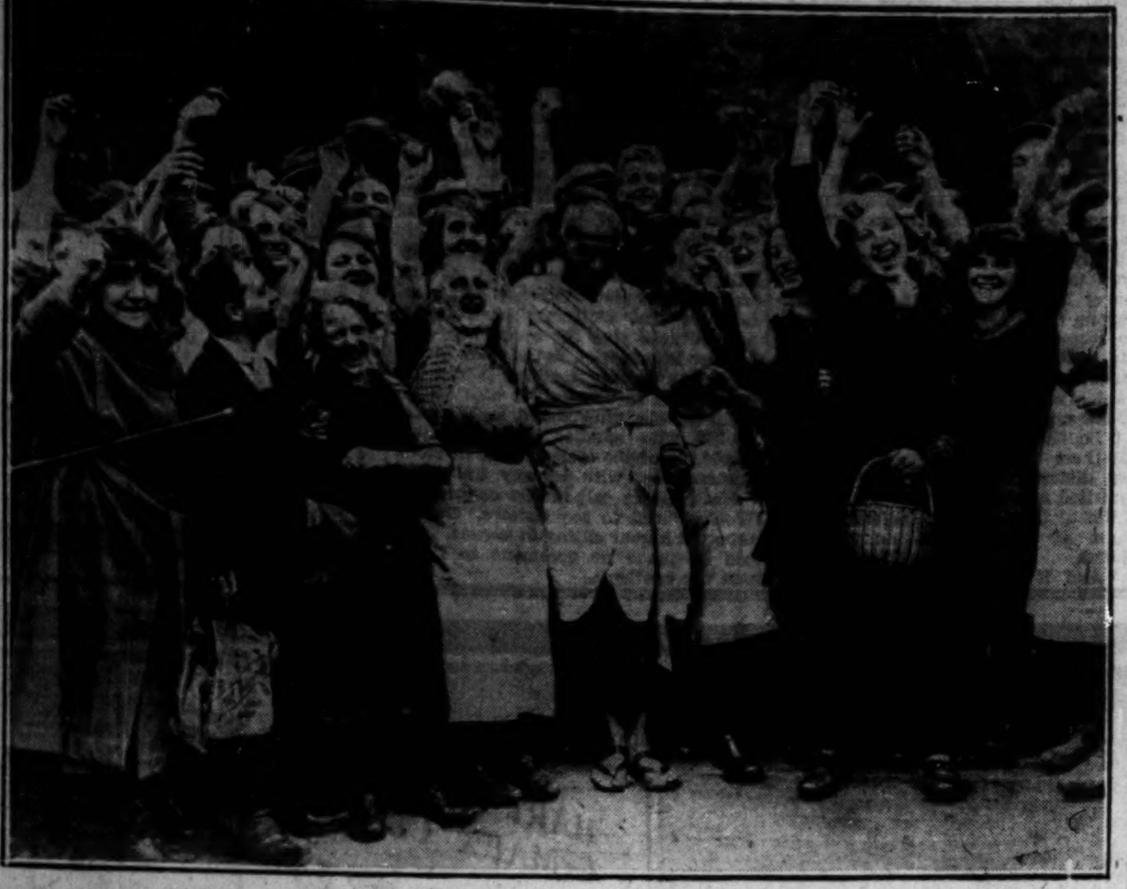
This ruffled Dr. Ambedkar for a second, but it gave him another thought, for he thereupon launched a stirring appeal for the British to remain in India.

"We don't want an immediate transfer of power from the British to the Indian people," he thundered as Mr. MacDonald and other British delegates smiled approval. "But if Britain is unable to resist the Indian forces which want power, then we want guarantees."

Mr. MacDonald, before adjourning the meeting, put it to Gandhi that if Britain forced a constitution upon India before a communal accord is reached, "our friend, Mahatma Gandhi, would probably at once start some method of passive resistance."

Gandhi remained silent.

Gandhi Visits Poverty Stricken Mill Workers



Mahatma Gandhi, whose plea for independence for India appears to be of no avail, as he was greeted by poverty stricken workers at Greenfield cotton mill at Darwin, Lancashire, while on inspection tour. Gandhi expressed sympathy for the workers, but told them their troubles did not compare with those of his people.

AN AUCTIONEER TALKS FAST AND OUTWITS ROBBERS

Auctioneer Paul Ginsberg, 5127 North Christiana avenue, presided yesterday afternoon at the sale of the Rosenthal Lumber company's stock in the company yard at 1308 North Halsted street.

After the selling was over it was found that about $6,500 in cash had been taken in. Mr. Ginsberg, his assistant, Jack Schwartz, and Hyman Rosenthal, with several of the buyers, were gathered in the office early in the evening. In a little room at one side Mr. Ginsberg was talking with a friend on the telephone when the front door swung open and three masked men with pistols walked in.

Mr. Ginsberg thought fast and talked faster. He changed the subject and raised his voice.

"I tell you, Moe," he said. "It was a fine sale and we got a lot of cash money. We sent that money to you just about fifteen minutes ago and you ought to get it now any minute. And when you get it take it right over to the bank."

A robber stepped up and asked the auctioneer if this was correct; that the money was gone. Mr. Ginsberg assured him it was and the trio went away. A minute later Mrs. Ginsberg, with the whole $6,500, came in from a rear office.

KEGEL SAYS WIFE GAVE HIM POISON; ASKS A DIVORCE

Drug in Food, Ex-Health Chief Charges.

Dr. Arnold H. Kegel, former city health commissioner, yesterday filed suit for divorce in the Circuit court, charging that his wife, Mrs. Marie Sahlin Kegel, administered poison to him over a period of five years.

The alleged instances of poisoning began in 1926 when, according to the bill, Mrs. Kegel placed ground glass in her husband's food. On many later occasions, the bill asserts, she poured a powerful sleeping potion in drinks which she gave her husband. He did not learn of the acts, the bill recites, until Sept. 29 of this year.

Attorneys Withhold Details.

The action does not state how the discovery was made and Dr. Kegel's attorneys, Harry Olson, former chief justice of the Municipal court, and his son, Sanford, refused to disclose the details. They said, however, that the physician's suspicions had been aroused by his continued ill health. After he made a brief investigation, they said, he learned of the poisoning attempts through servants.

Three days afterward, the attorneys said, Dr. Kegel questioned his wife in their home at 429 Briar place, over a period of eight hours. She stoutly denied his accusations, but, upon advice of his counsel, the former health commissioner ordered his wife to pack her belongings and installed her in a hotel. At the present time Mrs. Kegel is residing with relatives.

The Kegels were divorced secretly in September, 1930, but a reconciliation was effected before the news became public. They went before City Judge Craig Hood of Chicago Heights who had granted Mrs. Kegel a decree on grounds of cruelty, and had the decree set aside.

In the bill filed yesterday Dr. Kegel said that they were married on Aug. 16, 1924. On Oct. 15, 1926, he charged, his wife attempted to poison him by placing ground glass in his food. Over a period of several years after that according to the bill, she continued to use the sleeping drug in an effort to poison him.

As at the time of their first divorce, Dr. Kegel asks the custody of his adopted son, Robert, 4 years old.

MOVE TO MERGE 12 BIG AMERICAN AND FOREIGN SHIP LINES

New York, Oct. 8.—(AP)—The Herald Tribune says steps to organize a merger of twelve American and foreign shipping companies, owning and controlling 181 passenger and cargo liners, with a total of 1,500,000 gross tons, were taken at a meeting today in San Francisco.

The meeting, the newspaper says, was attended by Herbert Fleischhacker, Pacific coast banker; Capt. Robert Dollar, R. Stanley Dollar, Kermit Roosevelt, and John M. Franklin.

They considered a union of the shipping properties of the Roosevelt-International Mercantile Marine, Dollar, Chapman, and Dawson interests.

The merger, if concluded, the paper adds, would be the biggest in the history of American shipping. It would bring under one head companies operating from Atlantic and Pacific coast ports of the United States to Europe, the orient, around the world, and in the intercoastal trades.

WOLF SENTENCED TO 10 TO 100 YRS. FOR BANK THEFTS

Judge Fisher Imposes the Maximum Penalty.

JUDGE FISHER.

Walter F. Wolf, who embezzled $3,666,929 from the Continental Illinois Bank and Trust company, must serve from ten to one hundred years in prison for his crime.

Chief Justice Harry M. Fisher of the Criminal court pronounced sentence yesterday after a review of the case. The judge declared that Wolf, by leading a life of crime for 12 years, during which he never was moved to confess his peculations until he learned that auditors were examining his accounts, had forfeited any claim to leniency.

Accordingly Judge Fisher sentenced Wolf on each of ten indictments, covering $1,047,000 of the securities which he abstracted while manager of the coupon department of the bank, and used for disastrous stock and grain speculations. The judge directed that the ten sentences of one to ten years each be served consecutively and not concurrently.

Has Interview with Judge.

From Judge Fisher's remarks, an interview which he had with Wolf in chambers just before the judge passed sentence did the defendant no good. Wolf, from the judge's later summary of the case, apparently quoted scripture freely, without convincing Judge Fisher that the texts which he cited had ever influenced his conduct during his long career as one of the greatest single embezzlers in American banking history.

After his interview with the judge, Wolf waited half an hour in an anteroom, guarded by bailiffs, before sentence was pronounced. He sat tilted back in a chair, his hands locked behind his head. No one spoke to him.

The courtroom was crowded. There was a bustle and craning of necks as Judge Fisher took the bench and Wolf was led before him, but thereafter the proceedings went forward in a dead quiet. Judge Fisher asked first if the defendant had anything to say before sentence was pronounced. Attorney Martin Gorski replied for his client that he had not, but might wish to say something afterward. The judge turned an inquiring gaze to Wolf himself. The embezzler swallowed hard.

"No," he said.

Directed to Sit Down.

He stood with his arms folded. The judge directed him to be seated. Wolf sat down at the counsel table directly across from State's Attorney Swanson. He sat tense, supporting his chin in his palm.

Judge Fisher began a summary of the facts. The defendant, Walter F. Wolf, 42 years old, had been an employé of the Continental Illinois Bank and Trust company and its predecessors for twenty-odd years. He was in charge of the department where securities were deposited by the bank's customers for collection.

By a process devised by himself to escape detection he took securities of a total value of $3,666,929 and deposited them with brokers as collateral for his speculations. He had pleaded guilty to the ten charges of embezzlement. The law, Judge Fisher said, provides the fixed penalty of one to ten years' imprisonment for each charge of embezzlement.

"The question the court is called upon to determine is whether the sentences imposed shall run consecutively or concurrently," Judge Fisher said.

Wolf Sits Bolt Upright.

Wolf sat bolt upright at that. His one hope, his one plea to prosecutors had been that the ten sentences might run concurrently. In that case he would have been eligible to parole in eleven months, would surely have left prison at the end of ten years.

"This court," Judge Fisher said, "by its training and experience, does not believe that in the average case great good is done society by extremely harsh sentences."

Wolf smiled, as if in agreement with the judge. He still hoped for concurrent sentences. His smile was wiped away in a moment.

"But cases do come before the court," the judge continued, "which, because of their startling nature, create considerable sensation in the community; the character of a crime, and at times even the character of the individual, become known and a community's interest is aroused. And there the action of the court may have a definite social value; the nature of the penalty may act as a deterrent.

"Forfeits Right to Consideration."

"One thing this court has concluded without difficulty, and that is that the defendant in this case has forfeited any right to consideration and cannot be in a position to complain, no matter what the penalty imposed may be, provided it is within the law.

"For twelve years this defendant has continuously and continually carried on his criminal operations. During this time he has not only violated the laws that definitely prohibit this conduct, but he has violated every moral law; violated the confidence that was reposed in him by his employers; he has failed to give consideration to the duties that he owed his wife and daughters.

"In his conversation with the court he has constantly called upon his God, in whom he seems to have faith, and yet for twelve years he has daily and hourly violated even his obligations there. He assumes a sanctimonious mien and yet succeeded in holding under cover for twelve years the operations that mark him today the arch embezzler in annals of criminology in this country.

"He has failed to suggest a single thing that might appeal to the sympathy, to give any reason that might appeal to the mind of this court. But more than even the things I have suggested, this fact stands out boldly: this man who claims to fear God never found an inspiration in his religious teachings during twelve years to cause him to repent and confess. Not until he discovered that the suspicions of the auditors of the bank were aroused did he finally speak up.

"So that from a consideration of all these things, the court has without difficulty concluded that he has forfeited any right ever again to lead a life of freedom, and forfeited every right of consideration as an individual.

"And if the penalty I am about to impose is severe, he might have this to remember: that already he has lived a life of crime for twelve years. He might expect that the years of repentance ought to be much longer. The court is going to sentence on each of the indictments and the order will be that he serve them consecutively."

Wolf said nothing. Attorney Gorski made a further plea for leniency, but received only a compliment from the court for counsel's conduct in the case. Wolf was hurried from the room by bailiffs. He walked swiftly, like an automaton. His pale cheeks were even paler than when he had entered.

His mittimus to the penitentiary will be stayed for ten days, at the request of State's Attorney Swanson, in order that Wolf may have an opportunity to give the authorities any further information not already given. Wolf has already testified before the grand jury in connection with an indictment charging David D. Weiss, a broker who handled approximately $1,000,000 of the stolen funds in stock transactions, with larceny by bailee.

Back in his cell in the county jail Wolf refused to see visitors. Guards reported him as sitting in silence. They said he made no comment to them upon the sentence.

McERLANE MYSTERY AUTO DER OF 'WIFE'

Satisfied Gangster Killed Woman.

CRIMINAL COURT.

[illegible], robbery, sentenced to 1 year to life in Pontiac reformatory; Peter [illegible], burglary, sentenced to 1 year to life in Pontiac reformatory by Judge [illegible] Fred Rush.

[illegible] Jasik, Walter Boksa, and [illegible] Panchuler, larceny, sentenced to 1 year each in the Bridewell by Judge [illegible] T. Stanton.

[illegible] Wolf, embezzlement, sentenced to 1 to 10 years in the penitentiary on each of 10 charges by Judge [illegible] Fisher.

[illegible], murder, sentenced to [illegible] years in the penitentiary by Judge [illegible].

[illegible] McErlane, the swashbuckler gangster, was hunted last night as the murderer of his common law wife, [illegible] Miller. Her body, pierced by four bullets, was found yesterday in the rear seat of McErlane's sedan in front of 8129 Phillips avenue. The bodies of two dogs, also shot to death, lay beside her.

The killing of the dogs convinced police that McErlane was the slayer. They had at first theorized that the woman had been killed while with McErlane and that the gangster himself had been "taken for a ride."

Typical, Declare Police.

But the wanton slaying of the animals was typical of McErlane, police said. In the last year his mind has yielded to the strain of continuous drinking. Last June he stood at a south side corner and swept the street with machine gun bullets as he repelled an imaginary attack. He was just the man to shoot a woman [illegible] and then continue his shooting at the dogs in a drunken fury, the police declared.

There was no one in the gangster's home at 7753 Bennett avenue. A jug of [illegible] and glasses indicated a drinking party. In a closet was an arsenal of automatic rifles, pistols, machine guns and revolvers. McErlane was "gun crazy" and sometimes carried as many as three pistols, the police said.

[illegible] Roche, special investigator for the state's attorney, last evening arrested Vincent McErlane, brother of Frank, in his home at 7820 Winchester avenue. Vincent said he had last seen his brother at a drinking party Tuesday night. The Miller woman had been present and apparently was in friendly relations with Frank, he said.

Police Go to Pal's Home.

Roche also went to the home of [illegible] Kaufman, notorious police character, and known as McErlane's bosom pal. Five children in the Kaufman home at 8068 South Honore street said their father had left early in the morning. Mrs. Kaufman, returning later, said she hadn't seen her husband for two weeks. Roche and his men found an automatic rifle and a revolver in the home.

McErlane's wife shot him in the leg early in 1930 during a drunken quarrel. He went to a hospital and she later made peace with him. The Miller woman of 35 years was frequently with McErlane on his drunken tours of the south side where his power as a beer boss has been waning.

Reconstructing the scene of the killing, police decided that the Miller woman had produced a pistol and fired one shot at McErlane He then wrested the gun from her and killed her and the dogs. The gun which fired the bullets was the same one with which the Miller woman had wounded McErlane in 1930, and a shot through the window was believed to be the one she fired before the gun was taken from her.

The shooting probably took place Wednesday evening and at some place distant from the spot where the car was found. McErlane, it was thought, drove the car with the bodies in it and abandoned it in Phillips avenue, which is sparsely settled at that point.

McErlane Seen in Drug Store.

Mrs. Eunice Farmer, 8129 Phillips avenue, in front of whose home the sedan was discovered, told police that the car drove up in front at 10:30 o'clock Wednesday night. When it was noticed still standing in the street next morning, the body was discovered.

At 11 o'clock McErlane entered a drug store at 1859 East 79th street, where he was known to the clerk. He drank four cups of coffee hastily. He had been drinking, the clerk said.

McErlane has had a 20 year career as a criminal in Chicago. He began in 1911 as an automobile thief.

He participated in one of the most sensational jail breaks in the history of Cook county, served portions of two terms in Joliet penitentiary, was tried for murder in Indiana and arose in 1926 to be leader of the city's most powerful beer running combine, in partnership with Joe Saltis.

Probably the most spectacular attempted killing in the history of gangland had McErlane as its central figure. As he lay in bed in the German Deaconess hospital, with several bullets in his body, three men marched into his room and opened fire upon him. McErlane, prepared for an emergency, pulled pistols from underneath his pillow and routed the invaders.

BROKER ROBBED BY WOMAN.

A blond woman bandit, armed with a revolver, robbed Wesley Delaney, a broker, near his home at 4551 Malden avenue of $28 and a check for $26 early yesterday.

40,000 FASCIST YOUTHS REPEAT 'MARCH ON ROME'

Reviewed by Mussolini in Huge Parade.

BY DAVID DARRAH.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ROME, Oct. 8.—Fascism today duplicated its march on Rome of nine years ago with fireworks by night and fanfare by day. Forty thousand youths, members of the new organization of "young Fascists," boys between the ages of 18 and 21, which was created a year ago, have for the last week been converging on Rome in uniforms and camp equipment, by motorcycles, trucks, and bicycles, just as the black shirt revolutionists did in 1922.

Today all 40,000 of them were marshaled in the parade grounds where they were reviewed by Premier Mussolini, who was on horseback wearing the uniform of a commanding general of the Fascist militia. Il Duce usually wears a corporal's uniform.

Cabinet on Horseback.

The premier in his cavalcade had nearly all his ministers, who were also in uniform and mounted, in line. In the reviewing stands were military attachés of many embassies in Rome.

Premier Mussolini addressed his young recruits in a short Napoleonic speech, in which he said:

"Young Fascists, you merit my eulogies. I call you fighting Fascists. Therefore, you must never fear to fight. The Fascist revolution is surrounded by many enemies and you will fight them, therefore, without truce for the glory of the king and the power of the country."

Predicts Fascist Century.

Premier Mussolini also wrote an article for the young Fascists in the newspapers in which he exhorted them to be ardent and impetuous, "alien to prudent calculations and to calculating prudence."

He also declared that this is going to be a Fascist century.

"It is yours," he told the young Fascists.

Girl, 23, Wins Highest Decoration in Russia

MOSCOW, Oct. 8.—(AP)—A young woman, Lydia Kovarski, 23 years old, today was awarded the decoration of the Lenin order, highest within the government's gift, by the soviet government for her work in training instructors in soviet knitting factories. Miss Kovarski is the director of a technical school with 1,500 students. She is the youngest civilian to have received the award.

CAPONE INCOME BARED BY U. S. IN TAX TRIAL

Defense Loses Battle to Bar Story of Riches.

could not be bound by it. The court, however, said that the evidence would go in, although he asked the attorneys to defer reading of this letter to the jury at this time. It was read in court during the arguments of counsel, while the jury was not present.

Mr. Fink once referred to the letter as one that might send his client to the penitentiary. And the court remarked:

"It might well do that—ultimately."

The defense attorneys are making a record for appeal now.

Mr. Ahern's passionate denunciation of Mattingly and defense of Capone reached this stage once:

"It is human nature to evade taxes. We had our Boston tea party—"

"And what is this?" asked the judge, leaning forward over his high bench. "Is this another Boston tea party?"

"No, I don't know what it is," said Mr. Ahern.

Traces Tax Negotiations.

In leading up to the all important "confession letter," the evidence of Mr. Wilson took the Capone tax negotiations from their opening in the spring of 1930, when the first letter was received from Mr. Mattingly. It was in this that the Washington attorney first informed the department that he had been retained by Capone to settle his income tax troubles.

"Mr. Capone has never filed any income tax returns," was one phrase of this letter to which the defense objected. The court took this under advisement.

On April 10, 1930, Mr. Wilson testified, he met Capone and Mattingly in his office in the federal building. A letter in which Capone gave Mattingly his power of attorney in this matter was read to the jury.

Failure to File Returns.

During the conversation, the witness said, Mattingly told the officials that Capone had not filed any returns for 1924 to 1929 and was willing to pay.

"Mattingly said that he was embarrassed by the fact that the information might be used in a criminal proceeding," Wilson testified. "I told him the office had nothing to do with that, and he said he would submit the figures."

On April 16 there was another conference, during which Mattingly told the revenue officials that he had consulted with Capone and associates and there were no records from which to take figures. He again mentioned that he was afraid the facts might be used criminally against Capone.

"I told him we could give him no immunity," said Mr. Wilson, "and he said he would bring Capone in."

It was arranged to bring the gang chief into the internal revenue office in the federal building at 8:45 o'clock the next morning by a side door, in order to avoid publicity.

Capone Meets Officials.

According to Mr. Wilson's testimony, Capone came in at the appointed time with two men, who took seats near the door and said nothing. Lawyer Mattingly was there; also C. W. Herrick, a United States revenue official, and another official. Notes of the conversation were made by a stenographer. This document was then read to the jury.

"I never had much of an income—a large income," Capone told the officials.

He would not go into any details of income, however, saying to every question on this point:

"I would rather let my lawyer answer."

According to the witness, Capone was hesitant about answering anything and did not reply to questions promptly, but hesitated and gestured to his lawyer to answer for him.

Box in Bank Revealed.

There was no answer to questions as to the source of his money. He denied that he had a deposit box, the witness said, although it was shown yesterday in this trial that he and Louis Le Cava rented a box together at the Pinkert State bank in Cicero on April 12, 1926, and surrendered it on Jan. 2, 1930. Capone was pointed out in court by Miss Helen Alexander, vault clerk, as the man who had signed the application.

Five months after the meeting of Capone and the lawyer and the internal revenue officials—on Sept. 19, 1930—Mattingly went to the office of Mr. Wilson and said that he had the data on Capone and would bring them in. The next day he came in again.

"He said he had done the best he could," testified Mr. Wilson. "He drew a two page letter and two carbons from his pocket and said Capone was willing to pay a tax on this basis."

Defense Move Fails.

It was here that the defense made a second effort to keep the letter out of the case, but the move failed.

Judge Wilkerson had previously indicated his attitude, stating that he was inclined to think that the weight of authority was in favor of admissibility.

Both Mr. Fink and Mr. Ahern argued and pleaded with the court and read decisions in favor of their contention that this sort of evidence could not be used against the defendant.

"It is an effort to send a man to the penitentiary on his lawyer's confession," said Mr. Fink.

Judge Answers Lawyer.

"It is not a confession," said the court. "It is an effort to show the government that he did not commit a crime. It is the same as an offer of return."

"Mattingly had no authority to do anything except effect a compromise," said Mr. Ahern. "This letter was beyond the scope of his authority."

"Any one who goes to the government and makes a statement does so at his peril," said the court. "You can't relieve liability to the grand jury and the federal law by going to a subordinate in the treasury office."

"He does not claim immunity," said Mr. Ahern. "He merely says this cannot be used against him. It is human nature to evade taxes. Mattingly's effort was to avoid incriminating the defendant, yet these declarations do incriminate him."

"The lawyer was employed to get a settlement with the treasury," said Mr. Fink. "He was to get Capone out of a criminal liability. And after the treasury officials had told him the statements he made would be used against him he went ahead and made statements which, if admitted into evidence, are most damning. I want to ask this lawyer why he did that. I want to cross-examine him."

Recalls Officials' Warning.

"He made these statements in the teeth of a warning," said the court.

"How can you explain that?" asked Mr. Fink. "Was the man crazy?"

The court undertook no explanation.

"The question is," Judge Wilkerson said, "whether after these facts go to the jury the jury will say that they are statements of the defendant. The court will control the reading of the statement when it comes to it."

MORNING SESSION IN DETAIL

Mattingly's entrance into the case was described by the first witness called by the government when court opened in the morning session. He was Attorney George G. Slentz of the internal revenue bureau at Washington. Questioned by Prosecutor Clawson, Slentz identified a document assigning power of attorney to Mattingly. The paper was signed "Alphonse Capone."

Attorneys Ahern and Fink objected and the court excluded the jurors to hear arguments, which were not concluded before the noon recess, the jurors being out all this time and the witness Slentz still on the stand. Mr. Clawson read the power of attorney and other documents the government wished to introduce, so that the court might consider their admissibility.

Reads Lawyer's Letter.

A letter of March 23, 1930, to Mr. Herrick, the internal revenue agent in charge at Chicago, and signed by Attorney Mattingly, "attorney in fact for Alphonse Capone," was read by Mr. Clawson as follows:

"Mr. Alphonse Capone, residing at 2135 South Michigan avenue, Chicago, Ill., has authorized me to make an exact computation of his income tax liability for the year 1929 and prior years, the amount of which he will pay as soon as determined. Mr. Capone has never filed income tax returns.

"I assure you of my fullest coöperation with any officer whom you may assign. Conferences before the income tax unit here on March 28 and April 2, and conferences in the office of the internal revenue agent in charge at Jacksonville, Fla., set down for April 4 and 11, and a hearing before the board of tax appeals set down for April 15, in all of which I am the representative of the taxpayer, makes it impractical for me to undertake the work requested of me by Mr. Capone prior to the week beginning April 21."

Upon concluding this letter, Mr. Clawson read a second one from Attorney Mattingly to Mr. Herrick, dated Sept. 20, 1930. [The letter is printed in full elsewhere on this page.]

Details of Interview.

After Mr. Clawson had read the second letter he read to Judge Wilkerson the text of a memorandum of an interview held in Mr. Herrick's office on April 17, 1930, the questions and answers having been taken by a stenographer. Capone and his attorney, Mattingly, were questioned at this interview. The memorandum follows:

MR. HERRICK—Now, Mr. Capone, just so we all understand the situation, you and Mr. Mattingly are here in an effort to clean up your income tax liability. I want to say this, in order that there may be no misunderstanding, that any statement you make here will naturally be the subject of such investigation and verification as we can make. That is, in the nature of income or anything of that sort. And I think it is only fair to you to say that any statements which are made here, which could be used against you, would probably be used. I want you to know your rights. Further than that, I have nothing to offer.

MR. MATTINGLY—In so far as Mr. Capone can answer any questions without admitting his liability to criminal action, he is here to coöperate with you and work with you. It isn't my purpose here, I don't feel that I can, in justice to my client, permit him to make any statement or admission that might subject him to criminal prosecution.

Mr. Herrick then began an examination of Capone:

Q.—What records have you of your income, Mr. Capone—do you keep any records? A.—No. I never did.

Q.—Any checking accounts? A.—No, sir.

Q.—Do you own any property in your own name? A.—No, sir. [Mr. Mattingly interposed at this point: "I doubt Mr. Capone's ability to give you an absolutely correct return or to give you information from which you could make a return with exactness."]

Q.—How long, Mr. Capone, have you enjoyed a large income? A.—I never had much of an income, a large income.

Q.—I will state it a little differently—an income that might be taxable? A.—I would rather let my lawyer answer that question.

"An Employé of Torrio."

MR. MATTINGLY—Well, I tell you, prior to 1926, John Torrio, who happens to be a client of mine, was the employer of Mr. Capone and up to that point it is my impression his income wasn't large. He was in the position of an employée, pure and simple. That is the information I get from Mr. Torrio and Mr. Capone.

Q.—[By Mr. Herrick]—Prior to 1926? At that rate, the years under consideration would be 1926, 1927, 1928, and 1929? A.—[By Capone]—That's it exactly.

Louis H. Wilson, an internal revenue agent in Mr. Herrick's office, then took up the examination of Capone:

Q.—For the years mentioned, did you sell any real estate? A.—No, sir.

Questioned About Property.

Q.—Did you furnish any money to purchase real estate which was placed in the name of others? A.—I would rather let my lawyer answer that question.

MR. MATTINGLY—Mr. Capone bought a piece of property at Miami, Fla., in the name of his wife, in the year 1928.

Q.—What was the purchase price of that property? A.—$10,000 cash, $30,000 mortgage.

Q.—What was the source of the money that you used to make your cash payment? A.—I would rather let my lawyer answer that question. [Mr. Mattingly objected.]

Q.—Was the source of the money of such a nature that it might constitute taxable income? A.—I would rather not answer that question.

Q.—Did you purchase any securities during the years under consideration? A.—No, I never had anything like that.

No Brokerage Accounts, He Says.

Q.—Did you have any brokerage accounts in your own name? A.—No.

Q.—Did you have any brokerage accounts under an assumed name? A.—No.

Q.—Did your wife or relatives have any brokerage accounts or did they purchase any securities? A.—I would rather not answer that question.

Q.—Are you interested in any way in the Roosevelt Securities company? A.—No.

Q.—Roosevelt Finance company? A.—No.

Q.—From time to time, Mr. Capone, we find that money has been transmitted to you from Florida and elsewhere, both in your own name and the names of others. Would you care to make any statement concerning this? A.—I would rather let my lawyer answer that question. (There was no answer.)

Capone Declines to Answer.

Q.—Do you care to give us any statement of your assets and liabilities at the present time? A.—My lawyer is taking care of all of that.

Q.—Do you own any race horses? A.—Not me, no.

Q.—You employed several attorneys during the years in question; have you any idea as to the fees you paid them? A.—I would rather let my lawyer answer that question.

Q.—(By W. C. Hodgins, another revenue agent)—Were you ever connected with the Hawthorne dog track? A.—I would rather let my lawyer answer that question.

This ended the reading of the memoranda before the judge.

THE AFTERNOON SESSION

Court was convened again at 2 p. m. and the arguments of the morning, bearing on the admissibility of the important documents were resumed. Mr. Fink continued his objections for the defense, citing federal cases wherein courts had held in his favor, according to his interpretation.

He referred to the "efforts in compromise" of Capone's income tax by Mr. Mattingly, the Washington lawyer, who dictated the important letter and was present at the interview his client had with Chicago revenue agents.

MR. FINK—I am in favor of the liberalizing of rules, and I will go as far, I think, as anybody in fighting down what is called 'technicalities of criminal law.' But, if your honor please, I am not prepared to go to the extent of letting a lawyer confess his client guilty, on the doctrine that it is within the scope of his authority.

THE COURT—Even though he had given his express authority to do it?

MR. FINK—Well, he can't do that even, Capone can't authorize me in writing, or in any other way, to come into this court and plead him guilty. He has got to do that himself. And that, in effect, is what this lawyer tried to do for him.

THE COURT—I am inclined to think that the weight of authority is in favor of the admissibility [of the evidence], as I have had opportunity to look into the cases during the noon hour. There are some cases in some of the southern jurisdictions, and perhaps others, Alabama, particularly, in which the court has declared that offers of that kind are not admissible against the defendant in criminal cases.

Judge Overrules Objection.

"However," the judge continued, "I know of no case, I do not even find any case which goes to the extent of holding that evidence which is otherwise admissible, as for instance, a statement of the defendant himself, or a statement of a certain party which is made in his presence, is to be rejected merely because it happens to be a fact which may tend to show an effort to effect a compromise. And so, as to the objection which was made to the question put to the witness, it will be overruled, and an exception may be noted."

Judge Wilkerson indicated that he would pass on the documents as they were offered, stating "I want to see the evidence leading up to it."

Attorney Slentz, still on the witness stand, under questioning by Prosecutor Clawson, then identified the power of attorney card on file in his office which authorized Mr. Mattingly to represent Capone.

The next witness, George R. Brown, was sworn, but the government dispensed with his testimony for the time being, and he was told to stand aside.

Girl Bank Clerk Testifies.

Miss Helen Alexander, 1712 South 49th avenue, Cicero, vault clerk in the Pinkert State bank, 4810 West 22d street, Cicero, was the next witness. She identified a contract for a safety deposit box signed by A. Capone and Louis La Vava. This was box 1635 and it was rented for the year beginning April 12, 1926. The surrender of the box was signed by Attorney Joseph Lustfield, who has represented various members of the Capone family in past years.

Q. [by Mr. Clawson]—By whom was the signature "A. Capone" placed on this contract. Miss Alexander pointed to Capone.

Q.—Your duties as vault clerk consisted of comparing signatures, did they not? A.—Yes.

Over the objections of Mr. Ahern, the witness then compared the signatures on the box contract and the power of attorney and pronounced them the same.

AGENT TAKES STAND

Mr. Wilson, who has been a Chicago internal revenue agent for 13 years, next took the stand. Wilson was the first witness at the trial to speak in tones audible as far as the press tables.

The witness, who is bald and stout, first identified a letter written by Mattingly to Mr. Herrick, the agent in charge of the Chicago revenue office, arranging for an interview for himself and his client. Clawson then read the power of attorney to the jury. The letter asking the interview was then read to the jury over defense objections. In it Mattingly admitted that Capone had filed no tax returns.

The government was asked, in this communication, to investigate and compute Capone's tax indebtedness, and Wilson testified that Mattingly told him on April 10, 1930, that Capone had paid no tax but was willing to pay.

"I told him," Wilson said, "that our office could give no immunity but offered to listen to anything he had to say. Mr. Mattingly then arranged to bring Capone in. On April 17 Mr. Mattingly came into the office and a little later Capone entered with two men I did not know."

Points Out Capone Evasions.

Prosecutor Clawson then read the stenographic transcript of this interview to the jury over defense objections. When this was completed Clawson directed Wilson's attention to Capone's answers in the interview, in which he evaded questions by referring the questioners to his lawyer.

Q.—When he said this what gesture did he make? A.—He waved at Mr. Mattingly.

Q.—Now, did you see Mr. Mattingly after that? A.—I did, on Sept. 19, 1930.

Q.—Who was present? A.—Revenue Agent Hodgins, Mr. Mattingly and myself. Mr. Mattingly said that he had consulted with Mr. Capone and his associates and had got some data and figures together and would bring them in.

The next day, Wilson testified, Mattingly returned. Herrick, Wilson, Hodgins and Mattingly retired to Wilson's private office.

Offers Tax Settlement.

MR. WILSON—Mr. Mattingly said it was difficult to get the facts and figures together. He took some papers from his inside coat pocket and while turning them over, he would look out of the window and talk very slowly, very deliberately. Finally he threw the paper over to me. He said, "This is the best we can do. Mr. Capone is willing to pay the tax on these figures."

MR. CLAWSON — Are these the papers? A.—They are.

Mr. Clawson offered the papers in evidence and although no objection arose at the moment, Judge Wilkerson excused the jury and the entire battery of lawyers moved to the railing in front of the bench. Mr. Fink began the colloquy with an allusion not quite clear, but which some supposed was a technical phrase in wrestling.

MR. FINK—This is the last toe. They have got him nailed to the cross now. This is just putting the last toe on him. I do not want to waive it but I think in justice to the defendant that your honor ought to overrule the objection to this matter and let the whole thing go in now, because there are some things in this letter that at least indicate the lawyer is crazy.

Judge Reads Letter.

Judge Wilkerson asked for the letter, adjusted his glasses and began to read it aloud. Mr. Fink flung one leg over the end of the table facing the bench and the other counsel retired to their seats.

THE COURT [looking up]—There are a lot of things in there that raise a question in my mind of the admissibility of that letter. It is perfectly clear, the law, with regard to that letter. Did Mattingly, under the scope of authority contained in the power of attorney, have authority to say all the things that are in that letter? He had authority to settle and adjust taxes. Had he authority to do anything more? And there is so much extraneous matter in that letter that you cannot separate it as far as the taxes.

At this point Mr. Clawson and Mr. Ahern began a side discussion as to the date of the Capone interview with the revenue agents, and in the midst of this Judge Wilkerson announced that it was not necessary to rule on the admissibility of the letter at that moment.

THE COURT—You may offer the letter and I will rule on it tomorrow morning.

Discusses Capone's Answers.

Instead of presenting other evidence, however, Mr. Clawson invited the court to listen to a further exposition of Mattingly's rights in acting for Capone and to Capone's answers in the interview when he said, in response to pertinent questions: "I will refer that to my lawyer."

Attorney Ahern arose at this point and approached Clawson.

"Counsel misses this point in that," Ahern said. "On April 16, 1930, when that conversation took place, anything incriminating that was asked of the defendant he referred to his lawyer, as much as to say, 'I don't know how to protect myself against a question like that; ask my lawyer about it.' And he added, 'My lawyer will answer that question.'"

Judge Wilkerson resumed reading the letter aloud and after progressing a paragraph, he raised his head and remarked to Clawson: "If this is admissible at all, it is admissible on the theory that it is in effect a statement of the defendant. Is that right?"

"That is right," Mr. Clawson replied.

Once more Judge Wilkerson turned to the letter and read through to the phrase, "the so-called bodyguards with which he is reputed to surround himself on occasion." Here the judge paused and frowned, indicating that this matter might be considered extraneous.

Offers to Omit Part.

Mr. Clawson then offered to present the letter in evidence with everything except statements bearing on Capone's income and its sources stricken out. But he pointed to the paragraph in which Mattingly offered to present his client whenever any of the revenue agents wished information from him. It was pointed out that Mattingly said "I shall be glad to work with Mr. Wilson, or any one you may designate, and give you information that he (Capone) has given me that he may not see fit to admit for the record."

"Of course he is trying to limit the legal effect of what he does," Prosecutor Clawson told the court. "He cannot do that."

"Capone is not willing to admit it," Attorney Ahern asserted. "In other words, it puts a limitation on him."

Prosecutor Clawson countered by saying that Capone could not give information on an "Indian basis"; that he couldn't say something and expect that it would not be used against him.

"He cannot stipulate what is to be used as evidence and what is not to be used as evidence," the prosecutor said.

At this juncture Judge Wilkerson interrupted what promised to be a spirited argument between Clawson and Ahern, for both had risen from their seats.

Judge Makes Explanation.

"There is a difference," the court explained, "between the admissibility of this document in a suit—say the United States were suing the defendant for a definite amount of tax—there is a difference between the admissibility of the document in that kind of suit and its admissibility in a suit of this kind, for the purpose of showing that the statement was made, not for the purpose of establishing the facts set forth in that statement, but the fact that this attorney brought in his statement after this interview in the office of the collector is a relevant fact in this case.

"And without reference to its being proof of the things that are therein stated, he went out with the knowledge of the defendant, with the understanding that he was to bring something back, and he brought something back. Whether this is proof of the things or thing there stated is one question; whether it is admissible as an act or thing is an entirely different question in a criminal case."

"In other words, your honor," Attorney Fink interposed, "you admit the letter and instruct the jury that the contents of the letter are no proof of the things——"

Rules to Admit Letter.

"Of the things there stated," the court replied. "But as far as being an act in this case, an act by the agent of the defendant, something done with his knowledge, is something to be considered in this case.

"My view is that it is admissible on that theory, and that its effect is something to be controlled by the character of the court's instructions to the jury after all the evidence is in. That will be the ruling of the court. The objection is overruled."

The jury was brought back into the courtroom, but Judge Wilkerson instructed Mr. Clawson to reserve the reading of the letter for the present. It is anticipated that it will be presented at the opening of court this morning. The defense did not choose to cross-examine Agent Wilson and court was adjourned for the day.

Capone Attorney's 'Confession Letter'

A letter written by Lawrence P. Mattingly of Washington, tax lawyer for Capone in 1930, was read yesterday in the Capone trial. It was addressed to C. W. Herrick, internal revenue agent in Chicago. The letter was read to the court, not before the jury, and is the central point in the evidence which Capone's lawyers fought so hard to exclude. The judge indicated he would admit it in evidence. The letter follows:

"Sir:

"The following statement is made without prejudice to the rights of the above mentioned taxpayer in any proceedings that may be instituted against him. The facts stated are upon information and belief only.

"The taxpayer is now 31 years old, and has continually lived with his wife since his marriage in 1917. He has one child, a son, now nearly 12 years old. Since 1922 he has been the principal support of his widowed mother and his sister and brother, now 19 and 21 years of age, respectively.

"Prior to the latter part of the year 1925 he was employed at a salary which at no time exceeded $75 per week. During the years 1926 to 1929, inclusive, he was the recipient of considerable sums of money, title to which vested in him by right of possession only.

On Division of Profits.

"Taxpayer became active as a principal with three associates at about the end of the year 1925. Because of the fact that he had no capital to invest in their various undertakings, his participation during the entire year 1926 and the greater part of 1927 was limited. During the years 1928 and 1929 the profits of the organization of which he was a member were divided as follows: One-third to a group of regular employés and one-sixth each to the taxpayer and three associates.

"The taxpayer was at no time the banker for the organization, nor did he ever actively participate in the conduct of its individual enterprises.

"The only attorneys employed by the taxpayer personally during this period were Nash & Ahern, Ben Epstein and Capt. Billy Waugh, all of Chicago, Ill. The so-called bodyguards with which he is reputed to surround himself on the occasion of infrequent appearances in public, were not, as a general rule, his personal employés, but were, in fact, employés of the organization which participated in its profits. Several of these employés stopped at the same hotel with the taxpayer while he was in Chicago.

About the Bodyguards.

"That a large force of bodyguards did not continually surround him is established by the fact that on the occasion of his arrest at Philadelphia in 1929 only one companion was with him.

"The furniture in the home occupied by the taxpayer while he was in Florida was acquired at a cost not in excess of $20,000. The house and grounds have been thoroughly appraised and the appraisal has been heretofore submitted to you. There is a mortgage against the house and grounds of $30,000. His indebtedness to his associates has rarely ever been less than $75,000 since 1927. It has frequently been much more.

"Notwithstanding that two of the taxpayer's associates from whom I have sought information with respect to the taxpayer's income insist that his income never exceeded $50,000 in any one year, I am of the opinion that his taxable income for the years 1925 and 1926 might fairly be fixed at not to exceed $26,000 and $40,000 respectively and for the years 1928 and 1929 not to exceed $100,000 per year."

DRY AGENTS SEIZE ONE OF 68 INDICTED WITH AL CAPONE

Eliot Ness, assistant chief of the special prohibition agents in Chicago, and two of his men seized Nick Juffra, alias Frank Ross, alias Joseph D'Angelo, alleged Capone lieutenant, as he left his home at 6906 Clyde avenue yesterday. Juffra is one of the sixty-eight men indicted with Al Capone on a charge of conspiracy to violate the prohibition law.

NICK JUFFRA.

Protesting his innocence, Juffra was taken to the federal building and locked up. "What's the idea?" Juffra demanded. "I've been going straight for the last eight years." It was eight years ago, the federal agents declared, that Juffra was seized in a raid on a Capone beer distributing plant. Ness said that Juffra was an associate of Joe Fusco, one of the higher-ups in the Capone syndicate.

RALPH CAPONE'S CHECK PUTS U. S. ON TRAIL OF AL

Gang Finances Traced by 25 Federal Agents.

The record of a check drawn by Ralph Capone on the Pinkert State bank of Cicero, discovered early in 1929 by Agent Nels Tessen of the intelligence unit of the internal revenue bureau, resulted in the present trial of Al Capone.

The government's campaign against tax dodging hoodlums and politicians had been under way for months, but no results had been achieved. Efforts of the intelligence unit, headed in Chicago by A. P. Madden, were concentrated on Ralph Capone, Al's brother, because he seemed to be the most vulnerable.

Discovers Record of Check.

Agent Tessem, while scrutinizing records of the now closed Lincoln State bank, found the record of the check drawn on the Pinkert State bank. Ralph Capone had used an alias, but the signature resembled his known handwriting.

Tessem discovered a group of accounts in the Pinkert bank, all under names beginning with the letter "C." These were James Carroll, James Costello, James Carson, James Carter, and Ralph Capone. The signature cards were all in the same handwriting, that of Capone. A total of $1,871,000 had been deposited in these accounts.

Investigation of the sources of these deposits disclosed the interlocking nature of the affairs of Al and Ralph Capone, Jack and Sam Guzik, and Frank Nitti. Now Ralph Capone and Jack Guzik are appealing from penitentiary sentences for income tax fraud, Nitti and Sam Guzik are in the penitentiary for the same reason, and Al Capone is on trial.

25 Agents Work on Case.

The investigation of Capone's financial affairs was the most sweeping and most difficult ever undertaken by intelligence unit agents in the country, federal officials said. About twenty-five agents worked on the case, traveling all over the nation, interviewing witnesses and searching for records. Mr. Madden was assisted in the direction of the inquiry by Frank Wilson, one of the leading investigators of the unit, who was sent here from Washington and has been on the case continuously since last May.

One of the most difficult jobs to confront the agents, that of rounding up reluctant witnesses, was handled in the main by Clarence Converse. Louis La Cava, exiled Cicero gambler; Johnny Torrio, Capone's predecessor, and Fred Ries, star witness in the Jack Guzik case, were some of those brought back to Chicago by Converse.

A blond young thing in the audience was seen to peek furtively at a serial story in a newspaper at one point in the legal arguments.

CUBA OPENS DRIVE ON HER OWN 'AL CAPONE'; THROWS 723 IN JAIL

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

HAVANA, Oct. 8.—While the entire police forces of Cuba concentrated today on closing up the dives of Jose Manuel Castillo, Cuba's "Al Capone," 723 of his accomplices and leaders in a nation-wide gambling and vice ring were confined today in Havana's city jail on Principe hill. Castillo himself is in hiding and all efforts to arrest him were futile. Castillo's underworld agents are estimated by the government at 10,000 men and women and his fortune at more than $10,000,000. The government estimates its loss in revenues from the national lottery, due to lotteries run by Castillo, at more than $2,000,000 in the last three years.

NAVY TO TIE UP 4 NEW SHIPS IN ECONOMY MOV

Three Yards Also May B Shut Down.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Oct. 8.—[S cial.]—A program of sweeping trenchments for the naval establishment which includes the closing of three navy yards and the placing in reserve of two battleships and two of the country's latest built Washington treaty 10,000 ton cruisers, virtually has been completed by officials of the navy.

NAVY TO TIE UP 4 NEW SHIPS IN ECONOMY MOVE

Three Yards Also May Be Shut Down.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Oct. 8.—[Special.]—A program of sweeping retrenchments for the naval establishment which includes the closing of three navy yards and the placing in reserve of two battleships and two of the country's latest built Washington treaty 10,000 ton cruisers, virtually has been completed by officials of the navy.

SECY. ADAMS.
[Harris Ewing Photo]

Although some changes may be made before the present tentative schedule is placed before President Hoover by Secretary of the Navy Adams, it became known that the navy yards at Boston and Charleston, S. C., as well as the Newport naval training station now are slated for closing as a part of the Hoover program for cutting $61,000,000 out of the navy department's appropriation for 1933.

Study All Navy Yards.

Whether these stations will be recommended for closing to congress will depend upon the final action taken by Secretary Adams and President Hoover. Navy officials said today that while all navy yards are being studied with the idea of determining the ones which could be closed with the least loss of efficiency, general agreement was that the three named above would be least missed if severed from the treasury pay roll.

The most sensational part of the new navy reduction program is that section which now calls for placing in reserve what may amount to as much as 20 per cent of the fleet which normally would be operating as the nation's first line of defense. The fact that the navy will have two of its 8 inch gun 10,000 ton cruisers in reserve at all times came as a crushing surprise to congressional adequate navy men who have assumed the administration program would not affect its best and most up to date vessels.

Hoover to Receive Pacifists.

As the plan now stands, two cruisers, probably the Pensacola and the Salt Lake City, will be placed in reserve for the first few months of 1932. It is planned later to replace these two vessels with two ether 8 inch gun cruisers after a few months. The crews from the new vessels placed in reserve would be turned over to the Pensacola and Salt Lake City when they began active duty. These vessels, costing close to $20,000,000 each, were built after years of congressional delay.

Notwithstanding the navy's efforts to so arrange its economies that all parts of the naval establishment will be cut evenly, many naval officers are skeptical that any of the big yards will be closed.

While the navy was engaged in its economy efforts, President Hoover was preparing to receive a delegation of pacifists who will demand further naval limitation.

ALLMAN CONFERS WITH EXPERT ON POLICE PROBLEM

After conferences yesterday with Bruce Smith, police expert of New York, Commissioner of Police Allman announced that they had discussed basic plans for the reorganization of the department. Before arriving at any decisions Smith, the commissioner said, will make an investigation to determine what changes will be required in the reorganization.

"The idea," said Commissioner Allman, "is to carry out the necessary improvements with as few transfers and as little disruption in the department as possible."

Later Smith conferred with Maj. John Bauder, department drillmaster, and Col. Philip Crippen.

FREED TO BUY LEG FOR YOUTH WHOM HE SHOT AT PARTY

At a Christmas party in Joliet last year James Nosse, 21 years old, and John Milesovich, 19 years old, quarreled. Nosse obtained a shotgun and shot Milesovich in the right leg.

It was found necessary to amputate the limb and Nosse was arrested, and held in the Will county jail on a charge of assault to commit murder.

Yesterday John Milesovich was carried to the county courthouse.

"I don't want to prosecute Jim Nosse," he said. "I want him to get out. I haven't got a dime and if Jim can get out he will go to work and give me money to buy an artificial leg."

Nesse agreed and was released.

14,000 TEACHERS WILL GO WITHOUT PAY AGAIN TODAY

Schools' Debt to Staff Rises to $17,705,000.

Chicago's 14,000 public school teachers, unpaid since last April, today will have another payless pay day. The teachers' checks for September are due today, but they will not be issued, because the board of education has not sufficient funds.

The failure to meet this pay roll increases to $17,705,000, the amount of back pay which the board owes to the teachers and its 4,000 other employés.

Members of the board of education said yesterday that they saw no prospect of relief except through special legislation, and none would predict how soon such legislation could be effected.

Decision on Scrip Today.

Issuance of more scrip, which has been at a standstill because of litigation, depends on the decision of Judge Philip J. Finnegan in Circuit court today on the injunction suit filed by the Chicago Teachers' federation. The federation is opposing this means of paying school employés. The ruling is expected to fix the status of nearly $10,000,000 worth of scrip outstanding as well as to determine the validity of the plan under which it was issued and whether any more scrip shall be issued.

Daily, according to reports, the situation among the teachers is becoming more acute. Clothing and food can be had on credit, the teachers say, but the greatest need is for cash to buy necessary articles which cannot be charged conveniently.

Can't Buy Stamps.

To conserve her dwindling savings one high school teacher said she had to cut off her social correspondence. It takes cash to buy stamps, she explained.

More scrip, in the opinion of many teachers, would be of no avail. A number of those who have taken scrip say they have not been able to dispose of it. The going price for the paper is 83 cents on the dollar, it is reported.

Another serious factor in the situation, said school executives, is a weakening of morale in the face of inadequate equipment and accommodations.

INVENTOR SUES FORD FOR $18,000,000 FOR PATENT INFRINGEMENT

Pittsburgh, Pa., Oct. 8.—[Special.]—A suit asking $18,000,000 damages from the Ford Motor company for alleged patent infringments was filed in federal court today by Arthur L. Banker, Pittsburgh inventor.

Banker, head ofthe Banker Windshield company, charges Henry Ford used a windshield on which Banker had patents. The petition claims Banker obtained the patent rights Oct. 10, 1911.

The 17 year period for which such patents are in force ended Oct. 10, 1928.

ALDERMEN ASK LEGISLATORS TO GIVE UP STARS

A resolution striking at the privilege of state officials to carry stars on their automobiles was approved yesterday by the city council judiciary committee at the request of Ald. Barnet Hodes [7th]. The resolution requests the general assembly to repeal the law which now permits its members and other state officials to have automobile stars. An ordinance passed recently by the council prohibits any one but policemen on active duty to have stars, but it is now being amended to conform with the state law.

POPE TESTIFIES HE'S A GAMBLER; WINS DRY CASE

West Side Frankie Freed in U. S. Court.

Westside Frankie Pope took the witness chair in the federal court yesterday and gave details concerning his gambling operations and won an acquittal on a charge of violating the prohibition laws. His case was aided by testimony concerning a mysterious Joe Marino.

Pope, a diminutive South Halsted street bookmaker, was charged with the ownership of the Villa Maurice at 14 South Halsted street, where on July 13, 1929, C. M. Hoffman, a dry agent, purchased "a pint of colored alcoholic spirits."

"A Gambler All My Life."

"I didn't own the place, I only ate there and used the phone to make my personal bets on the horse races," Pope told Federal Judge Walter C. Lindley. "Why, your honor," he exclaimed indignantly, "I've been a gambler all my life. I never had anything to do with the liquor racket."

The defendant related under examination by his attorney, Capt. William Waugh, that he conducted a handbook in a cigar store beneath the Villa Maurice.

Cigars "Used as a Front."

"Did you sell any cigars?" Judge Lindley interposed. Pope replied that he did not, that the cigars were "only used as a front." He then said that a Joe Marino ran the Villa Maurice. Pope further established his own identity as a gambler by adding that he conducted two other handbooks in the same block.

None of Pope's six witnesses to his innonence on the liquor charge could say who or where Mr. Marino was, although all said that Marino was the proprietor. When the prohibition agent admitted that he had not made his purchase from Pope the court discharged the gambler. Pope's brother, Willy, was also discharged when witnesses testified that he had been arrested because he entered the place during the raid.

1932 NEW YORK CITY BUDGET TENTATIVELY PUT AT 631 MILLIONS

New York, Oct. 8.—[Special.]—The tentative city budget for 1932 totals $631,352,880, which is $10,512,697 more than the 1931 figures, Mayor Walker disclosed tonight.

In a message he will submit to the board of estimate tomorrow along with the schedule the mayor explains that the increases are attributable largely "to economic conditions and unemployment."

Despite the increase over the final 1931 budget total, the mayor indicates the possibility that the 1932 basic tax rate may be 3 points lower than that for 1931.

The mayor estimates that in the tentative budget there are "unavoidable increases" amounting to $21,812,276, of which sum $14,038,796 is "due to unemployment." As an offset to these increases, the director of the budget recommends decreases in other activities amounting to approximately $11,400,000.

Briefs for Blatz Company Are Filed in Permit Case

Briefs of the Blatz company of Milwaukee were filed with the prohibition enforcement department yesterday denying government charges that the company was illegally in possession of beer of high alcoholic content. R. C. Minturn, chief attorney for the prohibition unit, who will decide whether the company will lose its permit to manufacture cereal beverages, said that he would set a date for oral arguments within a few days.

WORKER SLAIN BY GUNMAN AS HE WALKS HOME

Louis Orrico, 36 years old, was shot and killed last night while walking in front of 1027 South Claremont avenue.

TWO BANDITS WRECK INDIANA BANK AUTO, ESCAPE WITH $6,300

Mishawaka, Ind., Oct. 8.—[Special.]—Two men armed with sawed off shot guns intercepted the transfer of $6,300 in curency from the postoffice to the First National bank here this afternoon, wrecked the bank's money car, and escaped.

Donald B. Smith, assistant cashier, and E. J. Robinson, teller of the First National, had just received a shipment of currency at the postoffice from the Chicago Federal Reserve bank. As Robinson drove out from behind the postoffice, two of the bandits drove across from a side street and jammed the bank car into the curb.

Forcing the bankers from their car the robbers snatched the currency pouch from Smith, ran across the street to where two confederates were waiting with another car, and escaped.

SEEK CORONER NOMINATION.

Carbondale, Ill., Oct. 8.—[Special.]—Mayor Joe M. Anderson announced today that he would seek the Democratic nomination for coroner of Jackson county and wil lresign as mayor should he be elected.

SURGEON, NURSE GET MENINGITIS FROM PATIENT

Dr. W. A. Malone, and his nurse, Miss Martha Dyer, are convalescing from a mild attack of spinal meningitis which they contracted when fluid being drawn from the spine of a patient suffering from spinal meningitis dropped on them in the operating room at the Little Company of Mary hospital, the mother superior of the hospital said yesterday.

The operation took place on Sept. 23, and the patient, Benjamin M. Hadley, 1746 Beverly Glen parkway, Beverly Hills, died three days later. Dr. Malone is at his home, 1747 West 100th street. His wife said he would be at his office again Monday. Miss Dyer is at the hospital, but is to be discharged today.

The mother superior said the surgeon and his nurse were saved from the full effects of the disease by taking a serum before the operation.

EDISON'S DOCTOR AMAZED AT HIS BATTLE FOR LIFE

Spends a Restless Night, Eats Fair Breakfast.

West Orange, N. J., Oct. 8.—[Special.]—Thomas Alva Edison held his own this morning in his fight for life, although his physician and members of his family still believe he has only a few days to live.

Shortly after 10 o'clock his physician, Dr. Hubert S. Howe, issued the following bulletin:

"Mr. Edison had a restless night, but he ate a fair breakfast and he does not appear to be any weaker than he was last night. His vitality is amazing."

Takes Some Nourishment.

"With any ordinary person it would be possible to predict when he was going into a coma, but not with Mr. Edison," Dr. Howe said after he had examined the aged inventor this morning.

"I cannot say that there has been any particular change in his condition, but he certainly must be weaker. He sleeps lightly and occasionally takes some nourishment. He gets milk, stewed fruits and cereals, which are necessary to counteract the uremic poisoning."

The critical nature of Mr. Edison's condition was indicated today when Capt. William B. Lamb, in charge of the New Jersey state police at Morristown, asked headquarters in Trenton for authorization to have a trooper meet Dr. Howe at the New Jersey end of the Holland tunnel and escort him to the Edison home at any time it is requested by the Edison family.

No Perceptible Change.

The West Orange police also have arranged that in the event of an emergency calling Dr. Howe from his New York City office he will have the way cleared through the town to Mr. Edison's home.

Mr. Edison still is weak and drowsy and he cannot take sufficient nourishment to fight the uremic poisoning which is permeating his body. His condition, however, has changed little since yesterday, when it was reported at his West Orange home that he was sinking, but that his heart was functioning well under the strain of the manifold diseases which are draining his vitality.

SEEK $4,796,905 CUT IN TAX FIGURE ON OPERA HOUSE

Insull Spokesmen Ask Big Exemption.

On the contention that the Chicago Civic Opera company is an educational institution exempt from taxation representatives of Samuel Insull yesterday sought a reduction of $4,796,905 in the assessed valuation on the 20 North Wacker Drive building, which houses the opera.

Attorney William H. Arthur of Isham, Lincoln & Beale, personal attorneys for Mr. Insull, and Ernest R. Graham, head of the architectural concern which designed the opera house and its skyscraper home, appeared before the board of review with their arguments. They first contended that the building, assessed at $5,470,954 for 1930, should not have been assessed for that year, since it was only a little more than 50 per cent completed on April 1 of that year. It was occupied in May, 1930.

Claim Building Tax Exempt.

They also contended that the opera house proper, and all the land which it occupies, is exempt from taxation. Attorney Arthur cited rulings of the federal internal revenue bureau in income tax cases to the effect that contributions to the support of opera came under the classification of support of an educational institution.

On the basis of arguments presented to the board the full valuation of the opera skyscraper and the land on which it rests would be reduced from $18,262,948 to $4,931,835. Assessments, on a 37 per cent basis, would drop from $6,544,283 to $1,747,378, a reduction of $4,796,905.

Mr. Graham disputed the full valuation of $15,191,788 placed on the building by the board of assessors. He put the total full valuation at $9,217,543, of which he said $4,728,258 was the cost of the opera house proper and thus, under his contention, exempt from taxation. The opera house covers all but 9,390 square feet of the total site of the building, 68,248 square feet, and that land, he contended, should also be exempt.

The office section of the building extends over the opera house. Mr. Graham admitted that his cost figure for the opera house included the heavy girders and other architectural features necessary to support the office structure above.

Board Considers Cases.

The board took both cases, the 1930 assessment and the exemption of the building as an educational institution, under advisement.

The board of assessors yesterday made public its assessments on schedules C and D of railroad property in Cook county. The majority of railroad properties, including rights of way, terminals, and rolling stock, are assessed by the state tax commission.

Schedule C, consisting of office furniture, tools, and other personal property, totaled $2,928,945 in the 1931 assessment. The total was $2,940,688 in the 1930 assessment. Schedule D, consisting of all real estate owned by railroads but not used for railroad purposes, totaled $15,992,945 for 1931, as compared with $20,469,306 for 1930. The radical reduction in assessments under schedule D, the assessors said, is explained partly by lower land valuations in the present quadrennial reassessment, but more largely by the fact that railroads are constantly converting idle properties to railroad use by expanding their yards and other operating facilities. Such properties are then taken out of schedule D and are assessed by the state tax commission.

KEY TAKEN FROM HOTEL 37 YEARS AGO IS RETURNED

Thirty-seven years ago a guest walked out of the Hotel Sherman, then the "Sherman house," with a key in his or her pocket. Yesterday the same key, with the room tag, "No. 646," arrived at the Hotel Sherman through the mail from Sidney, Australia.

"It must have been a matter of sentiment," said Frank Bering of the hotel management, "that made that person keep the key. Perhaps there was a honeymoon there. Maybe the couple are divorced now, and the man or woman didn't want the key any longer."

MAYOR PRAISES WARDEN AFTER INSPECTING JAIL

Explains Away Criticisms of Moneypenny.

Mayor Cermak's charges on Wednesday that recent jailbreak attempts at the county jail were "just advertising" for Warden David Moneypenny, turned out yesterday to be something of a tempest in a teapot.

After a visit to the jail the mayor declared that he had the highest confidence in the administrative ability of the warden. His only objection, he said, was to stories going out of Chicago that it was possible for condemned murderers to escape from the jail built under his direction when he was president of the county board.

It was pointed out to him that no murderers had escaped, and he agreed that in no jail was it possible to prevent a condemned man attempting a break for liberty, however slight the chance of success.

Inspect Unbarred Windows.

Mayor Cermak was accompanied in his inspection of the jail by Sheriff Meyering, President Whealan of the county board, and Newton C. Farr, foreman, and a committee from the October grand jury. President Whealan was shown the windows through which six men escaped soon after the new jail was occupied, some of them still unbarred, and promised that in spite of the lack of funds, anything absolutely necessary to make the jail escape proof would be taken care of soon.

Sheriff Meyering denied the charge made Wednesday by Criminal court officials, that political appointments of jail guards, which superseded the semi-civil service system set up at the jail five years ago by the late Warden Edward Fogarty, had lowered the character of the personnel.

Guard Is Dismissed.

One of the politically appointed guards, Sam De Maria, 1650 Van Buren street, was dismissed yesterday. On Wednesday night he confessed, after questioning at the detective bureau, that he had carried letters from Michael Romano, a convicted robber who attempted to escape from the jail a few days ago, to Romano's sweetheart, Miss Opal Kolin.

Miss Kolin and Nathan Goldman, who was found outside the jail in a taxicab, armed with a pistol, when Romano made his unsuccessful break, appeared before Judge Samuel Trude in the Felony court yesterday. The judge continued the hearing to Oct. 19.

ARREST OF 2 NIPS ALLEGED PLOT OF MOVIE UNION

N. Y. Pair Confess $25,000 "Muscle" Job.

Two New York "musicale men," imported by airplane to drive nonunion motion picture operators out of Chicago, were arrested yesterday in the Harrison hotel, Harrison street and Wabash avenue. A supply of opium and smoking equipment belonging to one of the men was taken and turned over to the federal narcotic agents.

The men are Albert Lazar, 36 years old, a drug addict, and Solly Grossman, 32 years old. Questioned at the racket bureau of the state's attorney's office by Sergt. Michael Ahern and Assistant State's Attorney Charles E. Lonsbury, both made full confessions and stated they were to be paid $25,000 for the job.

They stated they were approached last week by Hymie Weiss, business agent of local 306 of the motion picture operators' union in New York. Weiss, who stated he was acting for Thomas E. Maloy, business agent of the Chicago local, according to their story, promised to pay $25,000 as soon as the 97 imported operators were induced to leave or driven out of Chicago.

Promise Jobs in New York.

Grossman said Weiss gave him authority to promise the operators jobs in New York paying the same salary they were receiving in Chicago. In addition each operator was to be given his transportation and a bonus of $100. No violence was to be used unless the business proposition were turned down.

As soon as they arrived in Chicago Monday, Grossman said, they got in touch with members of the local union. Told to go ahead with their plans they approached several of the imported operators with success. An appointment was made with a representative of the local union for last night at which time $9,700 in bonus money for the operators was to be given them. Neither Lazar nor Grossman would name the representative with whom they had had dealings.

A special showup will be held this morning at the detective bureau at which possible bombing witnesses, victims of acts of terrorism and theater owners will view the prisoners. In addition, attachés of the Auditorium hotel will view them to see if either was the man who hired a room there and left a quantity of dynamite, later calling police to inform them of the explosive and stating it was the property of the theater owners who maintained offices in the same building.

Chief Uncovers Plot.

The plot was discovered by Capt. William Schoemaker, newly appointed chief of detectives. A search of the room was made by Sergeants William Schoemaker Jr. and Arthur Wacholz who found evidence in the form of telegrams and letters linking the two with the movie dispute.

Efforts to effect a reconciliation in the war between the owners and the union, which has resulted in ten major bombings and numerous stench bombings, proceeded no further yesterday. Following the second of two conferences arranged by Corporation Counsel Sexton, attorneys for both sides Wednesday night announced "satisfactory progress." Another conference was to have been held last night, but was called off. Another conference will be held today.

GANGSTERS FACE COURT TODAY IN GUN LAW TEST

Two Accused of Defacing Pistol Numbers.

Sam Hunt and James Fawcett, alias Red Forsythe, both Capone gangsters, are scheduled for arraignment today before Municipal Judge James F. Fardy. The two men are charged with carrying concealed weapons and with defacing the serial numbers of a gun.

They already have obtained one continuance of the case against them. Assistant State's Attorney Al Johnson assented to the first continuance in order to build up a firm case against the men. He will oppose any request for further delay, he said.

New Legal Weapon for State.

State Representative Elmer J. Schnackenberg, author of the new law which makes it a crime to obliterate the serial numbers on a weapon, said yesterday that the Hunt-Fawcett case furnishes an opportunity for the state to use a new legal implement in its war against hoodlums.

The new law carries a penalty of a fine of not more than $300 and a county jail sentence of not more than one year, or both.

Called Airtight Law.

"The gun law had loopholes before," said Mr. Schnackenberg, "but it now seems airtight."

Hunt and Fawcett were arrested as they ran from the scene of a mysterious shooting in Grant park some weeks ago. A revolver, with the serial numbers defaced, and from which shots had just been fired, was found a few feet from them when they were halted. Later, police found an automobile abandoned on the south side. Bullet holes in the seat cushions and blood stains indicated that it was the car involved in the shooting and that some one had been wounded.

Train Kills Man; Engineer Finds It's His Own Father

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BELLEVILLE, Ont., Oct. 8.—Too late to stop, Mervin Pacey, youthful engineer, noticed a man's leg projecting from under a car on the next track over the track down which he was driving his yard engine tonight. His wheels passed over the leg at the ankle. He rushed back to find the victim was his father, William Pacey, 65, also a railroad employé. The father died.

"The newspaper is an institution developed by modern civilization to present the news of the day, to foster commerce and industry, to inform and mold public opinion, and to furnish that check upon government which no constitution has ever been able to provide."

THE SMASH OF DEMOCRACY.

President von Hindenburg has given effect to a number of new emergency decrees which, taken with the ministerial changes under Chancellor Bruening, make a dictatorship in everything but name to deal with discordant political elements, seditious forces, and financial perils. At the same time the British parliament has been dissolved and the national emergency government under Mr. MacDonald appeals to the people to give it, in the elections, the authority it needs if the nation is to be pulled through its crisis. The emergency government took over when party government broke down. King George in his speech dissolving parliament earnestly commended the members of the two houses to the protection of God. The political institutions of the world never, it would seem, have been in more need of it.

Russia has put a communistic despotism in place of a czaristic one after a defeated attempt at representative democracy. Italy has lost its parliamentary system to the regiments of Fascism and the autocracy of Mussolini. Spain is rid of a monarchy, but has not yet revealed where it will land or how it will stand. Germany survives the storm of its divergent parties and the violence of its political dissent and economy fallacy only by dictatorship and force. Great Britain is weakened by dissension, prostrated by government expenditures and taxation, uncertain in temper and confesses the breakdown of government by parties.

Things do not seem any too good for the average man in Europe. His democratic ideas are in exploded fragments all about him. The man on horseback is herding him with others of his kind. In a way his case is worse than it ever was before. Formerly he survived dictation, looking forward to the time when it would cease and when the authority for his government would come from him. Now he is going back to dictation, having been sunk in his own attempts to operate the government which represented his hopes of better life.

If this scheme of things is in a hard case in Europe it is seemingly more hopeless elsewhere. South America has lost nearly all its veneer of popular government. Most of the British dominions are more cracked than the mother country. Asia is an anarchy with waning British and waxing Japanese imperialism.

It is an attenuation of cause and effect to blame all this on the war. It is more plausibly the consequence of acts following the war and not inevitably or directly related to it. The world generally won back to prosperity and general well being after the war. It got on its feet and went on its way with foolishness and vindictiveness here and there, but with nothing in the situation requiring the masses of Europeans to prove their incompetence in the establishment of government conducted with their own consent, and yet that proof is the outstanding phenomenon today.

Americans naturally will be concerned to discover what is knocking all sorts of popular or democratic government to pieces and forcing a return to absolutism. As yet their own scheme hasn't cracked. It has felt the strain, but it is holding together. There may be fear of greater strain to come, but there are plenty of warnings. If Americans will be admonished by experience elsewhere they may avoid it here.

The democratic scheme is not a license for the eruption of primitive human instincts either in the people who form the government or in the government which they form. It requires a self-discipline which brings the people generally to common ground as to fundamentals. A state cannot persist in popular government with such divergences of opinion as are represented in Germany at one extreme by the Fascists and at the other by the communists. Force is the only thing which can reconcile such differences. The democratic scheme cannot have its government constantly trying to overreach its justifiable power and authority or its people constantly trying to obtain from it what they should not expect or have. Either of these causes will wreck the scheme and both can be seen in action. Frequently they work together to the same effect. They make surly paupers of the people and a bankrupt autocracy of the nation.

Great Britain has taught its people that the state owes them a living. Many of them are now incapable of earning their own and they are willing to destroy the government which does not furnish it, when they have made it impossible to do so. Government cannot take over the affairs of private enterprise without becoming a dictatorship. The dictatorship may be competent or incompetent, depending fortuitously upon the character of the men who establish it. Democratic authority for the extension of government into every realm of life cannot be obtained. The democratic political processes will not furnish it. They will vanish in the effort. The institutions of the country will vanish with them. If Lenin or Mussolini is on the premises at the time either will convert the situation to his own purposes by his dominating character. Hindenburg may check the anarchy without an attempt at personal or doctrinal advantage. MacDonald may abandon party and hope that the people will submit of their own free will.

It is a primitive instinct of people to get what they can. It is a primitive instinct of their rulers to extend their authority. A democracy, if it works, is an organization of people competent to restrain themselves and their government. They have a sufficiently wide base of common agreements so that their differences of political opinion do not split the structure built on it. They have sufficient self-reliance not to need government as a custodian of their morals or as a purveyor of cakes to their appetites. They have sufficient regard for themselves to keep their government in its place. Upon such qualities democracy is based, and when it loses them it is on its way to anarchy or autocracy.

An American may look about the scene and observe that people elsewhere are headed for one of these destinations or the other because they refused to heed or obey the invincible rules which governed them whether they liked it or not. The scene should be exemplary.

THE WATERWAY SHOWS ITS WORTH.

Thirteen thousand tons of freight have moved through the Peoria river terminal since it was opened in June. As freight movements are counted, this is not a great deal. It could be handled nicely in eight or ten trains.

Still it is a promising index to what may be expected of the Illinois waterway when it is completed to Chicago. The service is still so new that it is unfamiliar to most shippers. Arrivals and departures are relatively infrequent and the difficulties of organization which confront any new project are still present. With these considerations in mind, the prospects of the waterway, on the basis of Peoria's showing, must be regarded as excellent. When it is completed to Chicago, the concentration point for the nation's freight, the waterway will not lack for cargoes.

The report of waterway business at Peoria should serve as an incentive to a speedy completion of the work. The new and cheaper means of transport will open new markets to manufacturers and farmers throughout the central states. Barges, towboats, docks, warehouses, and new factories will have to be built. Railroad connections will be required at many points. All of this construction will mean employment for thousands of men and additional profits for others. These more or less indirect benefits of the waterway would be welcome at any time, but at present, when the nation is suffering from unemployment and stagnation in its basic industries, the significance of the waterway as a business stimulator is greater than ever.

OPERA AS USUAL.

At 20 North Wacker drive these days they are going confidently about the business of preparing another opera season for Chicago. The first performance is to be "Tosca," on Nov. 2, with a cast including a new tenor, Jan Kiepura, a young Pole, whose reputation was made in Vienna and Milan.

The temptation this year must have been to lower the standard of the performances. It is a tribute to the management and to the Chicago public that the croakers have not had their way. The Chicago Civic Opera company is in business as usual, purveying the best that the operatic art can produce. In the long run that policy must prove the sounder. It will create a tradition of artistic integrity which will be beyond price in years to come.

The times are hard and for that reason alone it is of the utmost importance to defend what we have that is good. The opera company has reached its present status only as the result of years of effort. It is today one of the world's great musical and dramatic organizations. If it is allowed to languish now for lack of support much that has been gained will be lost. In that sense the approaching season is to be a test of the people of Chicago rather than of the opera company and its guarantors.

Editorial of the Day

WAR MOB COERCES WISDOM.

[The State Journal, Lansing, Mich.]

The old joke about the man who broke into jail instead of out has been outdone. Foreign Minister C. T. Wang of China has been attacked and beaten by a large body of Chinese students who raided his office with purpose to chastise him for not leading China in a war against Japan.

The incident deserves to be considered aside from its curious aspect. The incident bears on a problem, it punctures a fond illusion professed by some.

The fond illusion held by some is that the people, those commonly designated by the demagogues as the "dear people," never start wars but are always victims of war. The leaders in affairs of state are always pictured as the ones who, with stealth and cunning and various devices, lead the nations on to plunge them into war for the aggrandizement of the few.

The case of the Chinese students attacking a prominent and sensible leader is not conclusive evidence, of course, that it is the masses and not the leaders who precipitate war; but the incident does have a bearing. Other instances may be cited.

In the instance of the world war, it is pretty commonly believed here in the United States that a coterie of cunning, ambitious men, through a very considerable number of years, planned the stroke that would give Germany access to the English channel, in one direction, and through to the waters of the near east, in the other, and, incidentally, unite all middle Europe in a strong empire. But even were that idea conceived and planned by the few, the masses had to be taken into the plan in quite a degree, and, it is common judgment that they fell for it. Here in America it is believed that some of our most conspicuous leaders saw that we would ultimately be drawn into the struggle, but it was not until America, almost with one voice, demanded, that we got in as we did.

Referring again to our own history, the Spanish-American war was almost altogether a war of popular making. Leaders at Washington exerted about every power they possessed to keep the United States out of that war, but the effort was in vain. The best the popular McKinley could do, after the blowing up of the Maine, was to ask suspension of judgment.

So easily are popular passions set running, so prone is the multitude to feel rather than know that all is in readiness, that the chances are, in these modern days, we are vastly safer from war by having the war decision lodged where it is than as though war were a matter of popular referendum. The Chinese masses are for war, but their wiser leaders restrain them.

HOW ITALIANS FIGHT MALARIA.

DR. L. W. HACKETT tells of the various methods of malaria control that are making good in Italy. No one method suffices in any one country. The method which is very well suited to certain circumstances may be without value in others.

In Tuscany, and some other sections, the best method consists in stocking the country with animals kept in stables, at night, at least. The mosquitoes leave the houses for the stables, to feed on cows and not on people. In such regions malaria is controlled by this one procedure.

In some regions the screening of houses has been decided upon as the best procedure. In 1924 it was generally thought that farmers could not be persuaded to screen their houses. In 1928 a law was passed making it obligatory upon all house owners in the Roman Campagna to screen their houses. In 1930 Dr. Hackett was unable to find an unscreened bedroom in any part of the Campagna.

The use of top minnows has proved successful beyond all hopes in Istria and in some other sections. In one eight square mile section malaria was practically abolished in six years by the use of this method. One group of 300 children, who were almost all malarial at the beginning of the demonstration, have not had a single case of malaria in two years.

The use of larvicides has given the best results around the centers of population. The larvicide used is Paris green. In Italy 88 per cent of the small farmers live in villages and towns and go to their farms in the morning. The law requires that all waters and marsh that could breed mosquitoes, and that lie within a town or within 1½ miles of the limits of one, must be treated with diluted Paris green.

This is done by the government and the cost is assessed against the owners of the property lying within the district. Dr. Hackett says: "Paris greening is standard practice now in Italy. The station has proved over and over again that in Italy, under all sorts of conditions, mosquito breeding can be prevented for less money than it takes to adequately treat the acute malaria in the local population."

The state manufactures quinine and sells it at a small profit. All people with malaria must take it. Dr. Hackett says that the result has been that malaria is now a mild disease and rarely fatal. However, this method of control has not sufficed to lessen the prevalence of the disease.

STUTTERING.

M. E. L. writes:

1. Is stuttering or stammering a habit or a sickness?
2. Can it be cured?
3. How?

REPLY.

1. It is a habit, but behind the speech habits lie certain mental and personality characteristics.
2. Yes, though cure is not easy nor is it quickly accomplished in a person who has neglected his bad habits for a long time. A 30 year old habit cannot be broken in 30 hours, or even 30 days.
3. By intelligent, persistent, patient training.

MAY BE HEART TROUBLE.

Mrs. G. H. writes: What is the cause of badly swollen hands in a woman of 70 years? Could it be caused by poor circulation in hands and arms?

REPLY.

Are the feet swollen also? If so, heart disease or kidney disease is the probable cause. If they are not, look for some obstruction in the chest. So-called poor circulation is not the cause if the hands are badly swollen.

RESULTS IN A SAVING.

Chicago, Sept. 29.—[Friend of the People.]—Why is the David Swing school closed to the public school children when it was given by Mr. D. Swing as a school to the public at no expense to the city? O. N.

"A decrease in population in the area across the river to the west of the loop has resulted in a similar decrease in school membership. Although the David Swing elementary school had a membership of 791 pupils in 1925, its estimated membership for September, 1931, was 320. By action of the board of education the Garfield and Swing elementary schools were closed and their pupils distributed in vacant rooms in other nearby schools. This action results in a saving of $62,000 per year in overhead expense. Examination of the proceedings of the board of education for the years 1893, 1894 and 1895 does not reveal that this school was given "to the public at no expense to the city." School board proceedings show a recommendation for the purchase of the site on Dec. 20, 1893, and the letting of contracts for the erection of the building on Nov. 7, 1894. These proceedings also show that the new school building was originally named the Perkins Bass school, but the name was changed on Sept. 11, 1895, to the David Swing school.

A LINE O' TYPE OR TWO

Hew to the Line, let the quips fall where they may.

EVERYBODY down in Washington is terribly excited over Premier Laval's coming visit. It is expected that something will be said at the White House about canceling France's war debt, and, while everybody wants Mr. Laval to have a nice time while he is in our midst, there is still a strong feeling that he shouldn't be given the Washington monument or the dome of the capitol as souvenirs to remember us by.

Well, if the stabilization corporation was responsible for what was gotten, then we regret that there ever was a stabilization corporation, for then instead of having gotten the 25 cents more the man would have received 25 cents more. And it is more blessed to receive than to have gotten.

THE WANTON'S LUTE.

I SHALL NOT FORGET.

Take me for what I am—not what I would be,
Nor what I should; nor yet what you would have me,
But as some viol fashioned long ago
Whose maker's smile and dusty fingers haunt me.
The bow is broken now, that brought the wail—
The throb and tremor of my first wild song;
The hand has long since mouldered into clay.
And am I faithless then—and is it wrong
That at your touch I sang a roundelay?
So I was fashioned. . . . To the leaning cheek,
The random bow, I answer—I must speak—
Made as I am. But lay the bow aside,
I shall be mute—or sing another lay
For wise or wanton minstrel, as I may.
But I shall not forget, at your command
I spilt the matchless minors of a master-hand.

THIS IS THE SECOND of the three days' anniversary of the great Chicago fire, and not a word has been heard in memory of Mrs. O'Leary's cow. The careless multitude today do not know whether Mrs. O'Leary's cow kicked the lamp over with her left hind hoof or switched it over with her tail, or whether her name was Bessie or Imogene. Chicago does not deserve to have a great cow.

"WOMEN," says Dr. Irene Behnke of the Chicago aero commission, "will in five years be flying their own airplanes as easily as they now drive automobiles." Oh, easier than that; you don't have to back an airplane.

DOWN IN KOSCIUSKO COUNTY, INDIANA, the township trustees have entered into an agreement to give no poor relief to any one owning either a dog or an auto. But how's a fellow going to take the supplies he gets from the poor relief fund home if he hasn't got an auto? Huh? Tell us Americans that.

THEY'RE MAKING all kinds of whoopee about a mechanical robot that guides an airplane all over the place. And every time we go out in our gas buggy we meet any number of robots driving automobiles at sixty and seventy miles an hour on every highway. But science hasn't yet taught these auto robots not to leap out of line and go charging down the other lane when it's full of oncoming cars. Anyhow, the automobile robots can speak certain words. They usually say, "It was your fault, you big hunk of cheese; shut yer trap or I'll push this monkey wrench through your face."

WHAT WITH THEIR OPPORTUNITIES now of entering every field of human endeavor the ladies seem to be getting so rough. Two lady bandits waylaid another woman near the Newberry library the other night and said: "Lissen! This is a stickup. Give us your purse." Then they took seven berries from their victim, slapped her face, pointed their guns at her head, and told her to keep on walking and not look back or they would fill her so full of lead the coroner couldn't pick it all out for days and days. But need they have said "lissen"?

REVISE AND RETURN PROOFS.

Set the head in forty point,
Make it Goudy, extra bold,
What's the white space doing there?
Don't you think that it would hold

Twice as long a story? Set
Boxes here and there and add
Ten more items. Have a cut
Made of each—and if you had

Switched the hats and davenports;
Built a stronger story of How we swung a "special buy"
Of this Schiaparelli glove

Then I guess the page would be Ready to present our Sale.
"Thank you for the lovely ride
And this quiet little jail."

MAHATMA GANDHI has been compelled to begin posing for his statue in London. And yet lots of spiritualists tell us that the principal reason the illustrious dead refuse to come back to earth is because they just can't bear to meet their statues face to face. A statue is one of Fame's most awful penalties.

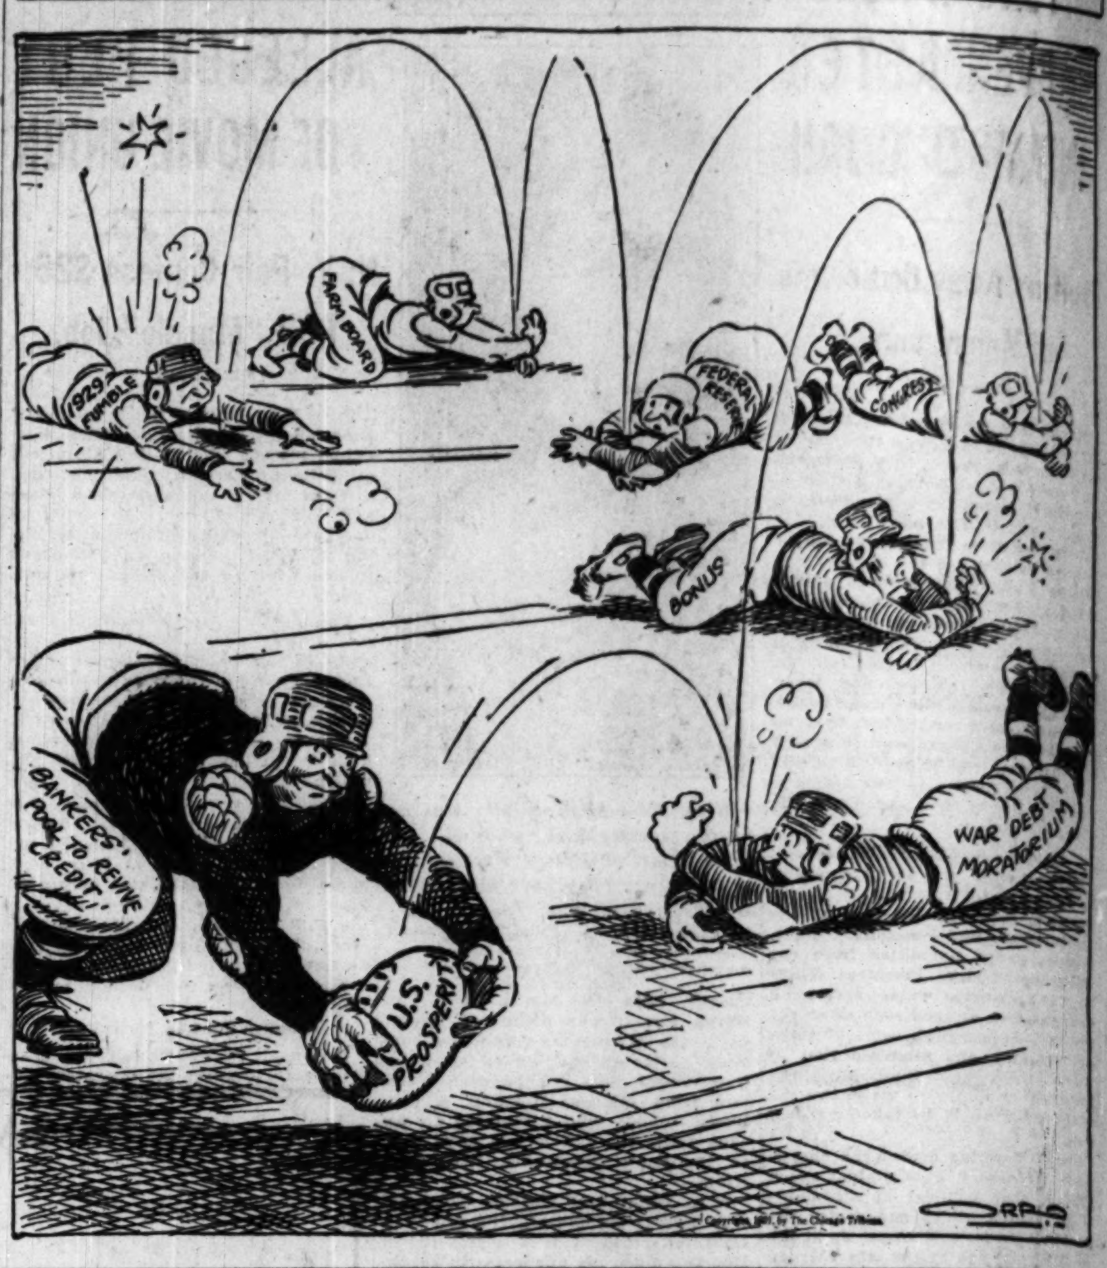
THE FINANCIERS who have been very caustic with all of us for hoarding our money say they will hustle five hundred million dollars together for the White House prosperity plan in forty-eight hours. Hey, who's been hoarding now? R. H. L.

THE RECOVERY?



Copyright: 1931: by The Chicago Tribune.

FROM THE TRIBUNE'S COLUMNS

16 YEARS AGO TODAY

OCTOBER 9, 1915.

LONDON.—The Germans, in their initial attempt to invade Serbia, have been badly beaten, according to an official dispatch received by the Serbian legation from Nish. The report declares that the advance army of the Austro-German forces, which forced the Danube at Belgrade, was partly destroyed and partly captured, and that which entered Serbia across the Save met with enormous losses. The German report says "the crossing of our army across the Drina, the Save, and the Danube rivers is taking a favorable course. After an engagement opposite Ram, on the Danube, three cannon fell into our hands." According to a dispatch from Sofia, King Ferdinand, as commander in chief of all the Bulgarian forces, has intrusted command of the field forces to Gen. Jecoff, minister of war. That the break between Bulgaria and Serbia is complete is indicated by a Nish dispatch which says the foreign office has handed his passports to the Bulgarian minister.

CINCINNATI.—Not less than $100,000, and probably more—perhaps as much as $10,000,000—was the amount of loot obtained by bandits who held up Baltimore and Ohio train No. 1 at Central Station, Va., today.

30 YEARS AGO TODAY

OCTOBER 9, 1901.

CHICAGO. — Detective Sergeant James Conick faced the civil service commission and under oath told the story of the detective bureau's connection with the case of James Dunlap, bank robber, now serving twenty years in Joliet prison. In this way the trial of Capt. Luke P. Colleran, brother-in-law of Robert E. Burke, was opened. Conick passed through a fire of cross-examination, but his statements never wavered except in a few unimportant details. Evidence piled up against Colleran with every sentence of his testimony.

CHICAGO.—With the coming of the thirtieth anniversary of the great Chicago fire at midnight, flames started in the immense docks of the Peabody Coal company at Kinzie street and the river. For a time it seemed as if the fire department were powerless again to check the flames. They swept through the coal docks from end to end. The loss is estimated at $559,000.

BOSTON, Mass.—The time limit set by the brigands who abducted Miss Stone, the American missionary in Bulgaria, has passed, and whether the woman is alive or her captors have carried out their threat is not known.

50 YEARS AGO TODAY

OCTOBER 9, 1881.

CHICAGO.—Judge Tuley decided that the amendments to the revenue law allowing assessors of Cook county $5 a day is unconstitutional and that all they are entitled to is $2.50, the same as is paid assessors in other counties. The case was that of Assessor Amick of West Chicago, whose bill for 1880 was $2,000.

CHICAGO.—On State street from 19th street to a point between Van Buren and Jackson streets there is now an unbroken and completed line of cable road and the work is progressing rapidly. The tracks are in position as far north as the Palmer house.

CLEVELAND, O.—The fund to erect a monument over the grave of President Garfield in Lake View cemetery now amounts to $7,694. Congressman Pettibone from Tennesseee has been appointed agent of the fund at the Atlanta Cotton exposition. The committee in charge of the fund sent a letter to governors of all the states and territories urging the coöperation and assistance of citizens in raising the money.

CHICAGO.—A. G. Spalding, secretary of the Chicago Baseball club, returned from the east bringing with him contracts for next season signed by every member of the Chicago team of 1881—Anson, Flint, Williamson, Corcoran, Goldsmith, Quest, Burns, Gore, Kelly, Dalrymple, and Nicol. Not one of the players hesitated about signing and not one asked for an increase in salary.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

Writers should confine themselves to 200 or 300 words. Give full names and addresses. No manuscripts can be returned. Address Voice of the People, The Tribune.

DRY DEFIANCE.

Chicago, Oct. 6.—The letter of Civil Engineer in your Voice of the People for Oct. 6 is interesting to me, a dry, because I am in accord with the wet view that we prohibitionists are in a minority. The great trouble with the wet campaign, however, is that they stop at their claims of a majority. They seem unable to realize that it takes much more than a mere majority to legalize the liqour traffic. It took us drys fifty years and many more voters than a majority to push the liquor business out of the villages, counties, and states, and to get the 18th amendment into the constitution. In fact, it would have required only a wet majority in the thirteen smallest states to have defeated the 18th amendment. That was a small percentage of the total vote; and it will take only a majority vote in the thirteen smallest states to elect enough members to a convention or to the state legislature to hold the 18th amendment. A referendum does not change the constitution; nor does a proclamation from the federal officials, who, according to Civil Engineer, should right now read the public mind and establish the liquor business by ukase or fiat, or some form of imperial announcement.

The drys were patient in getting the 18th amendment; the wets are impatient, using ballyhoo instead of power and push. No two wet leaders agree; no two wet organizations agree. Civil Engineer claims there is as much booze drunk today as ever; another wet will say we need more liquor drunk to use up the grain the farmer used to sell to the liquor industry; Civil Engineer says that everybody wants United States control of the liquor business; a well known brewer says that everybody wants beer to be made and sold freely without any interposition of any government. Scarcely any two wets appearing before state and national legislatures agree on the way out of their troubles. Meantime the drys have the same program they started with fifty years ago, with the solid backing of women's organizations numbering twelve millions, and the churches.

I agree with Civil Engineer that there are more wets than drys; but they don't seem to be able to do anything but make disharmony. HARRY C. PICKENS.

A NICE CLEAN CHURCH.

Chicago, Sept. 30.—I am very certain that E. A. M.'s article, "Children in Church," refers to the same church I was in some years ago. I went there on a Saturday afternoon to admire the beauty I had heard so much about. I sat down to better observe at leisure, when the janitor informed me that I could not sit down as the pews had been dusted for Sunday.

Had I looked like a tramp there would have been no excuse for such an un-Christian attitude; as it happened, I had on a new and very good looking suit. G. K.

WHOLESALE RAILROAD RATES.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Sept. 25.—As your correspondent, S. L. Sanders, writes in today's TRIBUNE, it is common practice to attribute to the railroads shortcomins or imbecilities for which the political boll weevils of the interstate commerce commission are responsible.

There is no question that in the matter of common justice and common business sense quantity buyers of transportation should be given consideration comparable to wholesalers in other lines. Yet when such concessions are broached the District of Columbia parasites declare that such concessions would be class discrimination.

If such is true, how come that one must but preface his moniker with "reverend," to get a radical reduction in transportation costs, or that the commuter business is sold at but a small fraction of the established rate charged drummers and showmen?

Twenty Grand couldn't run if he was martingaled, hobbled, and hog-tied.

NED ALVORD.

THE OTHER $2,000,000.

Chicago, Sept. 29.—Morgan Parker says statistics show that the annual expense of the railroads in the United States for blowing their whistles amounts to $7,000,000. He further states that the Rock Island spends $5,000,000 of the amount while running trains through Morgan Park. People who reside on that part of the north side between Cortland street and Wrightwood avenue will bear me out when I say that the Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul and Pacific uses up the remaining $2,000,000 blowing whistles from 10 p. m. until 5 a. m. on their switch engines. I wonder if they do it to keep the crews from going to sleep.

M. MERKLE.

ANOTHER SKYSCRAPER COLLEGE.

Chicago, Sept. 27.—James O'Donnell Bennett's article describing Mundelein college in THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE of Sept. 27 was both interesting and informative. I wish, however, to take exception to one statement. It is this: "It [Mundelein college] is the only skyscraper college in the world, the grandiose Pittsburgh project of that nature not yet functioning owing to fiscal complications."

The De Paul University building at 64 East Lake street is a seventeen story skyscraper erected in 1927 and financed by the De Paul Educational Aid society. While it is true that the entire building is not occupied by the college, the advancement of higher education was the primary motive in the erection of this beautiful and thoroughly modern skyscraper which houses the college of commerce, the law school, the secretarial college, the loop high school, the school of music, the school of dramatic art, including the Little theater, and the downtown college of liberal arts and sciences.

9 CLOSED BANKS THIS MONTH TO PAY $1,270,000

Auditor Nelson Announces Distributions.

Nine closed banks will pay $1,270,000 during October to depositors, according to a statement issued yesterday by State Auditor Oscar Nelson. Nearly [illegible] depositors will receive checks. Some of the payments already are in the mail, the auditor stated, and only a court order is needed to start the balance on its way back to the depositors. The payments will be as follows:

Bank—	Depositors.	Amount.	Per cent of whole.
[illegible]	17,000	$138,000	12½
[illegible]	8,000	75,000	15
Lake View State	19,150	536,000	16
[illegible]	4,000	109,200	40
[illegible]	19,000	130,000	10
Progressive	2,500	54,000	15
[illegible] Trust	6,000	65,000	10
[illegible]	7,000	28,500	15
North Town	6,000	115,000	20

The Lake View State previously paid a 20 per cent dividend, and the Progressive bank has made previous payments of 20 and 30 per cent. Auditor Nelson said that in order to make the payment on the North Town bank it was necessary to sell a quantity of bonds at a loss. The receiver, Charles W. Bainbridge, called a meeting of the depositors, and when put to a vote unanimous consent was obtained to the sale, the auditor declared.

Report on Ten Banks.

The auditor also made public the reports of receivers of ten closed banks. They showed the condition of the finances of the banks on the latest inventory, and give the book value rather than the sale value of the assets listed, it was explained.

WIFE, ON STAND, AIRS LOVE FLIGHT OF CARRUTHERS

Begins Her Testimony to Divorce Capitalist.

Mrs. Grace Carruthers, great-granddaughter of a lord mayor of London, yesterday began her testimony in the court of Superior Judge Harry B. Miller in the final phase of her suit to divorce her husband, Arthur S. Carruthers, real estate operator, capitalist, and sportsman, who disappeared three years ago.

Mrs. Carruthers asserted her husband had fled with his pretty secretary, Mrs. Pauline Dwyer, to an Arizona ranch where now they were living under the names of Mr. and Mrs. Mark Daly.

Attorney Lloyd C. Whitman who represents Mrs. Carruthers, outlined the evidence he asserted would be produced. He recited the highlights of two years litigation, and told of the automobile camping trip which he averred Mrs. Dwyer and Carruthers made in Mrs. Carruthers' $6,000 car.

Tells of Ranch Raid.

He told of a raid on the ranch at Elgin, Ariz., the discovery of a diary written by the husband and Mrs. Dwyer in which the details of their trip were recounted, and of finding the clothes of both scattered about the small ranch house.

Her husband had left her destitute when he fled, Mrs. Carruthers said, although his wealth was estimated at more than $600,000. All of this he acquired after their marriage in 1915 through the manipulation of property and cash which belonged to her, she added. Once, she said, she had walked into her husband's office while Mrs. Dwyer was sitting in his lap, her arms about his neck.

Says Husband Felled Her.

In 1928 she followed her husband to Shreveport, La., she said, where she found Mrs. Dwyer's picture on his dresser, her nightgown in his baggage, and many passionate love letters scattered about his dresser. He knocked her unconscious, she said, when he discovered that she had read the missives.

After Mrs. Carruthers had described her gold coast home at 441 St. James place, court was adjourned for the day. Today she is scheduled to tell of her raid upon her husband's Arizona cottage.

SUSPEND BERWYN CHIEF, GUILTY OF BEATING AUTOIST

Frank O. Rettig, chairman of the police and fire commission of Berwyn, yesterday announced that Chief of Police Thomas Bartunek had been found guilty of beating M. M. Brooks, a resident of Berwyn, in a cell after his arrest on a charge of driving without lights on Aug. 13. Bartunek was ordered reduced to the rank of patrolman and indefinitely suspended from the force.

THOS. BARTUNEK.

Sergt. Joseph Pilat and Patrolman Theodore Michalsky were found not guilty by the commission. Brooks was tried on charges of driving without lights, resisting an officer and disorderly conduct, but was acquitted on all three. His defense and the prosecution of the three policemen were conducted by Joseph H. Braun, general counsel for the Chicago Motor club, of which Brooks is a member.

SENTENCED TO BRIDEWELL.

Gavin Cummings, 35 years old, was sentenced to ten days in the Bridewell yesterday by Municipal Judge Matthew D. Hartigan on the charge of obtaining $50 from the Bismarck hotel on a traveler's check on which payment had been stopped. He asserted that he won the check in a card game and thought it was good.

JAPANESE BOMB MANCHURIAN CITY IN BIG AIR RAID

Open Attack on Troops of War Lord.

churian railway zone is concerned. We do not consider the Chinese people at Chinchow our enemies, but we emphatically object to the existence of a Chinese military menace, and, in the event that the plots and intrigue are not immediately discontinued, the Japanese army will demonstrate its real attitude."

The Japanese official report today also stated that two companies of Japanese troops and an airplane squadron had been dispatched from Chengtu and Ssupingkai, north of Mukden, to the Seihlusu district where numerous bands of Chinese troops and bandits, some mounted, are reported to be menacing the lives of Corean settlers.

Japan in New Protest.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

TOKIO, Oct. 8.—The Japanese government today strongly protested the anti-Japanese movement in China and ordered Mamoru Shigemitsu, Japanese minister at Nanking, to hand the following note to the Chinese government at Nanking:

"The Japanese government has already made it clear that the Mancruhian affair is nothing but the outcome of a deep rooted anti-Japanese feeling in China. Japan, time and again, has requested the Chinese to take propert steps to check the movement, but unfortunately this agitation seems to be now assuming alarming proportions.

"The Chinese government will be assuming a serious responsibility if it should fail to take prompt and effective measures to quell the agitation. Japan once more desires to call the serious attention of the Chinese government to those actions and to declare, at the same time, that China will be held responsible for the consequences."

The note further states that the anti-Japanese movement is "not only in contravention of the letter and spirit of the treaties existing between the two countries, but also constitutes a form of hostile act without the use of arms contrary to all standards of justice and friendship."

Today's bombing by Japanese of the city of Chinchow, seat of the provisional government of Marshal Chang Hsueh-liang, Manchurian war lord, was ascribed to the war lord's concentration of two infantry brigades and several artillery corps at Chinchow and the belief that he has completed preparations for war against Japan.

Reports from Changchun today stated that two Japanese military planes, on scouting duty six miles west of Shwangmiaotz, in the South Manchurian railway zone, discovered 1,000 Chinese bandits and fired upon them.

CANNON GETS HIS WISH, GRAND JURY PROBES HIS CASE

Legal Investigation He Demanded Opens.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Oct. 8.—[Special.]—Bishop James Cannon Jr. received what he has been demanding throughout his investigation by the senate campaign funds committee when the District of Columbia grand jury today began its inquiry into charges that he has violated the federal corrupt practices act.

The jury is to determine whether he and his associate, Miss Ada L. Burroughs, violated the law by failing to report how they spent a contribution of $65,300 made to Bishop Cannon as chairman of the Anti-Smith Democratic headquarters committee by E. C. Jameson of New York.

Frelinghuysen Testifies.

Prominent among those to testify today were former Senator Joseph S. Frelinghuysen of New Jersey, who had been active for Hoover in 1928. At the recently concluded hearings of the senate committee it was disclosed that a $5,000 check had gone from a large account carried by this Republican leader to Bishop Cannon to help the Anti-Smith Democratic campaign in the south. Jameson, donor of the $65,300 fund, was another witness.

Fully two dozen witnesses in all have been summoned, among them Basil Manley, investigator for the senate committee, whose testimony at the committee hearings was to the effect that large sums of the Jameson contribution had eventually found their way into the bishop's private accounts.

Before the investigation, Bishop Cannon, through Attorney Robert H. McNeill, filed with the United States attorney's office a lengthy brief calling attention to the view of the matter taken by the clergyman, that he was working in Virginia to obtain the selection of presidential electors, who are state officers and who do not come within the purview of the federal corrupt practice law.

Refusal of the clerk of the house of representatives to present expenditure reports filed by the bishop in the campaign, without permission from the house, caused a lengthy argument and inconvenience to the investigation.

Hits Back at Glass.

As the grand jury went into the campaign activities of Bishop Cannon, the Methodist churchman, in a statement, hit back at the charge of an old foe, Senator Glass [Dem., Va.], that the bishop had "run away to Europe" during the senate probe of Bishop Cannon's handling of campaign money.

Denying the accusation, Bishop Cannon said it was "vindictive, vituperative, insulting."

2 SLAYERS LOSE LAST COURT PLEA TO DODGE DEATH

Bell and Sullivan Denied a Rehearing.

Richard Sullivan and Frank Bell, convicted of murdering Chris Patras in a robbery of a café at 2752 North Clark street, lost their last court plea yesterday. The Illinois Supreme court, which had affirmed their death sentences in June, declined to open the case for rehearing. The execution of the pair is set for Oct. 16.

When Sullivan and Bell, in the county jail, were informed of the Supreme court's action Sullivan refused to talk. Bell still declared his innocence of the Patras murder and Wilbert Crowley, public defender, announced that he would ask a pardon for him.

Sammons Loses Petition.

Another whose plea was denied by the Supreme court was James [Fur] Sammons, labor racketeer and public enemy. His petition for a rehearing of a writ of habeas corpus was denied, and he will have to remain in the Joliet penitentiary to serve out the remainder of a fifty year term for murder.

Sammons was arrested in a general drive against hoodlums about a year ago. It was discovered then that he had been paroled while serving a term for the old murder charge. It was said that he had violated the parole by his mode of life at liberty and Judge John P. McGoorty sent him back to Joliet. Sammons' attorneys charged that his incarceration was illegal.

Mrs. Price Denied Clemency.

Nine convicted murderers, four robbers, an embezzler, and a woman convicted of conspiracy, who applied to Gov. Emmerson for executive clemency, were denied their petitions.

Four of the applicants were from Cook county. One is Mrs. Laura E. Price, formerly of the Seneca hotel, wife of a wealthy manufacturer. She is serving a six months' sentence in the county jail for participating in a fraudulent robbery staged to collect insurance on jewelry. About four months of her term has been completed.

The other Cook county petitioners denied clemency were Henry Wulff, serving one to ten years in the penitentiary for embezzling from the city, and Louis Spano and Roland Taylor, each serving a life term for murder.

YOUNG SLAYER OF SALESMAN GETS 33 YEARS

Everett Kappmeyer, 22 years old, testified before Judge John Prystalski in the Criminal court yesterday during his trial for the murder of Edward J. Wolf, automobile salesman, and confessed the slaying. After a few questions Judge Prystalski sentenced the youth to serve thirty-three years in the Joliet penitentiary.

After the sentence was passed, Attorney Barratt O'Hara, who represented the youthful slayer, revealed that Kappmeyer had confessed the slaying to him for the first time on the night before. Hearing of testimony in the case had begun yesterday.

"The only thing that held him back," said the attorney, "was that he didn't want his mother to know for certain that he was a murderer. He said he would rather die in the electric chair first."

Judge Prystalski asked the youth the reason for his crime.

"I needed money," Kappmeyer said. "I thought I could sell Wolf's car."

The slaying occurred on the night of April 11, 1930, when Kappmeyer went to an automobile salesroom at 10858 South Michigan avenue. He asked for a demonstration ride in a car. Wolf was found several hours later, dying, with a bullet in his chest, in the car, which had been wrecked against a tree at 86th street and Normal avenue.

WOMAN LEAPS TEN FLOORS TO DEATH IN LOOP

Miss Sarah Goldman, 28 years old, [illegible] South Racine avenue, was killed yesterday afternoon when she plunged from a sixteenth floor window in the Old Dearborn Bank building, 208 North Wabash avenue. Her body struck the roof of a six story building at 58 East Lake street.

Police found a washroom window open on the sixteenth floor of the bank building. Marks in the dust on the ledge indicated that Miss Goldman had crawled out and leaped, they said.

The body was identified by Morris Goldman, a brother. He said that his sister had been in ill health and despondent for some time.

FLAMES IN TWO PLANTS TANGLE STREET TRAFFIC

Fire which attacked two buildings, one on Hoyne avenue and the other on Leavitt street, tied up traffic in Grand avenue for nearly an hour last evening, and delayed many homeward bound workers.

The buildings housed the plants of the Pioneer Cooperage company, 446-50 North Hoyne avenue, and the Beck Box company, 447 North Leavitt street. They were damaged to the extent of $10,000, it was estimated by Marshal Martin Pierce of the second fire division.

The fire started in a pile of rubbish in a yard that separates the two buildings at the rear.

HUNGRY PUPILS STIR SPIRIT OF GIVING IN CITY

Receipts for Day $1,215; More Is Needed.

Cash contributions to the Hungry School Children's Fund will be received at the following Tribune offices: 1 South Dearborn street, 1101 East 63d street, and 4152 West Madison street.

BY KATHLEEN M'LAUGHLIN.

That most distressing of all spectacles, a hungry child, has stimulated Chicago to generous and quick response to the appeal in behalf of the thousands of school youngsters who have come breakfastless to their studies and gone home still fasting. Donations totaling $1,215.75 reached this newspaper yesterday, bringing the fund for this service to a present mark of $5,558.32. But many more thousands are needed.

Conservative estimates by Miss Frances L. Swain, director of home economics for the board of education, place the amount needed during the present school term at approximately $300,000. More than half of this total was furnished in quiet, unobtrusive assistance given to their pupils by the Chicago teachers last year when they had the money to give. Now that they haven't, the public is asked to take over this burden.

Meals Are Described.

The meal served to children from destitute homes was described yesterday by Miss Swain. Not only nourishing food, but warm food, is a necessity for the boys and girls whose parents cannot even afford to give them one square meal a day, and whose future development is being seriously impaired by their lack of nourishment.

"Here is a list of menus served at our 'penny lunches'," Miss Swain said. "It should be understood that they are called penny lunches because the cost of each item is about 1 cent —the cost of the entire meal is 5 cents on the average, in the elementary and kindergarten ages, but in the junior and senior high schools it will run to 15 cents.

"Number one menu includes vegetable soup, rye bread and butter, chocolate pudding and milk; number two, macaroni with hamburger, bread and butter, apple sauce and milk; number three, creamed potatoes and peas, graham bread and butter, fruit jello and milk; number four, lima beans, meat loaf, bread, apple and milk; number five, beef stew, bread, pineapple, and milk; and number six, mashed potato, sauerkraut, pork sausage, bread and milk.

Legion Supports Campaign.

Various and sundry comments and proffers of aid have been received since THE TRIBUNE announced the opening of the Hungry School Children's fund. One of the most enthusiastic indorsements came yesterday from the Cook county council of the American Legion, which not only passed a resolution approving of the fund but voted an immediate donation of $100 and future contributions to be made by each of the 140 posts, who will stage benefits separately for the fund.

"Child welfare for the Legion should consist of all phases of child care," declared Paul G. Armstrong, Cook county commander. "Permanently, we look after the children of world war veterans, but our work is not limited to them since we believe that the ultimate good of the country rests on the healthy growth of all young Americans."

Children Give to Fund.

More fortunate children yesterday proved that they wished to help when four children from the Edgewater Beach apartments turned over $18 they earned as proceeds of a play they produced. The young actresses were Betty McCauley, Virginia Powers, Barbara Watkins, and Betty Andres.

Five year old David MacFarlane yielded the contents of his penny bank, $4, for the fund, with the explanation by his aunt that "there was perhaps a tug to spend some of the money for toys, but David decided the hungry school children needed it all. He sends it so gladly and with such an ecstatic sense of achievement that we are sorry it is not more."

Pledge cards contain such notations as "There'll be more when I get my next pay check," the promise of a certain sum, "as long as I am employed," all telling their own story of how deeply the plight of these little victims of hard times have touched the general imagination. There is room for all that will be sent. Pledge coupons are printed in each edition, to be sent either with the cash, or with the future promise of whatever can be spared.

Hungry School Children Fund

There are 15,000 children who go to school hungry every morning. A dime a day will furnish a substantial daily meal for one child.

I will contribute $.........., weekly.........., monthly, or the enclosed donation. State school, if any, to which you prefer donation assigned.

HOPE TO REACH MILLION MARK IN DRIVE TODAY

The campaign to obtain $8,800,000 for the emergency relief of the unemployed and distressed of Cook county gained $124,061 yesterday. This brings the total pledges so far to $937,555, and Robert M. Hutchins, chairman of the special gifts division, hopes to have more than $1,000,000 pledged tonight.

The section of the special gifts division, headed by Max Epstein, reported added pledges yesterday of $85,253. Of this sum, the team captained by L. E. Block turned in $47,753, and the team of F. A. Preston, $19,500. Other team captains and amounts were Charles F. Glore, $9,000; Harold Swift, $8,500, and C. H. Kerwin, $500.

Another section of this same division, headed by George Scott, accounted for $38,035. Of this amount David F. Bremner turned in $3,835; Howard W. Fenton, $5,000; James R. Leavell, $21,700, and Robert E. Wood, $7,500.

In addition Paul Whiteman turned over $773.50 to Stuyvestant Peabody, chairman of the city-wide activities division. This check was the amount collected by the Edgewater Beach hotel for admission, cover charges, and flowers at a gala entertainment on the night of Sept. 26.

Another benefit entertainment will be a concert by Medinah's Oriental band at Medinah temple on Oct. 15. John Woolett is director of the band. A number of novelty musical acts also will be presented.

Immediately following the concert there will be dancing until midnight in Medinah banquet hall, for which there will be no additional charge. Admission to the concert and dance will be $1 per person.

J. Russell Forgan, chairman of the special benefits division of the Joint Emergency organization, called attention yesterday to the fact that this concert, as well as all other entertainments planned by the Shriners at Medinah temple for the benefit of the relief fund, are open to the general public, while usually such functions have been for members and their guests.

The general campaign for relief funds probably will be started within 10 days.

FATHER BELLMAN DIES.

Elizabethtown, Ill., Oct. 8.—(AP)—The Rev. Theodore Clement Bellman, 64, pastor of St. Joseph's Catholic church here, died in a hospital at Murphysboro yesterday after an illness of several days. Physicians said death resulted from typhoid fever. Funeral services will be held at St. Peter's cathedral at Belleville Monday morning.

GOVERNOR ASSERTS DATE OF SPECIAL SESSION IS NOT SET

Gov. Emmerson, in his suite at the Stevens hotel, declared last night there was no truth in rumors that a date had been set for the general assembly to meet in special session and consider revenue matters.

"The revenue commission," he said, "has indicated to me that it will have a report ready sometime between Oct. 15 and 25. But that does not mean the special session will be called at once."

His information on the progress of the revenue commission, the governor said, had been obtained in conversation with one or two of the members.

In a session last night behind closed doors the revenue commission progressed with its preparation of recommendations for legislative action. Reports of subcommittees and a discussion of bills that have been drafted occupied the commission until a late hour.

Among proposals which are said to represent the views of a number of the members are the following: Revision of the county taxing machinery, a state income tax, a sales tax on luxuries and tobacco, and limited bond issues for the taxing agencies which are in the most desperate straits.

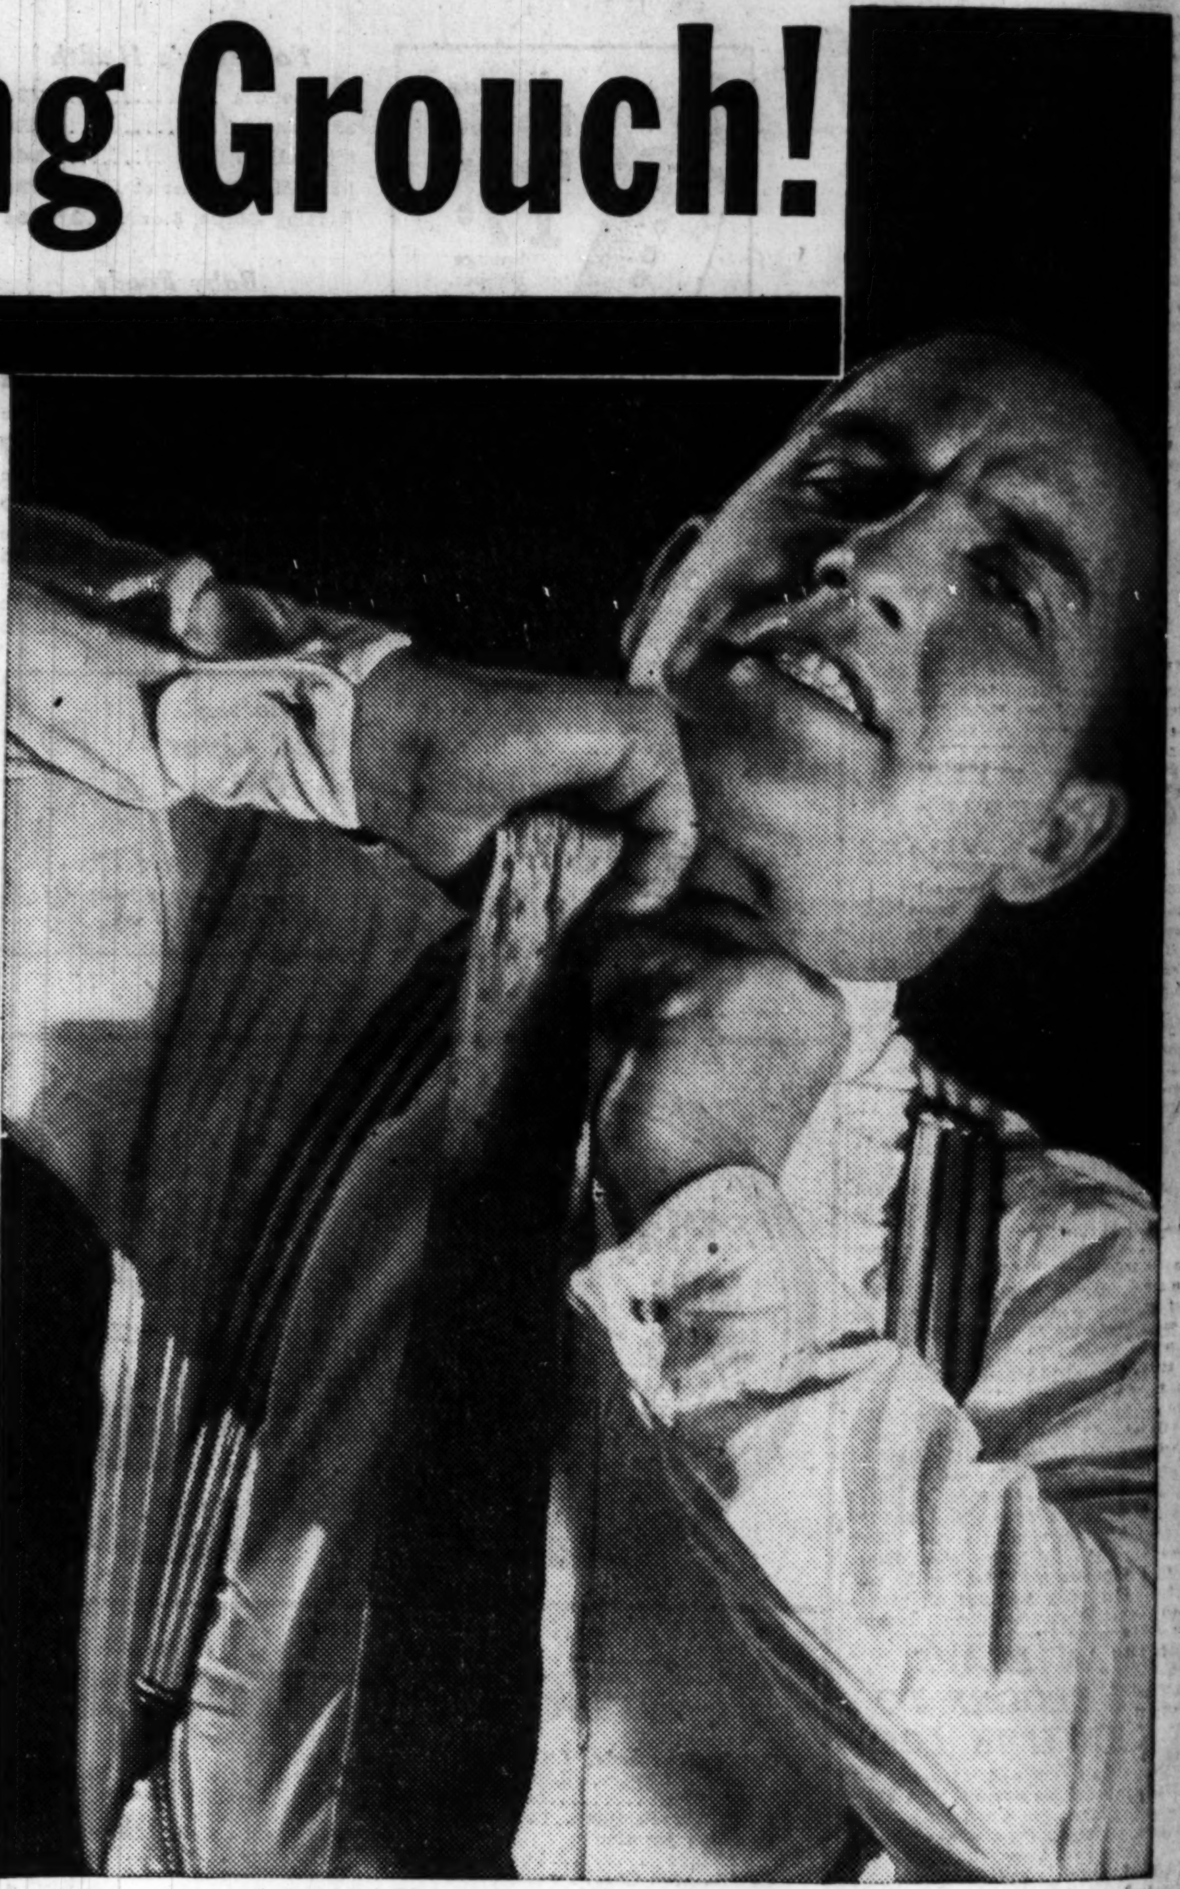
Morning Grouch!



MAY as well confess—a lot of us are like him!

Morning after morning we awake to find ourselves "on edge"—irritable, "jumpy." The smallest annoyance is a good excuse for "flying off the handle."

But usually the real cause is "bottled up" nerves. The result of the tension, the nerve strain, the unrelenting pressure of modern life.

It's surprising—how little it takes, sometimes, to relieve the tension!

Science, for example, has lately pointed out some interesting facts about chewing gum—and nerves.

Biochemical research has now proved that chewing gum is a definite help in smoothing out tense and tired nerves. Wrigley's actually aids in counteracting nervous tension, in promoting nervous relaxation.

You might try it out yourself. Thousands are convinced there's really something in it. When "nerves" are getting the best of you—try Wrigley's. See if it doesn't relieve the tension and help to make your little troubles fewer!

● If you really want to know: There are in that portion of the face directly connected with gum chewing, the trunks of the 5th or trigeminal nerve and also the 7th nerve. Gum chewing, which necessitates the massage and relaxation of these nerves (scientists say) definitely reduces nervous tension, promotes nervous relaxation.

Auto Salesman Slain by Boy

Tony Karahalios (left), who shot John Bowers to death, and his brother, George, who was with him at the time.

John Bowers, 31 years old, 857 Eastwood avenue, a salesman for the Norford Used Car Sales company at 1455 North Crawford avenue, was shot and fatally wounded by a 16 year old boy yesterday afternoon during the bargaining for a $25 automobile. His death occurred at the Keystone hospital.

The killer was Tony Karahalios, 1450 North Harding. With his 15 year old brother, George, and Richard Palazzo, 17 years old, 1349 North Springfield avenue, Tony engaged Bowers in conversation about the dilapidated flivver that had caught his eye. Bowers first demanded $30 and then $25. The youth offered $20.

Their minds failed to meet on the price and Tony drew a pistol and shot Bowers in the abdomen. The three youths fled, but George and Richard were captured by Sergt. Edward Kenealy of the detective bureau. They declared they did not know Tony had a pistol, adding there was no particular reason for the shooting, as the quarrel about price had not been heated. Tony was being sought last night.

BOY SLUGGED ON HEAD WITH GUN IN U. S. DRY RAID

Home Invasion Resisted by Roadhouse Keeper.

Buffalo, N. Y., Oct. 8.—[Special.]—One of the prohibition agents indicted for assaulting the son of an Irving hotel proprietor during a raid some time ago, figured in a foray on the home of Charles Robinson, Bennett road, Cheektowaga, early today, in which a 14 year old boy was slugged on the head with a gun and several other persons were injured.

At the conclusion of the free for all fight, which was the climax of a series of eleven raids beginning at midnight, the raiders arrested Robinson for a prohibition law violation and for assault for allegedly attacking the federal agents. The raiders announced they had seized a completely equipped wildcat brewery in Robinson's home.

Right to Resist Invasion.

Robinson asserted he had a right to resist the invasion of his home by dry agents because they had been unable to produce a search warrant. The agents are James Mahoney, involved in the Irving raid, and Thomas Saber.

Police Chief Cappola of Cheektowaga, said the boy slugged with the gun was Samuel Gloss, a nephew of Robinson.

Robinson told Chief Cappola that the dry agents twice visited his Bennett road house.

"The fight occurred on the first visit of the agents," Chief Cappola said. "When Robinson asked one of the agents to see the search warrant and advanced to look at it, the raider struck Robinson in the face. Robinson swung back at him and a general fight ensued.

Boy Hit by Agent.

"Young Gloss was hit by one of the agents, who chased him from the house. Robinson was taken to Cheektowaga headquarters by the dry agents and arrested on an assault charge. When he was released on bail he went home and to bed.

"While Robinson was asleep they returned with state troopers. They started to knock in the door, although Robinson said he would come down stairs and open it. He did open it and they produced a warrant obtained from U. S. Commissioner Harry Harding at 2 a. m., so they could not have had a warrant when they appeared the first time and attacked Robinson."

Mahoney and two other prohibition agents, Fred Wilson and Edward [Big Case] Baker, were indicted recently by the Chautauqua county grand jury for second degree assault after an alleged attack upon Alton Baird, 24, during a raid on his father's hotel in Irving. Baird alleged he suffered concussion of the brain from a blow struck by the raiders.

Later, upon motion of U. S. Attorney Richard H. Templeton, Federal Judge John Knight ordered the case transferred to the jurisdiction of the federal court.

MICHIGAN CHEMIST FINDS LIQUOR IS BAD, BUT DEMAND LARGE

Lansing, Mich., Oct. 8.—[Special.]—An unconscious indictment of prohibition was delivered today to Oscar Olander, commissioner of public safety, by W. C. Geagley, state analyst, in an official report on his recent operations in analyzing samples of Volstead era intoxicants seized in state police raids.

"From our examination of these specimens," Geagley's report states, "so far it is very evident that legitimate alcoholic liquors can no longer be obtained except for medicinal purposes; nevertheless there exists a wide market for alcoholic liquors.

"To satisfy the market the business of bootlegging, intrinsically a crooked business, is naturally drawing its supplies from crooked sources. Smuggling, cheating, illicit distilling, redistillation, cutting, filthy fermentation, and diversion of industrial material are furnishing the necessary alcohol for the usual type of alcoholic beverage now being trafficked in.

MARTIN & MARTIN HAVE LEARNED TO NEVER ASK A BOY

Mrs. Sylvia Martin, 8941 Commercial avenue, and her husband, Jack, proprietor of a clothing store, went out in their new car to buy some fish last night. They had bought 15 gallons of gasoline on Tuesday with the car and the supply ran out just as they reached the fish market at the 92d street bridge over the Calumet river.

The car stopped and Mrs. Martin went in for the fish. When she came out her car and husband were gone. She asked a boy standing nearby what had become of Mr. Martin.

"Some men took him for a ride," said the lad.

Mrs. Martin went to the South Chicago police who said it was a pity and that they'd take her in a flivver and tour around and try to find her husband. They went back to the fish market and he was not there. So they toured some more.

A little after that Mr. Martin, who had merely had a kind motorist push him to a filling station, went back to the fish market and, not seeing his wife, asked the same boy who was so good at giving directions where she was.

"Some men in a yellow car kidnaped her," was the reply.

So Mr. Martin called the South Chicago police to report the second mysterious Martin disappearance and in a little while the husband and wife and the car and the fish were all together again.

SIX PARTIES OPEN DRIVE TO WIN BRITISH ELECTION

Baldwin Urges a Tariff to Save Nation.

BY JOHN STEELE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Oct. 8.—Six little parties, all in a row, opened their headquarters in London today to participate in the general election campaign. Whether they will drop out one by one, or all in a heap, there will nevertheless be only one on top at the conclusion of Oct. 27—Great Britain's election day.

CYNTHIA MOSLEY.
[U. S. A. Photo.]

The parties involved are the Conservative, Labor, the old fashioned Liberal, National Liberal, headed by Sir John Simon, Fenner Brockway's National Labor party, and finally Sir Oswald Mosley's New party.

Lady Cynthia on Sidelines.

Lady Cynthia Mosley has dropped out of active participation in the campaign because of ill health and her husband has announced that he will run about fifty more candidates if the money can be found. The old fashioned Liberals had hoped to have about fifty candidates in the field, but their hopes were dashed today when it was announced there would be no money from the famous David Lloyd George fund, and that Lloyd George himself would take no part in the election except in his own constituency of Carnarvon.

Lloyd George's son, Maj. Gwilym Lloyd George, resigned today from the office of parliamentary secretary to the board of trade, declaring that his reasons were entirely personal. But it is generally accepted that he was obeying his father's orders. At the same time, both he and his sister, Miss Megan Lloyd George, announce they will run as plain Liberals without the brand of either section.

MacDonald Obtains Fund.

The National Laborites, who will support Prime Minister MacDonald, will enter about fifty candidates, and Mr. MacDonald has secured a fund to finance them. The Conservatives and Arthur Henderson's Laborites expect to nominate about five hundred candidates each.

Prime Minister MacDonald will leave tomorrow for Chequers, his country residence, for a short rest. On Monday he will go to Seaham, his own constituency, to open his campaign, remaining there a few days. He will then turn over the management of his campaign to his daughter, Ishbel, who will also find spare time to make some speeches for her brother, Malcolm MacDonald, at Bassetlaw.

Baldwin Begs for Victory.

Stanley Baldwin, Conservative leader and lord president of the cabinet council, tonight issued his election manifesto to the Tories.

"Nothing can save us from ultimate bankruptcy unless our national trade account is balanced," he said.

Urging the necessity of a stable national government and bringing it victory with a sweeping majority, Mr. Baldwin's manifesto said:

"We must shrink from no steps to prove the stability of our country and to save our people from disaster resulting from a lack of confidence at home and abroad. Tariffs are essential as they are the quickest and most effective weapons, not only to reduce excessive imports, but also to enable us to induce other countries to lower their tariff walls."

The Labor party, closing its convention at Scarborough today, rejected a motion pledging itself not to take office again as a minority party. It declares it will take office under any conditions offered.

Retired Conductor, 83, Recalls Big Fire of 1871

F. M. Frary, 83 years old, retired conductor of the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy railroad, will observe today the anniversary of the date in 1871 when, employed as a brakeman he came into Chicago over burning tracks in the great fire. The Burlington's Chicago passenger terminal was then on the lake front at the foot of Randolph street, the tracks being laid on piles, which had been ignited in the blaze. Mr. Frary, who worked for the Burlington for fifty-one years, lives at the Berwyn hotel in Berwyn.

CARDINAL HERE

[TRIBUNE Photo.]

Cardinal Dennis J. Dougherty of Philadelphia stopped in Chicago between trains yesterday. He was on his way to Seattle to take part in several ecclesiastical ceremonies. He received a representative of Cardinal Mundelein, who is at St. Mary of the Lake seminary in Mundelein, before departing.

"Chicago seems to be growing," said Cardinal Dougherty. "Every time I pass through I find new skyscrapers and new improvements. I shall always remember the Eucharistic congress as the sweetest of all my visits here."

Cardinal Dougherty will dedicate the new St. Edward's college in Seattle on Oct. 18. Dr. John Fenton, president of the college, met him at the train here.

ANNIVERSARY OF FIRE OBSERVED BY CIVIC GROUPS

Many civic organizations yesterday held luncheons and meetings to commemorate the sixtieth anniversary of the Chicago fire which virtually destroyed the city in 1871. At the Kiwanis club luncheon in Hotel Sherman a number of witnesses to the fire vividly recalled the immediate days of destructiton and the period of reconstruction. Among the speakers were Judge Henry Horner of the Probate court, whose parents were residents of Chicago at the time; Nicholas Weinand and Isaac Adler, members of the fire department in 1871, and Emil Rudolph, an old resident.

SPAIN DEBATES FATE OF CHURCH; SEE BITTER ROW

Catholics Ready to Fight Expulsion Proposal.

BY JAY ALLEN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MADRID, Oct. 8.—There was a spirit of compromise in the air tonight when the long awaited debate on the Spanish republic's most dangerous issue, the place of religions and specifically the future of the Catholic church in the new order of things in Spain, began in the parliament tonight.

The prospect, not only of the government blowing up, but also of a regular revolt in the north is considered quite possible if the constitutional project, which states—"The state will entertain no official religion"—is allowed to stand. That the Catholics will not stand for the expulsion of their religious orders and the confiscation of church property was indicated when the diehard Catholic deputy, Dimas Madariaga, said in the hall of the cortes tonight:

"Let nobody think the Catholics in northern Spain will ever allow religious orders to be driven across the frontier. The army would have to be sent north."

Fernando de Los Rios, Socialist minister of justice, began the debate.

"The separation of church and state is necessary because the civil government must be supreme over other organizations," he said, "and Spain today renounces the maintenance of the Catholic church."

When Madariaga shouted that the Catholics would fight to defend the church, De Los Rios pointed his finger at him and cried:

"Remember, if you sound the drums of war, you will be conquered again!"

According to the minister of justice, the government is planning to pension 25,000 priests and will otherwise suppress the annual church budget.

ONE KILLED, 3 HURT ON SPEAKEASY RAID LED BY A WOMAN

New York, Oct. 8.—[Special.]—Mathilde Prasch, 52, today led three of her retainers into a speakeasy in Sixth street on a mission of vengeance. There followed a wild battle. When police arrived they found the speakeasy a shambles and victims lying all about.

Mrs. Prasch, who had paid $500 for a partnership in the speakeasy without being told that it was about to be padlocked, was unconscious behind the bar, her scalp cut and her face bruised. Lying beside a parked car outside was Richard Gebert, 38, with a stab wound in his throat. He died before an ambulance arrived. In a rear room was Robert Hess, 38, another of Mathilde's followers, sitting in a chair with a wound in his back and his face and body slashed. Upstairs, in an apartment vacated by frightened occupants, police found the third of Mathilda's crew washing blood from knife slashes on his arms and face. He is Oliver Te Laka, 42.

Police started a search for Mike Barsch, the proprietor of the place, accused by the woman and her two surviving aids, all of whom were arrested, of double dealing.

REAL SHELLS AND BOMBS USED IN MIMIC WARFARE

Thousand See U. S. Army Test New Weapons.

Aberdeen Proving Grounds, Md., Oct. 8.—(AP)—Mimic warfare, but with real shells, bullets, and bombs intermixed with blank charges, raged over all "fronts" of the army's vast testing ground for ordnance material today in honor of the 13th annual gathering of the Army Ordnance association.

Every type of post-war gun development, from automatic shoulder rifles to 16 inch coast defense guns with a 30 mile range, played its part in the show.

Thousands Watch Spectacle.

A crowd of several thousand spectators, in addition to the reservist ordnance men and high ranking army and navy personnel, witnessed the gun demonstrations.

A battery of four 3 inch "archies," controlled by the electrical devices developed since the war, blasted the clouds about a sleeve target towed by a plane at an elevation of 10,000 feet. One shell burst so close to the target that the back end was torn out and ragged streamers of fabric marked its remaining flight.

A moment later a group of machine guns further riddled the sleeve at a lower altitude, the arching stream of the blazing tracer bullets sketching a fiery display against low-hanging thunderclouds.

Test Anti-Aircraft Device.

The only other test of marksmanship included was the newest anti-aircraft device, counter bombing by a swift attack plane against a towed sleeve target representing a bombardment plane group bound on a mission of destruction.

Swooping from the higher clouds where it lurked beyond reach of the bombers' defensive machine gun fire, the attack plane loosed a bomb timed to explode in the midst of the bombardment formation flying 1,000 feet below, 2,000 up from the ground. The flare of the explosion came almost on the tail of the target.

Included in the demonstration was a simulated infantry advance with the latest word in armored cars, tanks and motorized artillery blasting a road for the doughboys. It was replete with smoke screens laid both by guns and planes.

MURRAY TO REOPEN OKLAHOMA OIL WELLS TOMORROW MORNING

Oklahoma City, Okla., Oct. 8.—(AP)—Gov. William H. Murray announced tonight he would open Oklahoma's flush oil fields Saturday morning at 7 o'clock.

The announcement was made after a conference with operators representing the Oklahoma City and greater Seminole areas, curbed under military orders since Aug. 5.

A formal order will be issued tomorrow morning, the governor said. The fields will continue under military rule and wells will be prorated to meet market demands. Price was not a factor in lifting the shutdown, the governor said. Murray vainly sought to increase the price of petroleum to $1 a barrel before reopening the oil fields.

Lieut. Col. Cicero I. Murray, the governor's cousin, in charge of the shutdown, said Saturday would be the earliest possible reopening date.

THEY'RE MILDER. The best Turkish and Domestic tobacco that money can buy is put into Chesterfield. Chesterfield tobacco is the finest-textured, the smoothest and ripest that grows—ripened and sweetened in the sunshine, cured right by the farmer and aged right for two years in wooden hogsheads. Mellow—and wonderfully mild!

THEY TASTE BETTER. These mild, smooth tobaccos are put together exactly right. The aroma of Turkish, the mellow sweetness of Domestic—blended and cross-blended. How it's done is Chesterfield's secret—but millions know how much better it tastes!

THEY'RE PURE. Everything that goes into Chesterfield is tested by expert chemists. The purest, finest cigarette paper made; a clean, tight-sealed package. "Pure as the water you drink."

THEY SATISFY. The package...neat, clean. The cigarettes...well-filled. The paper ... pure white. And with your very first puff, you notice they taste better. Pleasing and satisfying—Chesterfields just seem to suit you, right down to the ground.

Four hits—four good things about every Chesterfield cigarette. Remember: They are Milder—Taste Better—Pure—Satisfy.

GOOD... they've got to be good!

MAYOR WALKER NOW CLASSED BY SEABURY AS "OBSTRUCTIONIST"

SAMUEL SEABURY.

New York, Oct. 8.—[Special.]—Samuel Seabury today abandoned his policy of formal silence regarding Mayor James J. Walker and charged the city's chief magistrate with a definite policy of obstruction to the Hofstadter legislative committee, joining him thus with other leaders of Tammany hall.

Mr. Seabury brought the fight over the city-wide investigation out into the open before Supreme Court Justice Edward J. Glennon at a hearing which marked the beginning of the long awaited fight over the constitutionality of the committee's private examination.

The test came as a result of a show cause order obtained by Minthrone T. Gordon, president of the Tompkins Bus Corporation of Staten Island, who had been supoenaed for appearance before one of the closed sessions of the committee.

"I have met every obstruction in this investigation," said Mr. Seabury. "Even the mayor of the city of New York has kept his business agent, Russell T. Sherwood, out of the committee's jurisdiction."

There was no decision on the validity of the private hearings today. Justice Glennon, at the request of Flynn L. Andrew, attorney for Mr. Gordon, postponed argument until Tuesday at 10 a. m.

WHOLE TOWN IN ON COPS' SECRET; PLOT TRAP FAILS

A dozen policemen from the state's attorney's office set a trap at midnight last night for extortionists who demanded $5,000 from Frank Rende of 2911 Lombard avenue, Franklin Park. The only hitch to the trap was that the entire town seemingly was in on the secret.

Long before midnight, and for an hour afterward, machines carrying townspeople passed back and forth in Grand avenue and by the Simonson Lumber company, at the Indiana Harbor Belt tracks, in front of which the money was to be hidden. A dummy package was placed, but the blackmailers never appeared.

KIRKLAND CASE MURDER TRIAL INQUIRY URGED

Petitioners Hold Youth's Sentence Too Light.

Indianapolis, Ind., Oct. 8.—[Special.]—An investigation of the trials of Virgil Kirkland, Gary youth, for the rape and murder of Arlene Draves, Gary high school girl, was promised to a delegation of Gary citizens here today by James M. Ogden, Indiana attorney general, if the citizens can show reasonable proof of irregularities.

"I myself regard that case as a travesty of justice," Ogden told the delegation, which presented a petition signed by 5,200 Lake county citizens protesting the one to ten year sentence Kirkland received and demanding that the case be reopened.

The petitioners originally proposed to demand resignation or removal of Grant Crumpacker, judge of the Porter County Circuit court at Valparaiso, who presided at both trials when they were taken from Lake county on a change of venue, but attorneys consulted advised against this and reopening of the case was then petitioned.

Jurors Are Interviewed.

A representative of the petitioners has interviewed nine of the twelve members of the second Kirkland jury, Ogden was told, and they all said they did not realize they were voting for a light sentence for Kirkland. The other three jurors refused to be interviewed. Ogden asked that the petitioners get a written and sworn report of these interviews and send it to him.

The petitioners charged that Chicago newspapers partly financed the Kirkland defense. Ogden said he would investigate any possibility of misuse of money in the case. The delegation was composed of A. Howard Bell, auditor of the Gary city school board; the Rev. M. G. Schuster; William H. Williams, Gary contractor; M. H. Fuller, president of a Gary civic club; Irvin R. McClelland, Gary attorney, and Mrs. Charles M. Swisher and Mrs. W. P. Alexander, representing the Lake county W. C. T. U.

Kirkland was sentenced at the second trial to one to ten years at the Indiana reformatory in connection with the death of the girl who died following a liquor party in Gary which she attended with Kirkland, last Thanksgiving. He was convicted the first time on a charge which carried a life sentence, but Judge Crumpacker granted a motion for a new trial. Judge Crumpacker's son was a defense attorney at both trials. The state contended the girl died as a result of rape.

A letter accompanying the petition sets out that the petitioners do not believe Judge Crumpacker should have presided at the trial when his son was a defense attorney and adds: "There are other circumstances which indicate to us that these matters cannot go unchallenged."

Obligation Is Seen.

"It is imperative that the people maintain confidence in the courts," the letter says. "In order that this may be the courts must merit that confidence. We are asking that you use whatever powers you possess to investigate this trial. We are convinced that there is an obligation on the state of Indiana to do all in her power to maintain confidence in the courts, not only for her own sake, but for the sake of the entire nation."

The letter also says: "The people of Indiana were astounded at the short sentence given Kirkland."

The group which circulated the petition said that approximately 96 per cent of the persons approached signed the petition.

Shot by Police When He Flees in Stolen Cab

William Walker, 24 years old, 3159 North Cicero avenue, said to be an ex-convict, was grazed on the scalp by a police bullet and captured early this morning while riding in a stolen Yellow cab. His companion escaped. The cab was stolen from 63d and Halsted streets. It was sighted in Diversey avenue at Kilbourn avenue by Policemen James Lavin and Albert Magoon of the Sheffield avenue station. They chased the machine for five miles. The pursuit ended in front of 3649 North Leclaire avenue when the cab overturned. Police fired half a dozen shots during the chase.

Way to Get At a Cold Is Through the Bowels

As soon as you catch cold, the pores close; perspiration is checked. Gases and waste can't escape through the skin. That's why your doctor's first advice is a mild laxative like cascara. Medical authorities agree it actually strengthens bowel muscles. You get cascara in its most pleasant form in candy Cascarets.

Remember this when you catch cold; whenever breath is bad; tongue coated; or you're headachy, bilious, constipated.

Why resort to harsher things when Cascarets activate the bowels so quickly, so harmlessly and pleasantly—and cost only a dime?

ROCKFORD BACKS WEST SIDE ROAD ELEVATION PLAN

Mayor for Project, with Others to Share.

BY HAL FOUST.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Rockford, Ill., Oct. 8.—[Special.]—Mayor J. H. Hallstrom today indorsed Chicago's West Side Elevated highway with a reservation that other cities of Illinois, including Rockford, should receive proportionate benefits from the gasoline tax revenue at the same time. At a luncheon called by the Chicago Motor club the mayor announced he will introduce a resolution before his city council petitioning Gov. Emmerson to include in the call for a special session of the legislature this fall consideration of a reapportionment of the gasoline tax revenue.

"Rockford," said Mr. Hallstrom, "like every other city west of Chicago, would benefit appreciably through the construction of the West Side Elevated highway, shortening the driving time between the cities and reducing the hazards of the journey. However, I would be opposed to the state's appropriating for this project without other cities likewise receiving improved traffic facilities in return for the money collected from the city automobile owners.

All in Same Position.

"All the cities of Illinois are in the same position as Chicago, with the state draining their resources through the license fees and gasoline tax and getting nothing in return but traffic, which in most cases is a deficit and not an asset to the communities.

"The automobile owners of Rockford, for example, pay $1,200,000 in taxes for roads without a penny being spent in the city limits. This is $348,000 more than the entire corporate tax levy.

"From an engineering, and from a traffic, and from a safety, and from an unemployment relief standpoint there could be nothing of more benefit to Chicago and to northern Illinois than the construction of the Austin-Kinzie elevated highway. But it should be financed and constructed by the city with a one cent return from the two cents of the gasoline tax which the state now retains.

Proposes Three Way Split.

"The petition which I shall introduce to the city council will petition Gov. Emmerson to authorize the special session of the legislature to consider an apportionment of the 3 cent gas tax, 1 cent to the counties, 1 cent to the municipality, and 1 cent to the state, such as advocated by the Illinois League of Municipalities. I'm sure Chicago would build the elevated highway with its 1 cent share."

"I wouldn't like to have Chicago salved with an allotment of state highway money," said L. A. Wilson, city engineer of Rockford, "without the other cities also receiving something. Chicago, because of its size, can be the champion in the interest of all municipalities, a champion against abuses from rural downstate administration."

Hugh McEarchran, supervisor of Rockford township, spoke of the benefits to Rockford and to Chicago to be obtained by bringing the cities closer together through the construction of the elevated highway. Rockford, a city of 80,000 and with a population of 102,000, including its suburbs, is 90 miles from Chicago on the Lake street highway route Illinois No. 5, one of the ten state highways which would feed traffic into Chicago over the continuous grade separation. The driving time between the cities would be reduced twenty-five minutes by the improvement.

RESCUE ADMIRAL AND ORPHANS AS SHIP SINKS BOAT

Norfolk, Va., Oct. 8.—[Special.]—Rear Admiral Newton A. McCully, retired and five Russian orphan children he adopted in 1925, were rescued from certain death in Chesapeake bay near the mouth of the Potomac river at 1 o'clock this morning, after a small boat in which they were en route to Norfolk was run down and sunk by the Norwegian fruit steamer Verona.

Two life boats from the Verona were lowered immediately after the crash and picked up every one who was on the small boat. The McCully boat was a converted submarine chaser which had been named "Chaika" by McCully. The children, the oldest of whom was 16, were Ninotchaka, Tonia, and Lupmilla, all girls, and Nickola and Feodor, boys. Ninotchaka, 16, suffered a severe injury to her left leg and she was the last one picked out of the bay. She was swimming bravely when one of the life boats found her. A small black dog, which was on the Chaika, was also rescued. The dog was swimming close to Ninotchaka.

Walter Stella, Steamship Agent, Is Heart Victim

Walter D. Stella, 57 years old, a steamship agent with offices at 180 North Michigan avenue, died yesterday in Passavant hospital shortly after he had been stricken by a heart attack in his office. He was married, and lived at 1221 Pratt boulevard.

MRS. BERTHA T. CHRISTENSEN, 94 years old, died yesterday at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. Philip H. Scholl, 10415 Avenue L. Mrs. Christensen was born in Norway and came to America 48 years ago.

Carl Conzelmann, Retired Printing Plant Owner, Dies

Carl G. Conzelmann, retired printing company owner, died Wednesday night in his residence at 4040 Mango avenue, after a long illness. He was 84 years old. Mr. Conzelmann came to Chicago from Germany in 1881, and for forty years maintained a printing business. Surviving Mr. Conzelmann are his widow, Kunigunda; two daughters, Mrs. Bertha Schultz, and Mrs. Ida Peulausk; two sisters, and three brothers.

CALLS MR. O'GARA "MY GOOD MAN"; SEIZED AS THIEF

Max Leitz, 24 years old, 1442 North Dearborn street, who demonstrated on July 27 that the Bridewell was not escape proof—he and a fellow prisoner crawled out through a drain pipe—was arrested last night when he tried to be lordly with a policeman.

Leitz drove up to the curb at Erie street and Milwaukee avenue when the large automobile in which he was riding developed a flat tire. Standing there was Policeman John O'Gara of the West Chicago avenue station.

"Please watch my car, my good man," he remarked, "while I go for a repairman."

As he walked away O'Gara went to a telephone and asked if an automobile with the license numbers of the one at the corner had been stolen. It had. Leitz had taken it, along with $19 and a watch, from Harry Stein of 5218 Drexel avenue during the afternoon. Policeman O'Gara arrested Leitz when he returned.

Leitz is an ex-convict. He was the sweetheart of Peggy O'Neil, 24 years old, who was shot and killed on Aug. 30 in front of 915 Sunnyside avenue. The police are to question him about her death. The couple occupied an apartment together at 1070 Thorndale avenue after his escape from the Bridewell.

Two Cops Held on Attack Charge by Colored Woman

Policeman Herbert Haerle, 34 years old, and John Roddy, also 34, both attached to the radio room in the South State street station, were held last night at their own station on complaint of Miss Ella Arrabitto, 30 years old, colored, of 1443 South State street. She charges Haerle raped her Sunday and that Roddy was an accessory. Both men will be arraigned in felony court this morning, Capt. John Prendergast announced.

Von Kunits, Toronto Symphony Director, Dies

TORONTO, Oct. 8.—(AP)—Luigi von Kunits, conductor of the Toronto Symphony orchestra since it was founded in 1923, died today. He was born in Vienna in 1870, was educated at the University of Vienna and the Vienna Conservatory of Music, and came to Toronto in 1912. He is survived by his widow, formerly Miss Harriett Jane Gittings of Pittsburgh, Pa., two daughters, and a son.

Odd Fellows Ex-Official Killed in Auto Accident

St. Joseph, Mo., Oct. 8.—(AP)—Lucien J. Eastin, 63, former grand sire of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and a prominent St. Joseph attorney, was killed today in a motor car accident between St. Joseph and Kansas City.

COUPLE KILLED WHEN TRAIN STRIKES AUTO

George N. Bacon, 62 years old, owner of an interior decorating concern in Champaign, Ill., and his wife, Alice, 60 years old, were killed instantly yesterday when their automobile was struck by a New York Central freight train on the Michigan Central tracks at the crossing of route 49, two miles west of Chicago Heights. Their car was carried 300 feet.

Mr. and Mrs. Bacon had been visiting their son-in-law, Charles B. Nolte, and his wife, at their home, 7439 Yates avenue. Nolte is president of the Robert W. Hunt company, an engineering concern at 175 West Jackson boulevard.

These deaths and four others raised the year's toll for Cook county to 958. The victims:

Nathan Kerman, 44 years old, 4241 Grenshaw street. Died in St. Elizabeth's hospital from injuries suffered on Wednesday when run down at Western and Milwaukee avenues.

Frank Podobinski, 72 years old, 13140 Baltimore avenue, a junkman. Fatally injured when struck by an automobile as he was pushing a wheelbarrow in Torrence avenue near 124th street.

Thomas Manuel, 11 years old, 7222 South Ashland avenue. Died in Holy Cross hospital from injuries received yesterday when he was struck by an automobile as he was playing football in the street in front of his home. The car was driven by William Kopulos, 1420 West 69th street, who was held pending the inquest.

William Rogers, 55, 5804 North Mason avenue. Died early this morning in Belmont hospital from injuries he received last night when, to avoid striking another automobile, he swerved his machine and struck a Milwaukee avenue street car headon. The accident happened on Milwaukee avenue, between Mason and Markham avenues.

ANALYZE GERM THAT LAID LOW 119 STUDENTS

Lafayette, Ind., Oct. 8.—[Special.]—Bacterium enteriditis, a para-typhoid germ, played the part of villain at Purdue university's recent supper party at Cary hall for men, where 119 freshman and sophomore students were taken violently ill after eating chicken salad.

Completion of the chemical and bacteriological analysis was announced this evening. The bacteriologists found the germ in the salad and said growth of the organism was due to the chicken spoiling on account of insufficient refrigeration.

THE WORLD'S GREATEST NEWSPAPER

STATUE IS UNVEILED IN BLOOMINGTON OF GENERAL A. GRIDLEY

Bloomington, Ill., Oct. 8.—[Special.]—Memoralizing Gen. Asahel Gridley, Bloomington's first millionaire, fellow soldier with Abraham Lincoln during the Black Hawk war, and long a banker and industrial promoter of this city, a statue in the rotunda of the McLean county court house was dedicated this afternoon.

The sculptor was Oskar J. W. Hansen of Chicago. The memorial was a gift to the community by the only surviving child of Gen. Gridley, Mrs. Mary Bell of Lake Geneva, Wis. Mrs. Bell was present and unveiled the statue following several addresses.

The dedication took place on the one hundredth anniversary of the arrival in Bloomington of Gen. Gridley from New York to open a small store in the primitive settlement.

The career of Gridley was reviewed by Dr. John Wesley Hill of Washington, D. C., chancellor of Lincoln university, Harrogate, Tenn.

Other speakers on the dedicatory program included Judge Louis G. Fitzhenry of the federal court, and former Gov. Joseph W. Fifer, both of whom knew Gridley.

DEPUTY STORMS, IT SEEMS, IS AN "ARRESTING" MAN

With the formal installation of Lieut. Walter Storms as acting deputy chief of detectives, it became known last night that he was, in the words of a colleague, the "arresting-est" man on the force.

Records show that Deputy Storms has arrested more than 13,000 persons. These arrests cover only his years as a patrolman. As a sergeant and as a lieutenant he has increased his arrest list.

Deputy Storms joined the department on Nov. 20, 1920. He became a sergeant on Dec. 24, 1927, and was made a lieutenant on April 16, 1929. He has been given eighteen creditable mentions, and has received $9,900 in rewards. He is also one of the winners of THE TRIBUNE'S monthly award of $100 for bravery. His detective work has assisted in sending 250 men to prison, and two to the gallows.

From the date he first wore a police uniform, Storms kept a record of each arrest and disposition of each case. He also has kept scores of letters from citizens regarding his work, and these, along with official documents bearing on his career, are stowed away in a safe in the detective bureau.

RITES TOMORROW FOR CAPT. EVANS, POLICE VETERAN

Funeral services for Capt. Michael P. Evans, veteran member of the Chicago police department, will be held at 10 a. m. tomorrow at St. Barnabas' Catholic church, 101st street and Longwood drive, from the family home, 9812 South Damen avenue. Burial will be at Mount Olivet cemetery.

Capt. Evans died early Wednesday at the Little Company of Mary hospital following an operation. He was 84 years old. Capt. Evans entered the police department in 1881, and was the founder of the department's bureau of identification, which he had headed for 47 years.

Storm Sweeps N. Y. City; Heavy Property Damage

New York, Oct. 8.—[Special.]—Rain and electrical storms which swept over the city this afternoon flooded streets, interrupted street car service in several sections, caused streets to cave in at two places and did much other damage.

TEXAS' COTTON PLAN ADOPTED BY ARKANSAS

Little Rock, Ark., Oct. 8.—(AP)—The Arkansas senate late today defeated the Long plan for a cotton holiday in 1932 after both houses of the legislature had passed identical bills embodying the main provisions of the Texas cotton acreage reduction law. The vote was 19 to 10.

The senate approved the plan, 30 to 0. The house earlier had taken the same action, 80 to 5.

Each house voted on its own bill. One of them has to pass both houses before going to the governor. They provide for restriction of the cotton acreage in 1932 and 1933 to 30 per cent of the land in cultivation this year.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—WITHOUT CALOMEL

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

If you feel sour and sunk and the world looks punk, don't swallow a lot of salts, mineral water, oil, laxative candy or chewing gum and expect them to make you suddenly sweet and buoyant and full of sunshine.

For they can't do it. They only move the bowels and a mere movement doesn't get at the cause. The reason for your down-and-out feeling is your liver. It should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily.

If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You have a thick, bad taste and your breath is foul, skin often breaks out in blemishes. Your head aches and you feel down and out. Your whole system is poisoned.

It takes those good, old CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." They contain wonderful, harmless, gentle vegetable extracts, amazing when it comes to making the bile flow freely.

But don't ask for liver pills. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Look for the name Carter's Little Liver Pills on the red label. Resent a substitute. 25c at all stores. © 1931 C. M. Co.

LABOR DEMANDS CONGRESS PROBE OF HOOVER DAM

Charges Condition of Workers Is "Fearful."

VANCOUVER, B. C., Oct. 8.—(AP)—Describing the Hoover dam project as a "$700,000,000 outrage project," representatives of many trades and crafts appeared before the resolutions committee of the American Federation of Labor convention here today and demanded a congressional investigation.

A public hearing of the resolutions committee was called to hear proponents of three resolutions protesting working conditions at the dam project and demanding withholding of further appropriations by congress for the work.

The committee, after hearing reports of allegedly "inhuman" sanitary conditons at the project, decided to await a copy of the contract of Six Companies, Inc., builders, before taking any action on the resolutions.

Charges Wages Are Low.

Delegates testifying before the committee, charged Six Companies with lowering the wage scale on the project, refusing to give ex-service men and United States citizens preference in employment and fostering "fearful" conditions among the workers.

J. W. Bussell, Los Angeles, complained that the secretary of the interior let the Boulder Dam project eight days before the Davis bill to regulate wages on government projects went into effect.

"It should be called the Hoover dam," he said, "so that responsibility for it will rest squarely upon the administration."

J. T. Thorpe, San Francisco, said Six Companies paid low wages, that the men worked in "fearful heat, paying $1 to $1.50 for meals and 15 cents for insurance," and that the "commissary pays Six Companies for the concession."

"Driven Beyond Endurance."

"The men carry their own water. They are driven beyond endurance," said Thorpe. "Several have been killed and injured.

"We fear that if this continues it will affect the giant Los Angeles aqueduct and eventually break down the wage scale all along the Pacific coast."

During the morning session of the convention, British fraternal delegates voiced a vigorous defense of unemployment insurance and the dole. President William Green commented that conditions in America and Great Britain were different and methods practicable in one country might not apply in another.

INSULL LINES IN INDIANA GO TO 3 CENTS A MILE

Indianapolis, Ind., Oct. 8.—[Special.]—A general revision of fares charged by electric interurban railroads operated by the Indiana railroad, an Insull organization, is asked in a petition filed with the Indiana public service commission.

While one way adult fares will remain mostly as they are, a 10 per cent reduction is proposed for round trip tickets and numerous special mileage book rates are proposed.

Because several of the rates represent increases between certain towns, the public service commission has ordered a hearing here before November 16, when the rates are proposed to go into effect.

They would provide for uniform rates on all Insull interurban property in the state with the exception of a few lines in the Calumet region and near South Bend.

Principal changes would be reduction in basic rate charged by the Fort Wayne-Lima road from 3.6 cents a mile to 3 cents a mile, and general reduction of 10 per cent on round trip fares for all of the Insull roads.

Ed Py, Claiming Shortest Name in U. S., Is Indicted

Newcastle, Ind., Oct. 8.—[Special.]—The county grand jury completed its session today by returning twelve indictments. One of them is against Ed Py, who escaped while awaiting trial for theft shortly after last summer's controversy of Py's claim to the nation's shortest name.

SEVEN ILLINOIS MEN TO BE GRADUATED AT ARMY FLYING SCHOOL

Seven Illinois men, five of whom are from the Chicago area, are included among the 107 graduates of the army air corps' advanced flying school at Kelly field, San Antonio, Tex., who will receive their wings tomorrow, according to Maj. Gen. Frank Parker. The Illinois flying cadets, who will be commissioned second lieutenants in the reserve, are Lester M. Marriner and Vernet V. Poupitch of Chicago and Benton W. Davis of St. Charles. Four Illinois members of the West Point class of 1930 also are among the graduates. They are Second Lieutenants Millard Lewis of Chicago; Kurt M. Landon of Carlinville, Paul W. Blanchard Jr. of Highland Park, and Clark N. Piper of Paris.

Barney Graves, former vice president of the Yellow Cab company of Philadelphia, has become associated with Century Air Lines to take charge of the system's ground transportation. Graves is supervising the inauguration of an automobile transportation system serving the line in Chicago, St. Louis, Toledo, Detroit, and Cleveland.

Plans for the reception in Chicago of Hugh Herndon Jr. and Clyde Pangborn, the trans-Pacific flyers, are being completed, it was announced yesterday. The flyers plan to arrive at Sky Harbor airport either Tuesday or Wednesday, it was said. A luncheon and a banquet on the same day are planned, both to be sponsored by the National Aeronautical association and the Air Corps Officers' association. A parade for the flyers is planned in the morning.

CRIME STUDENTS HEAR FISHER ON TOUR OF PRISONS

Europe does better with a poorer prison system than this country does with a superior system, Chief Justice Harry Fisher of the criminal court said last night in an address before the Academy of Criminology. He returned recently from a tour of Europe with a legislative commission making a study of prisons.

They have no politician-wardens nor precinct captain prison guards in Europe, Judge Fisher declared. They deal with their prisoners as human beings and with the idea of making them more fit for freedom. Sentences are generally shorter in Europe than here for the same kind of crimes and in England, because of the short sentences, they have been able to close eight or ten penitentiaries in the last decade, he said.

Prof. Edwin H. Sutherland of the sociology department at the University of Chicago spoke on the history of prison development.

RAILROADS TOLD TO USE ALL WAYS OF TRANSPORT

New Haven Head Talks at C. of C. Meeting.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

JOHN PELLEY.

Regulation of commercial trucks and buses similar to that imposed on the railroads was part of a remedy for the troubles of the railways propounded yesterday by John J. Pelley, president of the New York, New Haven and Hartford.

Mr. Pelley urged that the steam roads meet the competition of the highways and get back the traffic by grabbing opportunity by the forelock and building up unified systems of their own of railway trains, boats, buses, and trucks, each agency fitted in where it gives the best service. He also urged greater speed for passenger and freight trains.

Mr. Pelley, who addressed the transportation luncheon of the Illinois Chamber of Commerce in the Hotel Sherman got his training on the Illinois Central and is chairman of the committee representing the railroads in their application for a 15 per cent increase in freight rates.

Tells New Haven Experience.

In picturing the up to date railroad as one that jumps from rails to hard roads and to water and the air to take full advantage of the new forms of transportation, Mr. Pelley narrated the experience of his line.

"Ever since it was first established, the New Haven railroad has owned water lines operating through Long Island sound between the southern New England ports and New York.

"The cities and towns of New England are closely connected by a complete system of improved highways. Through its subsidiary, the New England Transportation company, the New Haven railroad began operating buses for the transportation of passengers in 1925.

Carry 5,000,000 Passengers.

"It was one of the first railroads to operate motor buses. At present, 252 buses are operated a total of over 30,000 miles each day. In 1930 more than 5,000,000 passengers were transported.

"The New Haven railroad began its operation of motor trucks in 1929 to replace local way freight trains and to supplement our main line freight service to reduce the time of transportation. The elimination of local freight trains through the substitution of motor trucks has also reduced our operating expenses.

"Highway motor trucks have made possible the establishment of the 'accept today—delivery tomorrow' plan for handling less than carload freight.

"Our highway freight service has also been coördinated with the water transportation.

Speed Up Freight Service.

"In the development of our coordinated system we have speeded up our rail freight service.

"The advantages of this fast feight service are not confined to important cities on our main line. By means of our trucks the benefits of the service have been extended to practically every city and town in the territory which the New Haven serves.

To meet "unfair competition," Mr. Pelley urged that if governmental regulation is fair for the railroads it ought to be fair for commercial trucks, buses, and boat lines.

At today's luncheon T. S. Adams of Yale university will speak on "The Tax Problem," and at a dinner tonight Frank O. Lowden, former governor of Illinois will address the chamber on "Reorganization of Local Government."

VANDALIA PENAL FARM JAMMED; ASK JUDGE TO SEND NO MORE

Springfield, Ill., Oct. 8.—(AP)—An appeal to County and Circuit judges not to sentence any more misdemeanants to the Vandalia state farm until its excessive population has been reduced was made today by Rodney H. Brandon, director of the department of public welfare, and Col. Frank D. Whipp, state superintendent of prisons. The state farm is reported to be 35 per cent overcrowded.

"The population has increased 200 in the last year, 275 in two years, and since the beginning of the present administration, 350," Brandon said.

OFFICIALS HOLD PARLEY ON CASE OF JOE CAINSKI

A number of public officials responded yesterday to an invitation to appear before a committee of the Crime commission to discuss the recent case of Joe Cainski, south side gangster. Cainski was freed in Judge George Fred Rush's court last Saturday although identified in two robbery cases. He surrendered again on Monday and was held for trial.

The discussion involved the action of Judge Rush in ordering the release of Cainski because the police were more than two hours in obeying a writ of habeas corpus to produce the prisoner in court. M. P. Hogan, clerk for Judge Rush, signed the judge's name to the order, saying the judge had told him to do so before going home.

State's Attorney Swanson said the order was void. Assistant State's Attorney Q. P. Cliott said the police are sometimes slow in responding to writs. Attorney Floyd Thompson, representing the Chicago Bar association, asked that a charitable view be taken of the incident, saying no harm had been done.

The chairman of the Crime commission committee, Edward A. Zimmerman, thanked the officials for attending the meeting which, he said, was for the purpose of being helpful.

SLASH TIRES ON HUNDRED AUTOS; BLAME RACKET

Racketeers were blamed yesterday for the slashing of tires on one hundred automobiles in a garage at 2445 East 75th street. Four men entered the garage early yesterday, threaten Andrew Neilson Jr., 7544 South Peoria street, son of the garage owner, and two other night employés with guns and slashed the tires of all automobiles in the garage. Neilson told police he had refused to join a "garage protection association."

Bryan's Success Secret Is Told by Daughter

Congresswoman Writes About Orators.

BY FANNY BUTCHER.

"Elements of Public Speaking," by Ruth Bryan Owen. [Liveright.] Published today.

NOT so much because the author of "Elements of Public Speaking" is a congresswoman and herself an orator, as because she is the daughter of one of the great orators of our time is the volume destined for a larger audience than a book of its title would normally achieve.

"Elements of Public Speaking" is a text book on the subject as well as a short treatise on a phase of human contacts which has been growing more and more important in the daily life of men and women for the last generation. It contains "Class Suggestions" after each chapter. But it is something more appealing to the general public than a mere text book.

In a brief manner it analyzes the relation of the speaker to his audience, to his subject, and to himself. Without setting down hard and fast rules it makes the whole business [or pleasure] of public speaking clearer to the reader.

That speaking in public is a pleasure to a great many people is evidenced in our lives daily. Anybody who stands up among his fellow men can gather an audience, and what with our clubs and our radio sets, and our passionate thirst for the pearls which fall from the lips of visiting literati, listening to speeches is one of our most occupying occupations. If all of those words are going to be shot through the air, if men and women are going to spend appreciable percentages of their waking hours listening to those words, there is no reason why those words should not be aimed toward their bulls'-eyes as effectively as possible. Mrs. Owen puts into "Elements of Public Speaking" the "sights" which enable oratorical guns to be fired more acurately toward their targets. She has succeeded in writing a text book that is in itself pleasant reading.

The book contains not only a general discussion of the subject [from every possible angle], but examples out of the lives of the greatest orators from Demosthenes to the present. She does not quote great orations. She analyzes, with a sentence of criticism here and a quotation from a contemporary observer there, just what made up the "personality" of great orators, why a speech read is a speech half lost, how to focus the attention of the audience, how to make the audience think with the speaker instead of being diverted thinking off the subject in hand—all sorts of problems [illegible] speaking she discusses. She succinctly points the moral of her analysis by the fact of some famous orator's method or life.

Naturally, with the precepts of her father as a vivid memory, she cites the methods and effects produced by William Jennings Bryan. And for those paragraphs the book will be read by the ordinary reader. In speaking of the importance of a musical voice—which she declares can be and must be cultivated no matter how [illegible] an organ it is by nature—Mrs. Owen says: "Mr. Bryan, who was called by some the 'silver tongued orator,' had, particularly in his younger days, a singular beauty and clarity of tone in his speaking voice, and at the time of his death his wife, who had been, in the most striking sense, his helpmate, said: 'It seems a little thing at such a time as this, but it is such a loss that the music of his voice is silenced.'"

In a chapter on "Important Trifles" the author says that "a few moments of sleep snatched between speeches will recharge the physical and mental batteries," and goes on to illustrate: "It was only through his ability to go immediately to sleep after leaving the platform and remain asleep until the time to make his next speech that Mr. Bryan was able to carry out programs of speechmaking which have not been equaled for strenuousness in the history of political campaigning."

And later, when she is talking about heckling and the importance of the speaker's absolute poise and good nature through any amount of interruption, she writes: "I have witnessed numerous attempts to interrupt him, but never one in which Mr. Bryan's good humor and presence of mind did not stand him in powerful stead. So effectively did he deal with such incidents that it occurred to me at the time that it would have served a useful purpose to carry a hostile and persistent interrupter along from place to place throughout the campaign."

Good morning!

News that there's a children's picture in town is always good news, isn't it, Mother and Dad? "Penrod and Sam" is a children's picture.

Booth Tarkington wrote the story, and there's nobody on earth who knows young folks better than that writer. He has a keenly humorous appreciation of their peccadillos and a tender heart for their poignant if short-lived sorrows. If I were a little boy or girl I think I would just love to pour out my soul into Mr. Tarkington's ear.

The picture at Woods' ushers you into the school and playtime life of two boyhood pals and their cohorts. These youngsters live in a small town and Penrod's house is next to a vacant lot which has a shack which is the temple of the In-Or-In society, of which Master Schofield is Grand Mogul. The rituals of this fraternity are mysterious and terrifying, as brought to light by the initiation of "Sissy" Bassett. Little George Bassett, who tattles and loves flowers and is teacher's pet, is only admitted to membership because Mr. Bassett spoke to Mr. Schofield and Mr. Schofield spoke in no uncertain terms to his small, reluctant son and his son's chief henchman, Sam.

Just one incident—this initiation business. The production is alive with others that will make young audiences wow with joy. Yes, and weep a little tear or two.

The juvenile cast is a clever one, with Junior Coghlan giving the most consistently natural performance. The grownups do nice work, with the exception of Matt Moore, who acts as if he never saw a child before, and was absolutely paralyzed by his situation as Dad to the many-phased Penrod. The latter is portrayed ingratiatingly, on the whole, by Leon Janney, though there are times when he becomes rather self-conscious and play-acty. As do several of the other playerlets. These lapses I lay at the door of the director.

It is my private and unwanted opinion that Norman Taurog, who made "Skippy" and "Huckleberry Finn," should be appointed grand supervisor of all juvenile productions. He has Tarkington's "feel" for childish reactions and knows how to educe complete naturalness of behavior on the part of little mummers.

THAT, however, is an adult idea. There will be no adverse criticism on the part of the kids who witness "Penrod and Sam." They'll go for it, hook, line, and sinker.

[Remember the silent version with Ben Alexander?]

See you tomorrow.

Dr. Bundesen Asks Physicians to Aid Fight on Paralysis

Close coöperation between physicians and the health department to combat infantile paralysis was urged last night by Health Commissioner Herman N. Bundesen. He spoke before members of the south side branch of the Chicago Medical society.

Dr. Bundesen said the medical profession should be on the lookout for characteristic symptoms of that disease, particularly during the late summer and early fall. In nine cases out of ten, he declared, a stomach disturbance or indigestion with a little fever appears, and is followed by periods of drowsiness or indifference on the part of the sufferers. Some irritability also develops. In child paralysis, Dr. Bundesen said, there is frequently a stiffness with pain on movements in the neck and back. Trembling of the lips or hands, and sometimes the body, occurs.

The health commissioner pointed out that the paralytic stage of the disease, which is so commonly recognized, is relatively infrequent. Perhaps 95 per cent of the world's population have mild attacks of the sickness, he said, but the attacks are so light, nothing is suspected. One attack, no matter how mild, usually affords lifelong immunity, he added.

Homeopaths Elect Dr. J. W. Hingston as Midwest President

Dr. James West Hingston of Chicago, was elected president of the Mid-West Homeopathic institute yesterday at the closing day of the convention of the institute in the Morrison hotel. He succeeds Dr. Lillian Thompson of Chicago.

Other officers elected are Dr. Bell P. Nair, Chicago, vice president; Dr. J. W. Hutchinson, Saginaw, Mich., second vice president; Dr. John Ames, Niles, Mich., secretary; Dr. Joseph Stupnicki, Chicago, treasurer, and Dr. Harvey Farrington, Chicago, business manager.

Following the election, Dr. Hingston read a paper on materia medica to the delegates and Dr. Farrington discussed the theory of homoeopathic medicine. The physicians were then taken on a tour of the site of the World's Fair in Grant park.

Mrs. A. R. Ferguson New Illinois W.C.T.U. President

Mrs. Ada Reed Ferguson of Chicago was elected state president of the W. C. T. U. at the annual convention of the Illinois organization which closed last night at Waukegan. Other officers chosen were Mrs. Adah Hagler, Vienna, vice president; Mrs. Maude Fairbairn, Joliet, treasurer; Miss Epha Marshall, Evanston, corresponding secretary; and Mrs. E. M. B. Rosenstiel, Freeport, recording secretary.

Calls Lincoln Birth in Cabin Popular Myth

New Yorker Says Parents Owned Good House.

New York, Oct. 8.—(AP)—The Evening Post says today that ex-Judge Harvey H. Smith, 70 years old, living in retirement at a New York hotel, took issue today with historians who say Abraham Lincoln was born in a one room log cabin on Nolin Creek, Kentucky.

As a matter of fact, the newspaper quotes Smith as saying, Lincoln was born in a comfortable two story house owned by his father, who was not poor, but a man of means.

Mr. Smith, the Post said, has written to the congressional committee on appropriations that maintenance of the enshrined cabin on Nolin creek "supports a myth which does not add to Lincoln's reputation or to the sound sense of congress in continuing the error."

"Contrary to popular belief," the judge wrote, "Thomas Lincoln, the President's father, was not a poor man, but was a respected man of means. He owned a vast farm on Mill creek, which he acquired in 1803 and sold in 1814. On this property he built a large, comfortable two story house.

"On Dec. 12, 1808, which is 60 days before the President was born, Thomas Lincoln secured a contract for the deed to Nolin creek. It is inconceivable that the President's father would have moved his wife from a warm, comfortable house on Mill creek to a one room shack on Nolin creek.

"Actually the log cabin was built after Abe Lincoln was born and was used by Thomas Lincodn as a temporary residence during the summer months, when he farmed land in Nolin creek."

Mr. Smith, the Post said, was born and raised near the Lincoln homestead, and his ancestors were in close touch with the Lincoln family as far back as 1766.

Chicago Lincoln Expert Casts Doubt on Wealth Theory.

Attorney Oliver R. Barrett of Chicago, a close student of Lincoln history, said last night that extensive investigations had been made to determine the exact spot where the Emancipator was born and that although many claims had been advanced, practically all historians agreed that the Nolin creek cabin was the place. Albert J. Beveridge and Ida Tarbell were among those accepting this as truth, he said.

Cooking Contests Planned as Food Show Climax

Keen competition is anticipated in the seven cooking contests to be held on the last two days of the National Food show, Oct. 23 and 24, in the Merchandise Mart, according to Mrs. Clarence P. Goodwin, chairman of the arrangements committee. Prizes totaling $160 are offered in the four contests on the first day, which is sponsored by the Illinois Federation of Women's clubs.

Home made bread, candy, devils food cake, and cold fruit salad in jelly will be judged on the first day, and pumpkin pie, applie pie, and angel food cake on the second day.

War Objectors May Win O. K. of Methodists

Session Here to Debate Plea to Congress.

BY THE REV. JOHN EVANS.

One hundred years of Chicago Methodism was officially celebrated by more than 1,000 banqueters last night at the Morrison hotel. George W. Dixon, lay leader of the First Methodist Episcopal church, Chicago temple, presided as toastmaster while speakers representing both local Protestantism and Methodism applauded the century of progress of that church.

Chicago Methodism began in a log cabin owned by the village smithy, William See, in 1831. The first church had ten members and was organized by the Rev. Stephen R. Boggs. Today the Methodist Episcopal church in Chicago has 71,000 members. The first Methodist church edifice in the city was erected on the corner of North Water and Clark streets in 1834. In 1839 the church was ferried across the river and placed on the corner of Clark and Washington streets. There the present Chicago temple stands.

Other speakers at last night's banquet were Dean Shailer Mathews, president of the Chicago Church federation; Dr. W. L. Collin, superintendent of the Rockford district; Dr. John Thompson, pastor of the Chicago temple; Dr. H. B. Workman, president of the Wesleyan church, London, England, and Bishop Edwin H. Hughes of Chicago.

A proposed resolution to be presented today will ask congress to pass the Griffin bill to prevent the exclusion from citizenship of persons who refuse to pledge in advance their willingness to participate in future wars. This refers to the recent naturalization case of Prof. Douglas MacIntosh of Yale university, who was excluded from citizenship because he refused to make such a pledge.

Though the United States did not ratify that instrument, President Hoover is asked in another resolution to exclude the German war guilt clause from the Versailles treaty. Unemployment insurance will be asked and the conference adopted a resolution commending President Hoover's bank credit plan.

The resolution concerning objectors to war service calls for the church, "as an institution, to formally disassociate itself from war" and to give its moral support to any and all persons whose consciences lead them to the historic Quaker position of noncombatancy. Another resolution urges that the United States enter the world court and the league of nations.

Referring to the present depression, the report holds that "industry should be organized with a primary regard for the welfare of human beings. . . . Our present system with its individualism and unrestricted competition more nearly resembles the practice of the jungle than it does the practice of a Christian family."

Unofficial reports last night indicated a closed session of the conference to discuss the reinstatement of John A. Logan Warren. He was formerly pastor of the Durand church. Charges of misconduct with a house maid led to his unfrocking in 1927. Since that time he has won several civil libel suits, one of which was against members of his church. A committee under the chairmanship of the Rev. John C. Spencer of De Kalb was appointed by the district superintendents to decide whether there should be an executive session of conference to consider the case. Mr. Warren's church was at Rockford, Ill.

Complaint was made yesterday in the discussion of ministerial support that the present method of apportioning assessments for ministerial salaries bears too heavily on the smaller churches.

Retains Its Old Name.

Wichita, Kas., Oct. 8.—(AP)—The international conventiton of the Disciples of Christ late today voted not to change the name of the body to the "Christian church." The change was advocated because the communion officially known as the "Christian church" has united with the Congregational church under the name of the Congregational-Christian church, because "most of our congregations are known locally as the Christian church."

Anticipated deficits at Drake university, Des Moines, Ia., and Bethany college, Lincoln, Neb., caused the budgets for these schools to be referred. The convention approved the following budgets: United Christian Missionary society, $2,865,000; Association for Promotion of Christian Unity, $8,000; board of education, $50,000; board of temperance and social welfare, $15,000, and the international convention, $15,000.

And others.

BY CHARLES COLLINS.

"GIRL CRAZY," which opened to emphatic applause at the Garrick theater last night, is a full-blown specimen of the wild-western musical comedies that often give urban populations a nostalgia for the great open spaces and a yearning for three-gallon hats. It is, I believe, a show that Chicago will adopt with warmth, for it possesses in abundant measure a certain quality much esteemed by shoppers for lyric amusement in this city. That quality is best described, perhaps, in the vernacular as "wow." If you can think of a better word for the naïve gusto, the rampant energy, and the leggy activity of "Girl Crazy," go ahead and use it.

Connoisseurs of the whirling dervish music of the day probably will visit "Girl Crazy" like pilgrims to a shrine, with awe in their voices and rapture in their eyes, for the score of this piece was composed by a master minstrel of modernism—none other than George Gershwin himself. Far be it from me, however, to speak with authority upon the jazzy mysteries that Mr. Gershwin has woven into this piece; I must leave that subject to the numerous rhapsodists in blue who whinny at every mention of this composer's name.

I can only say that Mr. Gershwin's orchestral contribution to "Girl Crazy" is elaborate, high sounding, and quite appropriate to such song titles as "I Got Rhythm," "Treat Me Rough," and "Boy, What Love Has Done for Me." Incidentally, he led the band through the overture to give the première a fillip, and when the spotlight beamed down upon his debonair figure he was greeted like a hero.

The chief fun maker of the piece is Benny Rubin, a lean and birdlike mummer playing a Jewish chauffeur who has driven his taxicab [containing the hero] all the way from Broadway to Custerville, Ariz., where the ranch hands are so tough that they eat cactus plants for breakfast food. Unlike all other taxi drivers, Mr. Rubin [as Gieber Goldfarb] is timorous by nature, and is much put upon and browbeaten by the natives, with hilarious results. Mr. Rubin is glib and agile; he makes expert use of the "nize baby" dialect; and generally speaking, he fills the bill. However, his achievements need not worry Eddie Cantor, Lou Holtz, or other eminent members of the same lodge.

"Girl Crazy" also contains Blossom Seeley, representing a sultry mamma from the Barbary coast in a Mae West style, and chanting some of Mr. Gershwin's most fervent numbers in a rousing manner. Her opposite in the cast is Benny Fields, who gets effective merriment out of the rôle of a tin-horn gambler. The duties of the hero—a Broadway playboy in Arizona exile who founds a flamboyant dude ranch in order to get metropolitan amusement in the west—are assigned to Allen Kearns, an experienced young fellow at this sort of thing. The lovely prairie maiden at whom the softest ditties are sung is represented by Frances Upton, whose dancing is above par; and as secondary soubrette Floria West reveals admirable legs and uses them cleverly. Patricia Garrity is a pleasant and demure ingenue in the turbulent picture; and the wild west stuff would lose much of its vigor without Carlton Macy in the rôle of the meanest man in Arizona.

A striking aspect of "Girl Crazy" is the brilliant technique of its dancing girls. The maneuvers and gyrations of its chorus are ingenious, dynamic and stirring. The ballet paces, whirls and drills in the good old musical comedy way that Chicago audiences love. Credit goes to their dancing master, of course—one Jack Haskell. This is the best chorus work I have seen for many a day.

The highbrow effect of Mr. Gershwin's music may be noted here and there in the lyrics, which strive for intricacies of rhyme. For example: "Embraceable You" is the motive of one of the songs, and is echoed by "irreplaceable you." Quite literary, of course—but somewhat difficult to sing.

Dentists Urged to Halt Cancer's Earliest Stages

Dr. Bloodgood Tells of Gains in Health.

The dentists of the nation must coöperate with physicians if a successful war with cancer is to be carried on. This was the message of Dr. Joseph Colt Bloodgood of Johns Hopkins medical school, Baltimore, to 500 members of the Chicago Dental society at a meeting last night in the Palmer house.

Before Dr. Bloodgood spoke, officials of the society revealed that plans are under way to educate Chicago dentists to recognize cancer of the mouth. Illustrated books are being prepared for study by the dentists so they may distinguish lesions which may develop into cancer.

"A loose tooth, a pain in the region of a tooth or jaw, a gum boil, or any swelling of the gum, or a swelling in the region of the upper or lower jaw may be the first sign of a cancer, or of a local condition that may develop into cancer," Dr. Bloodgood said. "For such conditions, the majority of people will consult a dentist, not a physician. The dentist must know that such insignificant and apparently innocent symptoms may be associated with cancer or the conditions that precede cancer.

"Dentists must give these patients the benefit of all the modern diagnostic tests, X-ray, microscopic examinations, and all other laboratory tests. Therefore, the prevention of cancer and the cure of early cancer—and they must prepare themselves to meet these demands."

Dr. Bloodgood declared that the mortality statistics for the state of Illinois show that cancer of the mouth as a cause of death has decreased from 3.9 in 1919 to a point of 3.4 in 1929, while cancer of the stomach has increased from 45.5 to 58.5. Cancer of the skin also showed a decrease from 2.8 to 2.4.

"In the great clinics of the world," he continued, "there is a tremendous improvement in the relative frequency of cancer of the mouth to conditions that precede cancer. Up to 1900, the relative frequency of cancer was almost 90 per cent and in more than one-half of these cases the disease was hopeless. In the same clinics today cancer is 10 per cent, instead of 90 per cent, and in the majority of these cases the cancer is in the early curable stage. The evidence then is that we are wiping out, through education, cancer of the mouth and skin.

"Every student is agreed that cancer of the mouth is the result of neglected teeth and the abuse of tobacco in any form, including snuff. The modern woman has taught men how to smoke with the least risk of cancer, because she keeps her teeth clean and smooth and sees her dentist at frequent intervals. In addition, the woman stops smoking the moment she observes a sore spot in her mouth."

Max Epstein Added to Trustees of the University of Chicago

MAX EPSTEIN

Max Epstein, chairman of the board of the General American Tank Car corporation, has been elected a member of the board of trustees of the University of Chicago, according to an announcement made yesterday by Harold H. Swift, president of the board of trustees.

Mr. Epstein has made donations of millions of dollars to educational and medical institutions. In 1929 he presented the University of Chicago with $1,000,000 to provide an art building. He established the clinics which provide the out-patient departments of the Chicago Lying-In hospital and the Provident hospital. He also was the donor of the Max Epstein fund at the Harvard law school. Recently he gave $25,000 to the joint emergency relief fund of Cook county.

Forty years ago Mr. Epstein, a native of Cincinnati, came to Chicago. His tank car corporation, which he founded, is the largest of its kind in the world. He owns a large gallery of paintings, which he has lent to the Art institute.

Over Half Million Visit Chicago for Conventions

During the first eight months of the year 531,955 persons attended 459 conventions in Chicago, spending a total of $42,758,355, according to the Chicago Association of Commerce. The average convention lasted three days and the average delegate spent $80.

"BIBLE PERMITS, BUT NATION FORBIDS IT"—LUTHERANS ON DRINK

Danville, Ill., Oct. 8.—(AP)—Delivering the opening address at the annual central Illinois district convention of the Missouri synod of Evangelical Lutheran churches, the Rev. Paul Schulz of Springfield, district president, today said the convention would not discuss prohibition.

"There is no need," he said, "for us as a church to discuss prohibition. The matter as far as we are concerned is settled. As regards the religious side of the question, the Bible quite distinctly permits the use of alcoholic beverages. On the other hand, the government has the right to prohibit the use of liquor for reasons of state. If it does so, it is the duty of all citizens, Christians and unbelievers alike, to obey the government."

The Marriage Racket

By VINA DELMAR

SYNOPSIS.

Irma Corbin and Don Philippe de Rodriques, hoofers, with their pianist, Tom Libby, arrive in Thrace for a week's vaudeville engagement. A convention is being held in the town and the hotels are overflowing. Philippe grabs the first vacancy. Tom and Irma inquire at the town's leading hostelry, where Tom runs into an old friend, Bill Fitzroy. Tom finds a cot and Bill turns over his room to Irma. Bill invites Irma to a dinner party in the hotel, where she meets Wallace Graham, a widower. Wallace has a young daughter, Mildred, who has grown up under the supervision of her Aunt Tessie. Bill and Wallace shower invitations on the pretty dancer. Wallace asks Irma to be his wife. Bill's proposal to her is of a different nature. Irma quarrels with Philippe and quits the act. She marries Wallace and settles down to a dull existence with him. A baby son arrives to compensate her for any flaws in the marriage system. The baby becomes the center of her universe.

INSTALLMENT XVII.

A FIRST WIFE CONDEMNED.

The shadow of Europe hung over the Graham household throughout the winter. Mildred and Aunt Tessie accepted as a positive fact that Irma and Wallace would sail for Europe in August. Every time Mr. Dreyfus visited his factory Wallace questioned him about the hotels, restaurants, and railroads of Europe. Irma would hear that the Savoy hotel in London was beyond their means, that the Ritz in Paris was out of the question. Mr. Dreyfus, however, could recommend some good, cheap hotels. In fact, Mr. Dreyfus and Wallace had figured out that the Grahams could make the complete trip very nicely on fifteen hundred dollars. Mr. Dreyfus was arranging for their passage. He had a friend in a steamship office. By August the rush from west to east was over and Mr. Dreyfus' friend could in all probability get them good accommodations quite reasonably.

It was not until Wallace got a letter from Mr. Dreyfus' friend that Irma realized that Europe was not remote. Wallace actually meant to go. She did not sleep that night. All through the long hours she tossed from side to side picturing how it would be in a far, strange country without the baby. A whole ocean between them. Any peril might descend upon him in her absence. Aunt Tessie and Mildred were useless to him. Rose would defend him as best she could from danger, but after all she was only a paid and perhaps transient bulwark. Aunt Tessie could discharge her or Rose could leave. O, no, the whole idea was ridiculous. Irma couldn't go away from the baby.

There was a cold, gray light filtering into the room before Irma finally slept. She had decided to tell Wallace exactly how she felt. He would understand when she explained it carefully. She would urge him to make the trip alone. It would all work out satisfactorily. It had to. A man couldn't hate a woman for loving his child.

It was useless to speak to him in the morning. He hadn't time to listen to all she had to say. Besides, after a scant three hours' sleep she was nervous and apt to cry at the first sign of opposition. She would tell him that evening. She knew that most wives could talk over unpleasant matters at the dinner table, where the warm fragrance of good soup and the perfectly broiled steak rendered these same matters much less unpleasant. In the Graham household such a procedure was impossible. First, because Aunt Tessie and Mildred were present at every dinner, and secondly, because Rose's cooking was of the variety that infuriated rather than appeased.

She was startled when he spoke to her.

This evening Mildred and Aunt Tessie were going to the movies to see "The Ten Commandments." It was a very welcome though unlooked for stroke of luck. Irma said good-by so enthusiastically that all the Grahams stared curiously at her. She shut the door upon Mildred and Aunt Tessie and returned to the living room. Wallace had picked up his evening paper. She walked to the window and played with the curtain cord. Would it be bad judgment to interfere with his reading of the decision that Judge Katz nad handed down to the two Skinner boys?

But Wallace was not reading the paper. He was staring at his wife. He knew there was something on her mind. There was always something on Irma's mind. If it wasn't Mildred then it was Aunt Tessie and if it wasn't Aunt Tessie it was Wallace, and always, during and intermittently, it was the baby.

Who would have guessed that Irma would become this worrisome, fretful woman? She was prettier now, he thought, than on the day just over two years ago when he had married her. There was a deep beauty in her face and a proud way of carrying her young body that she had not possessed when she had flashed from nowhere into the Marble room of the Hotel Bartrum.

She was startled when he spoke to her. She was trying to think up a starting point for the troublesome facts she had to give him.

He said, "What's the matter, dear? Something bothering you?"

She came over and sat on the arm of his chair. "Yes. I—I want to tell you something, Wallace. I can't go to Europe."

"Why not? Why can't you go to Europe?"

"Because I can't bear to leave the baby."

Wallace laughed reassuringly. "He'll be all right," he said. "Don't you worry about that. Is anything else bothering you?"

"Anything else? Isn't that enough?"

"Well, I suppose anything can become an important issue if one chooses to make it so. You're very foolish to worry yourself into a panic though. The baby will be all right."

"You're an incurable optimist, aren't you, Wallace? Your baby is immune to illness and accidents, isn't he?"

"No, but sitting home moping over the things that might happen to him isn't going to stave them off, you know."

She said nothing. Where were all the words with which she had intended to paint a comprehensible picture for him? He silenced her with his cold logic which was so utterly trite and at the same time so unanswerable. She had meant to tell him, to somehow convince him, that she could not face life without the baby. She had meant to tell him that if anything happened to the baby in her absence she could not live with the raw hurt of self-condemnation which she would feel.

It was useless though. It had seemed possible in the unearthly gray light which had crept through the windows at dawn, but in the Graham living room, with Wallace's array of facts relentlessly lined up against her vague, shadowy uneasiness, it was hopeless.

She left her perch on his chair arm. "You can't understand, Wallace. You really can't, so there isn't any use of my trying to make you. I'm just not going to Europe, that's all. You can sing those words to any tune you happen to know."

"It's a hell of a fine time to decide it," he said.

"Don't be childish, Wallace. It's four months till August. I didn't honestly believe you were serious about going till now."

"And I didn't believe you could be so unreasonable, Irma. I know how you feel about Aunt Tessie and Mildred, so I won't mention them in connection with the baby—but how about Rose? I always understood that she gave you complete peace of mind."

"Yes, but, my God, Wallace, I'm always within call when she's minding him. In Europe I'll be thousands of miles away. Can't you understand anything?"

"I can understand that we've been eating vile cooking for nothing. What's the use of having a woman who can't cook or clean if you don't trust her with the baby, anyhow?"

"All right. Suppose I did leave him with her. How could we be sure that she'd stay?"

"It's only for six weeks, Irma."

"Yeh, only six weeks."

"All right, we won't go."

"But you can go. I want you to go."

"Thank you."

"There's no need of being nasty, Wallace. I can't help it if I'm the sort who worries, can I?"

"I suppose not. But it seems so senseless. The baby's healthy and Rose is good to him and careful of him."

"There's no use starting it again, Wallace. It's something beyond you. You go to Europe and have your trip and everybody will be satisfied."

"I wouldn't go without you."

"All right. Don't go. Make things as difficult as possible."

He laughed shortly. "You're in a swell position to say that," he remarked.

"O, Wallace, please don't be so nasty. Would you like it if I gallivanted about all the time and never gave the baby a thought."

"Considering your years it would at least be something I could understand," he said. "Anne was a good mother, even from your standards, but I'll be damned if she left off being companionable and reasonable just because Mildred was born."

"It's unfair to compare me with Anne. I know something about her. I haven't lived with your aunt for two years without knowing that Anne was a cold blooded woman. You can say all you like about Anne being a sensible mother, but I know that she was too damn stolid and cold to get excited over anything that happened to you or Mildred. Anne didn't even want Mildred. I wanted my kid. Throw Anne at me again and I'll tell you some more."

He was walking swiftly toward the stairs, giving no sign that he was aware of the pale, angry girl he had left behind in the living room. She watched him till he had disappeared up the stairs, then in weary dejection she flung herself on the divan to weep.

Science Tour of Millikan Starting Today

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, Oct. 8.—Prof. Robert Millikan, famous American physicist, came to Germany for a lecture tour that will extend to Austria. He was in England for the centenary of Michael Faraday [1791-1867], whose discoveries in the field of electricity are fundamentals for the advanced researches of Millikan. His lecture tour starts tomorrow in Vienna and will close in Cologne Nov. 18. It will include the leading German universities, such as Heidelburg, Jena, Bonn, and that at Cologne.

During his four days in Berlin, Dr. Millikan expects to be much together with Prof. Albert Einstein, who, with his wife, enjoyed the hospitality of the Millikan home in Pasadena, Cal.

Dr. Millikan is the third American to tour under the aegis of the Oberländer foundation. The first was the city planner and landscape architect, John Nolen of Harvard university.

Pampered Wife Until She Developed Into Unreasonable Tyrant

BY DORIS BLAKE.

"I am 38, and have been married 16 years. Have a boy, 14. My wife has been in and out of hospitals for the last ten years. I spent all the money I earned to pay hospital bills and for nurses. I had to pay one of the bills promptly, so I pawned my wife's ring and didn't tell her. I didn't want her to worry. When she found out about it, she ordered me out of the house, not to return until I could bring the ring home.

"I can't do it just now. She will not let me explain. She won't give me a chance.

"For seven weeks now I've been away. I send her money to live on and still she won't listen to me. I have treated her as well as any man would treat his wife. I've cleaned the house, washed the clothes, floors, windows, cooked, and did everything so she could rest. Still she holds out on me on account of the ring. Please tell me what to do. H. K."

I'd call on one of the Domestic court workers and take her with you to call on the wife and make her listen to reason. A woman like that needs some one to bring her to time. Even though she is ill, she can't go on acting that way.

Sick people often have to be treated to discipline whether it goes against the grain or not. Good, stiff discipline. Nothing else serves in certain cases to put them on the road to recovery. Otherwise, they can become the most abominable tyrants, the most selfish, the most unreasonable.

I can't see from your standpoint where any terrible crime was committed in pawning the ring. Nor could she, if she were in her right senses. Any family property, in a money urgency, would seem to be common property. Certainly, under the circumstances of life and death, which hospital attendance signifies, it would appear to be.

Years of pampering, of course, have developed the woman into a tyrant. Now you have the business on hand of unraveling the bad work. Some one has to talk turkey to the woman. If you're not willing, invite outside aid. Withdraw support until you get a chance to vindicate yourself. It may mean that the woman will invoke the aid of the law for support. But, at least, you can tell your story.

Children Are Close to the Earth When They Are Toddlers

BY GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS.

Patter is what some people take to like a duck to water. They are especially fond of repeating the saying, "This is a machine age. Even the children's play shows it."

It is a machine age, partly, though infinitely more than that, and naturally children reflect it in their play. But its effect doesn't go very deep in the earlier years. Go into a publisher's showroom or a book store and cast your eye over a tableful of young children's books. What are they about? Almost entirely about animals.

Children are close to the earth when they're young. The natural world is one they are completely at home in. See them bury their hands in the sand, lie on the grass, paddle in the water or swim; see their absorption in a rabbit, a bird, the life on a farm, the animals in a zoo. This is a world they understand, and it is one to which they should have a very free access. If they can't live in it at least part of the year they should be taken to a seashore and country as often as possible, so that they feel it and love it and come to understand it.

Nothing less than a real kinship with the country could account for the ecstatic joy with which children go to the country and the gloom with which they leave it. At all ages, 'way up through the middle teens, season after season, I've seen their faces beam as they boarded trains, or climbed from them and into cars, country bound. The child who has not had the chance to know and love the country has missed something vital and healthful—and very, very happiness producing.

Help your child to all those good things.

SOME Things are Created for Superior People

■ The MOST EXPENSIVE car in the world. The 145 h.p. Isotta Fraschini, with custom-built body by Castagna, trim of carved rare woods, and glass equipment by Lalique. Its performance befits its smart, costly luxuriousness.

In fact, one reason they are superior is because they recognize the best and demand it.

Sometimes the best is a bit difficult to discover. It takes a little thinking to search it out. Among tooth pastes, for example.

Pebeco Tooth Paste is the MOST EXPENSIVE tooth paste in the world to make. 40% of every tube is a costly ingredient put there for the good it will do your teeth...and found in no other dentifrice.

It is this unusual quality which makes Pebeco preferred by thinking people. They realize that here is a dentifrice that refuses to have a popular, candy-like taste, that refuses to give a torrent of lather, that refuses to cater to the superficial type of mind and appeals directly and only to discriminating people.

Make an intelligent tooth paste purchase today—note the distinctive tang, the marvellously cool comfort of your mouth and, above all, note how perfectly clean and white your teeth look and FEEL.

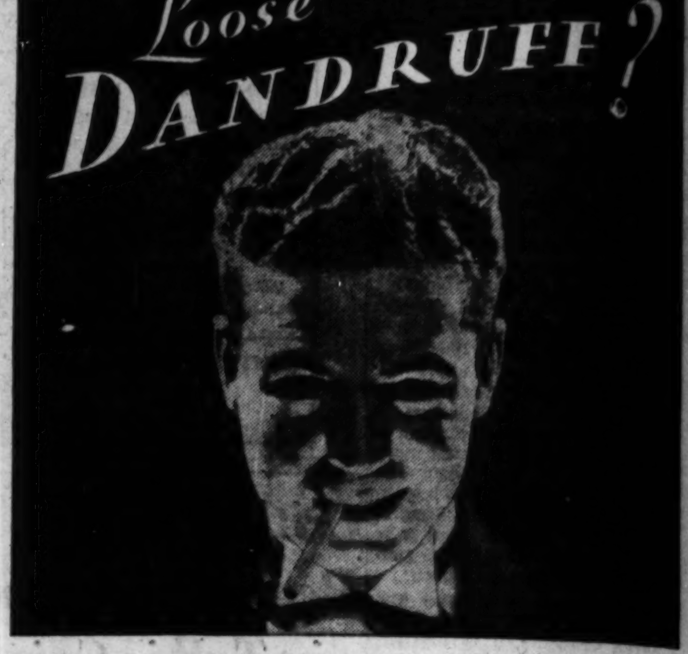
Loose DANDRUFF?



Get rid of it overnight

Dermatologists tell us that many serious cases of dandruff and falling hair could have been prevented by simple, early treatments.

If you have any evidence of dandruff, go after it with Listerine, the safe antiseptic. It has checked this humiliating condition for tens of thousands. You simply douse it on full strength and massage the scalp vigorously. Often you get results over night. Stubborn cases require more systematic treatment to see a real improvement.

If infection is present on the surface of the skin, Listerine attacks it. A powerful germicide, it kills bacteria in 15 seconds, the fastest killing time accurately recorded by science.

Listerine helps to dissolve oily crusts and quickly removes them, as well as horny scales. And Listerine quickly relieves that burning, itching sensation. It soothes inflamed or irritated areas of the scalp.

If scalp is excessively dry, a little olive oil may be used in connection with the Listerine shampoo, or independent of it. The oil aids in dissolving crusts and scales and keeps hair from drying out. Lambert Pharmacal Company, St. Louis, Mo., U. S. A.

BY MARY MEADE.

Last week, just before our copy went to press, we received an unusual letter—one which tells the story only too well and which, we believe, is typical of the tragic predicaments facing many mothers and fathers this winter. Mrs. W. E. M. writes:

“There are more than a few mothers who are wondering where to get the necessary ‘wherewithal’ to insure the children's good health by giving them one quart of milk each day. Perhaps some one is in the foreground enough to urge the President to call a special session of congress to help matters now, so that the children may be fed, and fed properly.

“I have twin children [a boy and a girl, 9 years old], who have always had their milk, but I am worried about their future supply. First I could give them ‘certified,’ then it had to be ‘double sealed,’ at 17 cents, and now it is the 13 cents a quart—and my case is the case of hundreds of others.

Mothers Don't Forget.

“It's not that mothers forget to give them one quart a day, but it's that they can't forget—mothers and fathers, too, that are going about their job of raising children [in shabby clothes, whom the neighbors watch] as best they can—they just can't afford it. Please don't forget to drop a hint where it will do the most good, so we can get milk for the kiddies.”

We might say, before going further, that THE TRIBUNE and many other organizations are expending all their efforts to help just such children as yours, Mrs. W. E. M. Unfortunately there are many who are suffering a great deal more.

Try Evaporated Milk.

For those families who feel as you do, that they cannot afford bottled milk for their families, we suggest an admirable substitute, namely, evaporated milk. It is cheaper than the former and fully as rich in vitamin content.

Evaporated milk is pure sweet milk from which sixty per cent of the water content has been removed. It has been long used successfully for infant feeding, and may be used as successfully for older children. When it is diluted with an equal volume of water it may be used instead of milk in any recipe, for its chemical composition is then similar to that of bottled milk. Should you wish a richer milk, dilute it with less water.

Evaporated milk is frequently confused with condensed milk. The latter is evaporated milk which has been sweetened, and its use is more limited than the former because it has a forty per cent sugar composition.

Replies to Inquiries.

Mrs. L. D. T. writes: “My daughter is eleven years old and is about twenty pounds overweight. She feels self-conscious about it, and I wondered if you would recommend her reducing. She does not eat a lot of candy, but she eats a lot of bread and butter at every meal.”

If your daughter is healthy, Mrs. L. D. T., she is eating too much, and you can cut down on the amount of food she consumes with a resulting improvement of her appearance. Eliminate the candy entirely for a time, and then admit it to her diet at infrequent intervals. Since she is overweight, limit her to one slice of bread and butter at each meal. Do away with all lunching between meals.

Avoid a rapid reduction in weight—she can lose a pound a week easily, and this is enough. Teach her to eat slowly and she will tend to lessen the amount of food necessary to satisfy her appetite. You may decrease the energy foods you are now giving her, but not the protective foods—and the energy foods are made up, for the most part, from starches and sugars. Fifteen hundred calories a day are sufficient for her until she has attained normal weight. Then she may increase the number of calories to 1,800, to 2,000, if she does not gain more than normal weight again.

Mrs. R. A. M. writes: “I have a ten year old boy four feet four and one-half inches tall. He seems strong, but he weighs only fifty-five pounds. He plays hard and eats heartily at all times. Is there any way I can bring him up to the average weight standard? Or, isn't this necessary?”

Your son is approximately ten pounds underweight, Mrs. R. A. M. Perhaps he is playing too strenuously, and is too tired to eat all the food his body needs at meal times. The child who is underweight can afford to eat two and three times as much as the child who is not. Supplement his meals with a lunch when he comes home from school, if it doesn't interfere with his dinner appetite. Limit him in his playing, so that he doesn't become overfatigued. Tuck him in bed an hour earlier at night, and give him a glass of warm milk at bedtime. It may take time, but he should put on weight with a schedule of additional rest and food.

HOW DATES GROW

Clusters of dates are growing in the desert valleys and soon will be in Chicago stores. It is expected that this fruit will range from 45 to 65 cents a pound.

HERE'S CHANCE TO ENJOY YOUR QUOTA OF DATES

Fortunately Country Has Desert Lands.

BY EVERETT SWINGLE.

Many folks in Chicago and the United States as a whole are inherently, although unknowingly, happy that certain portions of this country were created as desert areas. That is, if they are of the average which eats each year about a pound of dates—a fruit which is more and more becoming a domestic product.

This month sees some of the 1931 crop coming into the food shops of the city, there to sell at prices lower than American dates have ever sold on the basis of quality. Western date palms this year are expected to produce around 4,000,000 pounds by the time the last hand picked American grown date is off the trees in December.

Prices Down This Season.

From 45 to 65 cents a pound is the price range expected to prevail this fall and winter, whereas it was but a season or two ago that this same type of date was commanding the luxury price of about $1.50 per pound.

Once more we take a lesson from the Arab who found centuries ago that the date with its highly concentrated nourishment was a practical form of food for a long journey. Americans do not have to follow the popularity of the date because of this reason, yet the Arab has given many of his experiences to further the industry that is centered in the United States largely in the Coachella valley in California.

Four thousand acres now in trees will eventually give an annual crop of 25,000,000 pounds, according to the California Date Growers' association. Importations at present are about at the rate of 70,000,000 pounds a year.

Get Plenty of Water.

Palms should have “their feet in water and their heads in the fires of heaven,” according to an old Arabic saying. The Americans have not failed to heed this pointer on culture of date palms. The hot summer seasons, low humidity and large amounts of water available for irrigation attest to that. In a year the palm receives as much as 10 acre feet—or enough to cover each acre of plantings to a depth of 10 feet.

Longevity is another feature of the date palm. In Lower California, Mexico, there are 50,000 trees, planted between 1720 and 1770 and they are still in full production, possibly due to the care and attention with which they were started by eighteenth century Jesuit priests.

Approved commercial varieties in the Coachella valley have been reduced to three principal kinds. They are the Deglet Noor, meaning “date of light”; the Saidy, “of the north,” and the Thoory, the “dry bread date.”

Female trees bear the fruit, which is pollenized from male trees. Neither bees nor other insects are relied upon to accomplish this fertilization, but when the female tree is in bloom sprigs of pollen laden branches from the male tree are fastened in the upper branches of the former and the wind does the rest.

Throughout the year some special attention is required in the grove, even when the trees are not in blossom or bearing fruit. Pollinating occurs beginning in February, followed by the thinning of the fruit bunches. Spraying and dusting of the fruit stems is required two or three times during the summer.

In late August or early September each bunch is covered with a paper bag or cloth to protect the fruit from rain. The fruit then goes to the packing house for sampling, cleaning, grading and packing. Shipping begins immediately except for that portion of the crop placed in cold storage.

CULL APPLES MAY BE USED TO MAKE PECTIN FOR JELLY

Pectin to be used in making jelly from fruit juices which do not jell by themselves can be made at home from cull apples, says Miss Essie M. Hayle of the Missouri College of Agriculture. Some of the fruits which require the addition of pectin are the cherry, strawberry, peach, and pineapple.

Apples selected for pectin should be tart and hard ripe rather than mealy. They should be washed, have all imperfect spots removed, and be sliced, but should not be cored or pared. Cooking should be in a granite saucepan for twenty minutes, with water in the proportion of four and one-half pints to four pounds of apples. When cooked the mass should be strained through four thicknesses of cheesecloth until the juice ceases to drip.

When dripping is complete the pulp should be removed from the bag, weighed or measured, and returned to the saucepan with an equal amount of water added. Boiling should continue for twenty minutes, after which the juice should again be strained. The juice from the two extractions should together amount to about three quarts, and should be mixed together in a wide granite pan large enough so that the liquid will not be more than two inches deep.

This should be heated rapidly until the liquid is reduced to about one-fourth of its original volume, which should take from thirty to forty-five minutes. If the pectin extract is not to be used at once it should be poured boiling hot into clean jars or bottles and sealed at once.

Pork and Lamb Represent Best Meat Buys at Stores

In its regular weekly report issued for the guidance of consumers, the committee on marketing information of the Meat Council of Chicago states:

SWEET POTATOES A TENDER CROP; DON'T THROW 'EM

Throwing sweet potatoes is just as wasteful as throwing eggs. This is the advice of B. L. Weaver of the department of horticulture of the college of agriculture, University of Illinois, in telling Illinois farmers to be careful in their harvest of this tuber crop.

Bruises in handling shorten the storage life of sweet potatoes. To determine if a tuber is mature, the grower can break or cut into the potato. If the exposed surface dries then the crop is mature, but if the surface remains moist and turns dark, the root is immature.

APPLE IS RIPE WHEN IT GROWS TO NORMAL SIZE

Science has attacked the problem, centuries old, of whether an apple is ripe when it falls from a tree or whether one should judge ripeness by the color of the seeds in the core of the fruit. As a result it has been decided that one should judge largely by the “normal size” of the fruit.

This is the deduction made by Prof. G. W. Peck of the New York State College of Agriculture. No general rule holds true for all varieties, although there are certain characteristics to use for a guide. Surface color of the red varieties should indicate a condition of maturity.

CAN YOU JELL PEACHES? YES, BUT IT'S TRICK

Apple Juice Is Needed to Supply Pectin.

BY IRENE STEYSKAL.

October is the month for thrifty housewives looking toward long winter months to gather together the large and small jars and bottles, the tall glasses, the short squat glasses, the dripping bags, the rubber bands and the paraffin pot and begin the restocking of shelves in the fruit preserves cabinet.

The best jellies, of course, are made from fruits of high pectin content, such as crabapples, quinces, sour apples, not quite ripe grapes, gooseberries still slightly green, and so on. But excellent jellies may be made also from the fruits lacking pectic properties by combining them with commercial pectin or with apples, quinces or plums.

Making Peach Jelly.

Take peach jelly, for instance. A thoroughly satisfying jelly can be produced by combing equal quantities of peach and apple juice. Cover tart apples with water and allow them to boil until they are very soft; then drain through a jelly bag. Peaches, with their skins, are boiled in the same manner. Run the juice through a strainer, measure it and add an equal amount of the apple juice. Place the combined juices on the fire again and when they have boiled for one or two minutes, for every quart of the fruit juice add a pound and a half of sugar and the juice of a lemon.

Best results are obtained if the sugar has been heated before hand. The sirup should boil rapidly until the "jell" stage is reached—when the juice falls as a single congealed mass from the mixing spoon. After skimming, pour the jelly into heated glasses. The covering of melted paraffin should not be poured on until the jelly has cooled.

Pear Conserve Recipe.

The following receipe for pear conserve is a favorite of THE TRIBUNE'S cooking expert:

5 pounds pears.
5 pounds granulated sugar.
1 cup of raisins.
½ cup of nut meats.
The juice of 2 lemons.
The juice of 3 oranges.

Peel and core the pears. Dice them and allow them to stand over night with the sugar. Cut the raisins and the rind of one of the oranges into small pieces. Boil slowly all the ingredients, with the exception of the nuts, for two hours. It is necessary to stir the mixture at short intervals to prevent burning. Add nut meats before pouring the conserve into glasses.

Most cooks like to try their hand at spiced plums. For spicing, the large blue ones are recommended. Stem and wash the fruits and prick each plum a number of times with a fork. For each pound of plums, use three-fourths of a cup of sugar and one-half ounce of cinnamon and cloves. Suspend the spices in the preserving kettle in a small cheesecloth bag. Boil until the plums are tender. Remove stones and pour into jars.

Ready for Winter Days.

There is little dreariness in the contemplation of bleak winter days when all the jelly glasses have been packed with their concentrated bit of the summertime. A gray December dusk may be peering through the window, but it is pleasant enough inside when the old ebony tea table, well laden, is trundled up to our armchair before the open fireplace.

With the fragrance of jasmine rising from the teapot, small crisp biscuits, a crescent of lemon slices and a mound of gold flecked marmalade there comes a sense of wellbeing and quiet content.

DAKOTA EXPERTS TRYING TO BREED BETTER POTATO

Another "Burbank" in potatoes is being sought by experimenters at North Dakota agricultural college where plant breeding tests have been started to find new varieties which will yield better, be more resistant to disease and please housewives.

The housewife angle is injected into the search on the idea that consumers would patronize a new variety if it promised better cooking qualities and had more shallow eyes than some of the varieties now common to the market. Combating the late blight in the potatoes fields of Ireland half a century ago is considered the most recent important study and development of this crop.

Several years of work are anticipated before the North Dakota plots will show results, according to Prof. A. F. Yeager, horticulturist in charge of the experiments. Thirty different potato varieties have been "crossed" from their respective pedigreed state in order to obtain the new types.

Hindu Dinner Is Full of Spice and Ends with Bang

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

If you ever get an invitation to a real Hindu dinner accept—particularly if your host is to be H. H. Rajput, Calcutta and Oxford graduate and wartime member of the British secret service. Mr. Rajput is giving a series of radio talks in Chicago.

Though Rajput was an officer in an all English unit his sympathies are Indian — particularly his gustatory sympathies. So he carries his own commissary—cook and all—during his American tour. For these circumstances a group of newspaper men was more than grateful last Monday evening.

Gathered about a table at the Ambassador East the party heard Rajput tell about his dramatic war experiences, discuss cobras and their charmers, Indian music, and Gandhi for an hour while titillating odors drifted in from the kitchen where the cook was busy.

Indian Curry an Experience.

No, Gandhi is not a grand stander, the turbaned smoky eyed host replied to one inquisitor. He is utterly sincere, even unto his goats' milk and loin cloth. Incidentally there was no goat's milk at the dinner.

But there was lamb—stewed with rice, mushrooms and curry—what an offering! Indian curry is an experience. Rajput explained that this was not the powdered curry to which the English and Americans are accustomed but the aromatic east Indian sauce compounded of more than 100 spices and various other ingredients besides the leaves of the curry tree. Among these, according to Encyclopedia Britannica are: Anise, coriander, mustard, poppy seeds, allspice, almonds, asafœtida, cinnamon, cloves, cocoanuts, fenigreek, garlic, onions, lime juice, vinegar, mace, mangoes, nutmeg, pepper, saffron, salt, tamarind, and turmeric.

And Indian rice is something else again, too. The grains appear longer than those of native rice and are so cooked that, though delightfully tender and mealy, they do not look like mush.

Indian curry gets five stars from this reviewer.

Heavenly Hash of Vegetables.

Another delightful dish was a combination of succulent vegetables, none of which any of us were able to identify. Rajput called it bhagi. He explained that he could not come any closer than that phonetically in English, nor could he explain what the vegetables were that went into it. In India a member of a high caste never dares invade the kitchen, he explained. And he is no more inclined to discover all that goes into bhagi than an American is as to what goes into hash.

Bhagi is a heavenly hash, a devastating dish. And we eat spinach and sand! And talk about our western civilization. There may be 350,000,000 persons in India and 97 per cent of them illiterate, but at least a minority understands food.

Chutney and red olives. The olives were tender and covered with a sauce, and more than palatable. It was my first encounter with the piquant chutney. The taste of this combination of east Indian pungencies, including ginger [I believe] and many herbs and fruits defies description. It's sour, it's peppery, it's stingy, it burns and it's a little sweet, too. You may argue about this. Maybe some of those sensations were aroused by curry. There is such a thing as getting muddled in such an array of spicy things.

Salad Not a Stranger.

The salad you may recognize: Avocados with water cress, and plenty of an Indian dressing with lots more pep than the clear pool in the pear implied. Rajput explained that avocados, generally regarded as a luxury here, are common enough in certain districts of India and that he favors them for at least a couple of meals daily.

In roti the Hindu finds a momentary respite from his many palate ticklers. Roti must be a relative of bread—perhaps a cross of rye bread and a buckwheat pancake. Still, as we recall, Rajput explained that whole wheat flour formed its backbone. It is baked, or fried on both sides, with crusts and a soft center. You can break off pieces or eat it like a cookie.

Rajput recalled that in 1857 during the famed mutiny it was roti that was used to carry the notes of spies. The dinner guests went for roti, and so would you.

Ends with a Bang!

And since Americans must have dessert there was a Hindu dessert: Hulwa or halwa Rajput dubbed the dish—a sort of warm pudding vaguely suggesting pumpkin pie, squash, sweet potato, caramel, butterscotch, honey and perhaps half a dozen other things. It had something of the consistency of cream of wheat. Ah, but this is profane.

Then came Indian tea, a deep coffee colored tea, which several mistook for java before sipping it.

After dinner there was a syrupy looking drink, resembling karo to all outward intents. Bahng, the host called it, a national drink for centuries. Yes, you may pronounce it bang, or bang, bang!

And that makes it a grand slam.

IF CANNING FOOD FIRST ESTIMATE ON CONSUMPTION

Use the Method Best Suited to Product.

Much time and expense can be saved if before canning the homemaker estimates the amount of each product the family will probably need during the year, declare nutrition specialists in home economics at the Ohio State university.

Forty-eight quarts of canned greens, they say, will last a family of five, if served twice a week, five months. Eight quarts of tomatoes will last the same family 9 months if served twice a week, and 90 quarts of other vegetables will last the family 7 months if served three times a week.

Two methods of canning are in common use, the open kettle method and the can cooked method. The open kettle method consists in cooking the food in an open kettle and pouring the product into hot jars. This method is fairly successful in canning acid products, such as fruits, tomatoes and rhubarb. Success depends on thoroughly boiling the jars, lids and rubbers and using them while hot. The rubbers are adjusted on the jars, which are filled to overflowing with the boiling hot food and sealed tightly.

In using the can cooked method the fruit, vegetables, or meat are packed in jars, either hot or cold, covered with hot sirup or water, or neither; the glass jars are partly sealed and tin cans are wholly sealed and cooked sufficiently to make the food keep.

The can cooked method, according to the nutrition specialists, gives the best results, as much of the original flavor, color, shape and food value of the products are retained. Cooking in this method is done by the water bath, the steam cooker, or by steam under pressure.

New Crop of Asparagus Is Appearing on Market

One of the highest priced foods on the Chicago market at present is asparagus. Small quantities of the new season crop from California are beginning to arrive for distribution by wholesalers and retailers. The first was sold two weeks ago in wholesale lots of a dozen bunches for as much as $15, but that price this week has been cut in half, so that bunches wholesale are about 70 cents each.

THIS IS THE TIME TO BAR BOX ELDER BUGS FROM HOUSES

Ants have practically completed their spring and summer forages into homes for food, but another pest is ready to move in large numbers into homes for the winter. Housewives are warned by J. H. Bigger, assistant entomologist of the Illinois state natural history survey, that box elder bugs should be combatted now for effectiveness.

They are still outside, which is the place to kill them. Where it is advisable, the most simple practice is to pour boiling water on them where they are found in numbers. But where foilage may be damaged, a nicotine sulphur spray is recommended.

The latter is prepared by putting one part of the poison in 200 parts of water and adding one ounce of soap to each gallon of spray. The bugs must be hit by the spray to be killed. The pests are about one-half inch long with dark wings spotted red. Longitudinal red line on the body in front of the wings aid identification. They do no real damage in homes, but constitute a nuisance, according to Bigger.

EGGPLANT IS ON MARKET; HERE'S HOW TO SERVE IT

Many Ways to Prepare It; Here Are a Few.

BY ANGELA PETESCH.

Eggplants, sometimes called egg fruit—the large, dark purplish, egg shaped vegetable—is on the market now in abundant quantities and there is no reason why you shouldn't know something about it, and no reason, either, why you shouldn't serve it frequently. Unfortunately it does not enjoy the popularity of other common vegetables.

The eggplant is a native of southern Asia and is a member of the nightshade family, of which the potation, tomato and tobacco also belong. Although the choicest fruit is produced in the southern states or in tropical countries, it can be grown in moderate climates, too, and has been successfully grown as far north as New York state.

How to Serve It.

I remember well when my mother experimented with a few plants in her vegetable garden. That was in McHenry-on-the-Fox. The heavy purple fruit hung on the sturdy, low green bushes pendant fashion. The success of it made her feel pretty good, too. Eggplants were practically unknown in the neighborhood gardens.

I have spoken several times of the shiny purple color of the vegetable. That is not the only variety, although it is the most popular. There is also a white eggplant and a striped variety. We never [at least seldom] see these in our markets.

The most common way of serving it is sliced and fried in butter or deep fat. First pare the vegetable, then slice. Many people advise sprinkling each slice with salt an hour or so before cooking to remove any bitterness. The slices when salted should be placed on top of the other on a clean plate and weighted down to press out the moisture. Wipe the slices dry before cooking and dip each one in a simple batter or dredge in flour and fry in butter, or dip in egg and cracker crumbs and fry until a golden brown in deep fat just as you do with croquettes.

Here Are Some Recipes.

If you like eggplant prepared in this way, try it next either stewed, escalloped, baked or stuffed. These recipes will help you:

BAKED EGGPLANT.

1 eggplant, large.
4 tomatoes, medium.
1½ tsp. salt.
⅛ tsp. pepper.
1 cup milk.
⅜ lb. grated cheese.
2 eggs.
2 cups cracker crumbs.
¼ lb. butter.
2 onions, large [or 3 medium].

Pare and cut eggplant into small pieces and boil until tender. Drain and cool. Peel and cut tomatoes into small pieces and add to eggplant. Add to mixture salt, pepper, ¾ cup milk, ¼ lb. cheese, eggs well beaten and 1½ cups cracker crumbs. Chop and brown onions in ⅛ lb. butter and pour both into mixture. Pour in buttered baking dish. Spread over top the remaining ⅛ lb. cheese, ½ cup cracker crumbs and dot with ⅛ lb. butter. Pour over it the ¼ cup milk. Bake in moderate oven one hour. If desired, 1 cup finely chopped mushrooms browned in butter may be added with onion. Yield: 12 servings.

STUFFED EGGPLANT.

2 hard cooked eggs.
2 tbsp. butter.
Pepper.
⅓ cup grated cheese.

Parboil the eggplant in slightly salted water for 20 minutes. Remove from stove and cool long enough to make it easy to handle. Cut the eggplant in halves lengthwise. Scoop out the fleshy part. Put through the food chopper. Mix the chopped eggplant with the minced hard boiled eggs, butter, salt and pepper. Fill the hollow shells with the mixture. Bake in a moderate oven [375 degrees F.] in a pan ¼ full of hot water for 30 minutes. Ten minutes before removing from the oven sprinkle the grated cheese over the top.

THREE MEALS A DAY

From the Tribune Cook Book

BY MARY MEADE.

Mrs. T. S. writes asking for a recipe for fried pie. How many of you know what it is? Unless you are a southerner, or boast a flock of southern kin, you probably are unfamiliar with it.

Fried pie claims its origin in Kentucky, and was prepared in two different ways in the blue grass country. Some cooks made it from a baking powder biscuit dough, while others used a pie crust dough. It was rolled very thin and cut round about the size of a small saucer. Then it was creased in the middle, and one side was covered with stewed dried fruit, such as apples, apricots, and the like. The edges were pressed down after it had been folded over similar to a turnover, and the "pie" was put into a greased spider to be fried until brown on each side.

Fried pie today is commonly cooked in deep fat. The following recipe is for this type of frying.

FRIED PIES.

Roll out fried cake dough thinner than for fried cakes. Cut in rounds, or in squares, slightly larger than good sized cookies. Spread one piece with stewed fruit, or jam, and place another piece of dough on the top of it. Press the edges together tightly, and fry in deep hot fat, just as you do fried cakes. Drain on unglazed brown paper. Serve sprinkled with powdered sugar.

Apples are especially good as a filling for fried pies. They must, however, be well seasoned with sugar and nutmeg, or cinnamon—the condiments you prefer with them as you ordinarily prepare them. Remember, these are no food for youngsters of tender years—no matter how perfectly you make them!

ORANGE BREAD.

Peel of two oranges.
1 scant cup of white sugar.
½ cup of brown sugar.
1 cup of sweet milk.
1 egg.
3 cups of flour.
3 teaspoons of baking powder.

Cut the orange peel into small strips, cover with water, and cook ten minutes. Drain, cover with water again, and cook until tender. Drain.

Add the brown sugar and the white to the peel, and cook over a low flame to make a thick sirup. While this is cooling, sift the baking powder with the flour, stir in the milk and the beaten egg. Add the cooled mixture, and mix the two together well. Put in a greased pan and let rise twenty-five minutes. Bake in a moderate oven [350 degrees Fahrenheit] 45 to 60 minutes.

CREAM SLAW.

1 quart of chopped cabbage.
2 cups of vinegar.
½ cup of cream.
2 tablespoons of sugar.
½ teaspoon of mustard.
½ teaspoon of celery seed.
Salt and pepper to taste.
Yolks of two eggs.

Beat the egg yolks and sugar together. Add the cream and the rest of the seasoning—stirring it well together. Pour the mixture into the hot vinegar, and let scald for one minute. Pour the whole over the cabbage and serve.

WHEAT VALUED FOOD ON MENU FROM SOUP ON Contains Most Protein of Any Cereal.

Wheat long has been thought of as a source of flour for bread and a cereal important in the preparation of many breakfast foods, but now it is being given credit for deserved popularity in most any part of a meal from soup to dessert. Recommendation for this growing practice is given by Dorothea Muehl of the home economics extension department of Purdue university.

Next to oats, wheat contains the most protein of any of the cereals, she says. Wheat preparations differ in chemical composition more than those from oats or corn because of the variety of ways that wheat is prepared. Purchased in bulk, the wheat preparations are among the cheapest foods that can be used in the dietary.

Rich in Vitamins.

Whole wheat is one of the most nutritious cereals man can eat. It is rich in vitamin B, the vitamin which stimulates the appetite and helps prevent pellagra; and is also a source of vitamin A, which is known as the anti-infective vitamin. It is also a cheap source of energy which is especially needed on cold winter mornings.

Whole wheat can well be used as a thickening for soups and can be used in desserts instead of rice. To be at its best, whole wheat must be thoroughly cooked. Cracked wheat is the crushed grain with part of the bran left on and needs to be cooked for several hours.

Good as Breakfast Food.

Either crushed or whole wheat may be used for breakfast food. To cook, first sort and wash grains carefully. Add one and one-half cupsful of cold water to each cupful of wheat and soak over night. Then add one teaspoonful of salt to each cup of wheat and cook slowly for three or more hours. If desired, a large quantity may be cooked and canned for future use, thus saving time and fuel. A bushel of wheat will yield three bushels of food.

IF the autumn morning is crisp and clear, serve Shredded Wheat Hot. It's simple enough. Just pour hot milk over the biscuits instead of cold. You can't serve a better way. It doesn't cool while you're serving it — hot milk holds its warmth.

If the day promises the warmth of Indian Summer, serve Shredded Wheat with cool milk. Just heat the biscuits to retain their crispness, and add bananas or other fruit, if you like, then serve with milk or cream. Which ever way you serve Shredded Wheat, the result is the same. A delicious, healthful breakfast, easily served and warmly appreciated by every member of the family.

LIPTON'S DEATH RECALLS LAVISH BANQUETS HERE

Yachtsman Entertained in City's Clubs.

BY RUTH DE YOUNG.

When the world lost the famous tea merchant and mariner, Sir Thomas Lipton, last week Chicagoans recalled his seven visits to the city and how he was wined, dined, and applauded [illegible]. He came to America unnoticed as a 17 year old immigrant boy in [illegible], but on his return trips in [illegible], 1903, and again in the 1920s, when he sought to win back for Great Britain that coveted yachting trophy, the America's cup, there were luncheons, dinners, and banquets in an atmosphere truly nautical.

Particularly well remembered is the luncheon given for Sir Thomas and his party in October, 1903, in the old café of Siegel, Cooper & Co. Among the pages of a family scrapbook Mrs. [illegible] K. Schoenbrod of the Rogers Park hotel has found a menu that tells the story.

Guests at Luncheon.

With the other distinguished guests, among them the late Medill McCormick and Alexander H. Revell, Justice [illegible] W. Duncan and William Kennedy McKay, Sir Thomas sang the toast:

Here's to the bliss that's found in a kiss
When lip meets lip in rapture;
But sweeter by far than others are
Those we get through capture.

Then followed a luncheon replete with interest from the Bohemian cocktails to the last liqueur. The menu follows:

Bohemian Cocktails
Club Soda
Blue Points
Deidesheimer Gewurz Traminer
Olives Celery
French Bouillon
Schloss Vollradser
Boiled Haddock
Château Margaux '84 Parisienne Potatoes
Chicken en Casserole
Pommery and Greno Hazel Peas
Lettuce Salad
Camembert Cheese Nut Meats
Assorted Fruits
Turkish Coffee
Cigars Cigarets
Apollinaris Turkish Roses
Liqueurs.

Suggestions to Diners.

And a word for that well known Siegel, Cooper café that has long since passed out of business. The suggestions to guests printed on the reverse side of the menu were typical of advertising by eating houses of that day. Among them was: "There is absolutely no restaurant or kitchen odor. The air is as fresh and sweet as you will find it on the lake front." Another item read: "There is an abundance of tables for two, four, or eight people, so you may be seated in comfort without being subjected to a nervous strain of having two or three people stand back of you ready to take your vacated seat." And the menu card advised guests to note that a "waitress nicely gowned with well laundered linen" received their order. "These waitresses," it went on, "will not stand around your table and annoy you with unsought attention, expecting to receive a tip at the end of your luncheon."

Furthermore the café had glassware always bright and sparkling and silverware and chinaware of the best, according to the menu. Finally it called the attention of guests to the fact that they were supplied with well laundered, dry, clean napkins.

Banquet for Sir Thomas.

On the same visit to the United States, Sir Thomas Lipton was entertained at a banquet in the famous old Waldorf Astoria in New York, where, it is related, a procession of waiters marched in bearing trays crowned with models of the Reliance and the Shamrock, the American and British yachts that had raced a day or two previous. On this occasion Sir Thomas remarked: "I am beginning to think that there is some magic spell about that bloomin' old cup."

With similar decoration and flourish, he was again entertained in Chicago in 1906—this time at the Chicago Athletic association. Former Gov. Edward F. Dunne, then mayor of Chicago, Senator James Hamilton Lewis, George Ade, and William J. Hynes were present—sportsmen all, as Sir Thomas put it.

There were numerous other occasions when the celebrated sportsman who started in business in a small grocery, was the guest of honor at elaborate banquets in some of the city's finest clubs—among them the Chicago Yacht club, the Saddle and Sirloin club, and the South Shore Country club. Sir Thomas delighted to return to Chicago, the city to which he often referred as the commercial center of America and the home of beautiful girls.

Potatoes, Onions, and Cabbage Cheap This Year

Of the three standard "cold weather" vegetables sold in largest quantities in Chicago and suburbs, potatoes are expected to be the lowest in price this winter as compared to other winters. Low prices are expected to prevail for onions and cabbage, also. At present potatoes on the wholesale market are about 95 cents a hundred pounds for some of the best Wisconsin varieties. Onions are around 75 to 90 cents for a 50 pound sack and cabbage is about one cent a pound wholesale.

FLY POPULATION IS LARGER THAN USUAL THIS FALL

"Yes, there are more flies this fall," is the answer of an Iowa zoology professor as to whether persons who make a habit of noticing such things have been deceived in the last few weeks by their eyes. W. H. Wellhouse, the Iowa authority, explains the reason.

Ideal weather conditions for the multiplying of fly families have prevailed this summer. The exact proportions of rain and hot weather conducive to these irritating insects have occurred almost throughout the summer season. Houseflies hatch from eggs in seven days at a favorable temperature of around 70 degrees and in another six days at 85 to 90 degrees are full grown.

To combat further increases in fly numbers, the suggestions are to pay careful atention to refuse of all kinds.

Grape Auctions Being Held 3 Times a Week

Three auctions per week are now being conducted for the car lot sales of juice or wine grapes at the Chicago fruit auction, 27th street and Ashland avenue. The jobbers will be selling for several weeks. Prices to customers for one or more of the 26 pound boxes of grapes now range from $1 to $1.15, enough for "about two gallons of juice," says one authority.

BEST APPLES AND ORANGES NOW SELL AT REDUCED PRICES

Some of the best apples and oranges of the season are selling at low wholesale prices which should mean savings to housewives, according to market reports issued yesterday. The new crop of western apples has hardly gotten into full swing on the market, yet fruit auction buyers report retailers should be able to sell Jonathan apples at five pounds for 25 cents. Similar savings over other years should be available to customers purchasing oranges, which on the wholesale market are about two cents each.

AMERICAN RED WHEAT BEST FOR FLOUR MAKING

American red wheats continue to excel in quality any other wheat produced for flour making, according to reports of the United States department of agriculture. Five commercial classes of wheat are included in the reports. They are the hard red spring wheat, the hard red winter wheat, the soft red winter wheat, durum wheat and white wheat. Canada produces the best wheat for milling, with the United States and Russia next.

BREAKFAST EGG SOON TO REACH YOU IN A CAN

And the Canned Chicken Is Gaining Favor.

Scrambled eggs from the inside of a can will be a common breakfast dish in five or ten years. This prophecy was made this week by Harry R. Lewis, Rhode Island commissioner of agriculture and president of the National Poultry council, while he attended a conference in Chicago called by the International Baby Chick association.

Interest in the session was aroused by a plea that greater consumption of eggs and poultry is naturally desired by men in the poultry industry. Another point stressed during the conference was the importance of coordinating the grading work being done in various states both in poultry and in eggs.

Eggs from the Can.

Lewis described the breakfast dish which he thinks will be popular within the next decade. Eggs in powdered form are found highly useful in the baking industry and he looks to see this form of the egg put up in cans for ready use by housewives in all forms of cooking. He also predicts a greater use of canned poultry, due to the facility with which the food is prepared for the table.

In another ten years Lewis also predicts immense egg factories and broiler factories located in the heart of great cities. Chicago will have them and visitors will see some of their egg and broiler supplies produced by chickens that never see sunlight. Farmers will still be "in the picture" because their stock will be important for feeder poultry, egg production, and breeding stock to supply and supplement these highly efficient factories.

Grading Is Stressed.

The consensus at the meeting, which was held Tuesday in the Stevens hotel, was that improved methods of grading on the farm would mean that consumers would be more able to purchase poultry and eggs on the same "grade" basis now common in buying retail supplies of potatoes, butter, onions and many fruits.

The state of Wisconsin, beginning Oct. 15, will see compulsory buying grades, according to A. A. Brown of the Wisconsin department of markets. In effect it will mean that eggs will be graded and sold accordingly from "hennery" to the housewife. More efficient handling is expected to result.

Household Hints

Tomato culls make just as good soup as the most perfect fruit.

The kitchen shears are especially useful in shredding lettuce for salads.

A rounded bottom and outside French seam make a jelly bag easy to clean.

Try a mirror instead of a picture in a dark corner; it brightens dark places.

A coat of aluminum paint inside the oven makes it easier to see what is going on there.

Skins may be removed from tomatoes by a light scalding or by turning them quickly over a flame.

Avoid that homemade look in clothes by pressing every seam as it is sewed.

THIS IS YEAR TO PRESERVE SOME FRUIT BUTTERS

One of the most popular and economical ways of using the quantities of fruit so plentiful on the markets this year is to make fruit butters out of the surplus peaches, pears, apples, and grapes. This recommendation comes from nutrition specialists of the department of home economics of Ohio State university.

Fruit butters, they say, are made by cooking fruit pulp with sugar until a mixture of a consistency suitable for spreading is formed. In general, the fruit is cooked until tender, rubbed through a colander or sieve, to remove all skins, seeds and cores, and cooked with sugar. From one-third to one-half as much sugar as pulp is usually used, depending upon the degree of sweetness desired.

Butters require frequent stirring to prevent burning. Quick cooking gives a clearer product. Sometimes a combination of the pulp of more than one fruit gives a better flavor than where one fruit alone is used.

In making peach butter the following recipe is suggested: Peel and stone the peaches. Cook in as small an amount of water as possible until they are reduced to a pulp. Rub through a colander. Add one-half as much sugar as pulp and cook the mixture until it is thick and clear. Constant stirring toward the last will be necessary to prevent burning. Pack into clean hot jars and seal at once.

Pear butter is made in much the way as is peach butter, except the pears need not be peeled and cored, but are cooked and run through a sieve. The flavor is improved if combined with lemon juice or other tart fruit.

CLEAN FUR WITH CORNMEAL.

To clean fur, first sponge well with gasoline to loosen the dirt. If it is very soiled, rub in cornmeal while the fur is still damp, beat out the meal and brush. Finish by hanging the fur in the sunshine for several hours.

Movie Gossip Fresh from Hollywood

BY GEORGE SHAFFER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Hollywood, Cal., Oct. 8.—[Special.]—Jimmie Durante rates as considerable of a practical joker on Broadway.

Lawrence Tibbett, Lupe Velez and W. S. Van Dyke have a similar rating in Hollywood. James is now in Hollywood.

Early this month when it was about 94 inside a sound studio they sent word to Durante that he was wanted for a rôle as a general.

Durante donned the general's full dress uniform and greatcoat. He waited to be called for his scene.

Every ten minutes he perspired more freely. Every one said his turn would come "any minute." Came quitting time. Director Van Dyke calmly told him to go home, because he wasn't needed anyway. That hazing was only the start.

Illness of Eleanor Hunt yesterday caused postponement of her divorce hearing against Rex Lease. The case comes up again next week.

When the report that James Dunn, Fox's new young male hit, was soon to wed Molly O'Day was sprung on Dunn today he said, "Maybe some day, but I want to fatten up my bank account before I get married." Miss O'Day said, "What Jimmy says goes with me."

Many film actresses, and some actors as well, are registered in the free night school dancing classes at Hollywood High school. Last year the same kind of performers were paying $5 a lesson for dancing instructions.

An amusing sight on the boulevard is that because of hard times a number of the girls who intended to become platinum blonds compromised by going aluminum.

When Lillian Bond arrived from New York for a Hollywood film career she had a monocle. She told greeters that she wore it "because of a weak eye, and not, like most monocle wearers, because of weak brains."

Victor McLaglen once fought Jack Johnson (and wasn't knocked out either) when the Negro heavyweight was winning his way toward the world's boxing championship with Jeffries. Now Johnson is about to open a café in the downtown Los Angeles black belt and sent an invitation to McLaglen to attend his opening as an honor guest. Johnson announces that Vic said he'd be there.

Daily Brushing Is Quickest Way to Beautiful Locks

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

When you feel the urge to advise the brushing of hair so many strokes per day, as my conscience directs me frequently to do, I visualize my audience as saying, "Now, isn't she the quaint old dear, though? She has a grandma complex, that one!"

Anyway, the hair brushing business, as a home duty, has gone out of style. So much so that at a recent weekend gathering when one lovely one tipped her head and hair forward for a good brush treatment, there were exclamations aplenty.

"I haven't done that for years," said one onlooker, a girl whose hair would have been vastly improved had she been doing so regularly.

It's curious to me, and always will be, why women who can afford facials and the best of cosmetics and indulge in both, don't take the same interest in their hair. Ask any salon proprietor or proprietress if it isn't easier any day to sell a client the idea of a facial than to sell her the idea of an invigorating hair treatment.

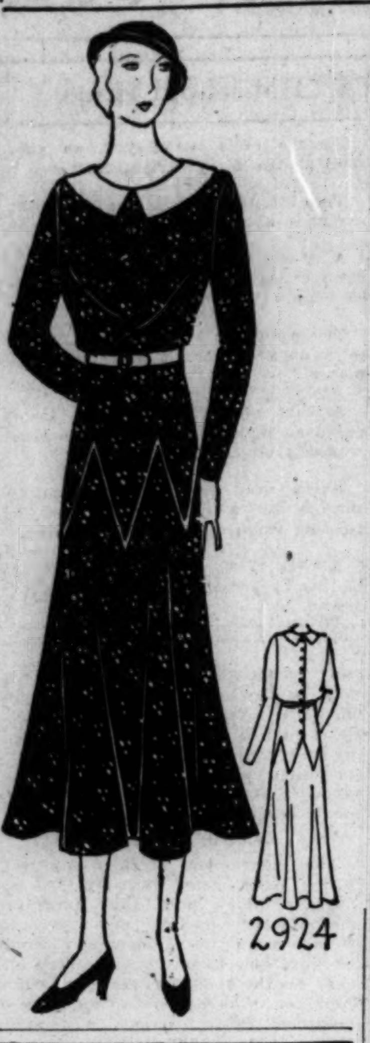
O, they'll get marcels and finger waves and permanents without much persuasion. But hair treatments to give tone to the scalp, to revive the color, to prevent graying, to restore gloss—could be a lot better patronized. Not that I believe the treatments can't be done at home by the woman herself to her greater hair glory, but we've come to be such a lot of lazy demons that we rely on professional work. Yet we favor the facial attentions. And as I say, curiously enough, we're not willing to turn the head over with the same alacrity. The consequence is that skin quality is better than hair, taking women by and large.

Then, we build for future years with skin care. We don't with hair care, even though we know that gray hairs can be staved off with good scalp tonings, for which there is no implement like the hair brush and its vigorous application daily.

But here and right now the day is upon us when the quality, tone, and coloring of the hair is in for as minute a scrutiny as the face gets. And how many are prepared for the inspection?

PATTERNS BY CLOTILDE

[Registered U. S. Patent Office.]



2924

WOMAN'S AND MISSES' DRESS.

Here is a new tailored dress that buttons down the back, and it is most attractive and practical made of a rust-red monotone tweed mixture. The collar is white piqué, and the bottoms are red bone in a matching shade. It is belted at a normal waistline, and the circular skirt, joined to the bodice in pointed outline, narrows the line through the hips.

The pattern, 2924, comes in sizes 16 and 18 years, and 36, 38, 40, and 42 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 3⅝ yards of 39 inch material with ⅝ yard of 35 inch contrasting.

Town Houses Still Compete with Country

BY THALIA

"WE'RE half there and half here," I heard one fashionable matron say to another at a tea the other day, and wondered what on earth she meant. Later the expression fluttered across the conversational currents again and I learned that it is a description of the condition of those who haven't completely closed their summer places in the country nor yet have entirely opened their town dwellings for the winter.

Week-ends are still so nice in the country that people are loath to move definitely into the city, but there are so many committee meetings and other things going on that it's necessary to be downtown fairly early in the day in order to get everything done. Hence the half and half situation.

The Cyrus H. Adamses are among the half-in and half-outers, spending week-ends in Lake Forest still and being at their apartment at 1500 Lake Shore drive during the week. The Frank Hibbards are back and forth between their place at Shoreacres and their apartment at 1301 Astor street and the A. Watson Armours between their Lake Forest place and 209 Lake Shore drive.

Mr. and Mrs. Cyrus McCormick Jr. have as their house guest at their apartment at 900 North Michigan avenue Mrs. McCormick's sister, Mrs. Fred Morris Dearing, wife of the United States ambassador to Peru, who is here for a few days en route to Lima.

Hostesses and guest of honor were mutually complimentary at the Kenwood Social Service club's luncheon for Beatrice Lillie yesterday at the Woman's Athletic club. The club's committee for the benefit theater party of "The Third Little Show" on Monday, Oct. 19, told Miss Lillie how they weren't even having difficulty selling their husbands tickets for the benefit and Miss Lillie remarked to everybody's delight, "I've had a wonderful time, although luncheons usually terrify me."

The play committee, including Mrs. Keith Spensel, Mrs. Harold Gordon, and Miss Madeline Magerstadt, Mrs. Ralph G. Johnson, president of the executive committee; Mrs. Albert S. Cummins, chairman of the ticket committee, and others of the members, including Mrs. C. H. Veeder, Mrs. James Talman, Mrs. Cyrus Mark, Mrs. John Logan, and Mrs. Wilson Killough, were present. Mrs. Ernest Byfield, in a smart black frock with a cardinal red bolero and a Spanish sailor hat of black felt with a perky red feather, accompanied Miss Lillie.

The Vocational Society for Shut-ins is starting off the season with 2 sales to be held on the north shore next week, one on Tuesday at the residence of Mrs. Edward K. Welles at 321 Ahwanee road, Lake Forest, and the other on Thursday at Mrs. Andrew MacLeish's "Craigie Lea" at 459 Longwood avenue in Glencoe.

The Central Council for Nursing Education is to have a luncheon at the Blackstone next Wednesday. Mrs. Paul Walker is chairman of the committee in charge, and members of the junior auxiliary of Children's Memorial hospital are to assist her and the officers of the council in receiving. Dr. Charles Edward A. Winslow of Yale is to speak on "Who Is Responsible for Educating Nurses?"

Mrs. Bruce MacLeish and Mrs. Ernst von Ammon head the committee for decoration and tableaux for the benefit fashion show and tea, sponsored by the Winnetka board of the Northwestern university settlement, to take place on Monday afternoon, Oct. 19, at the Winnetka Masonic hall.

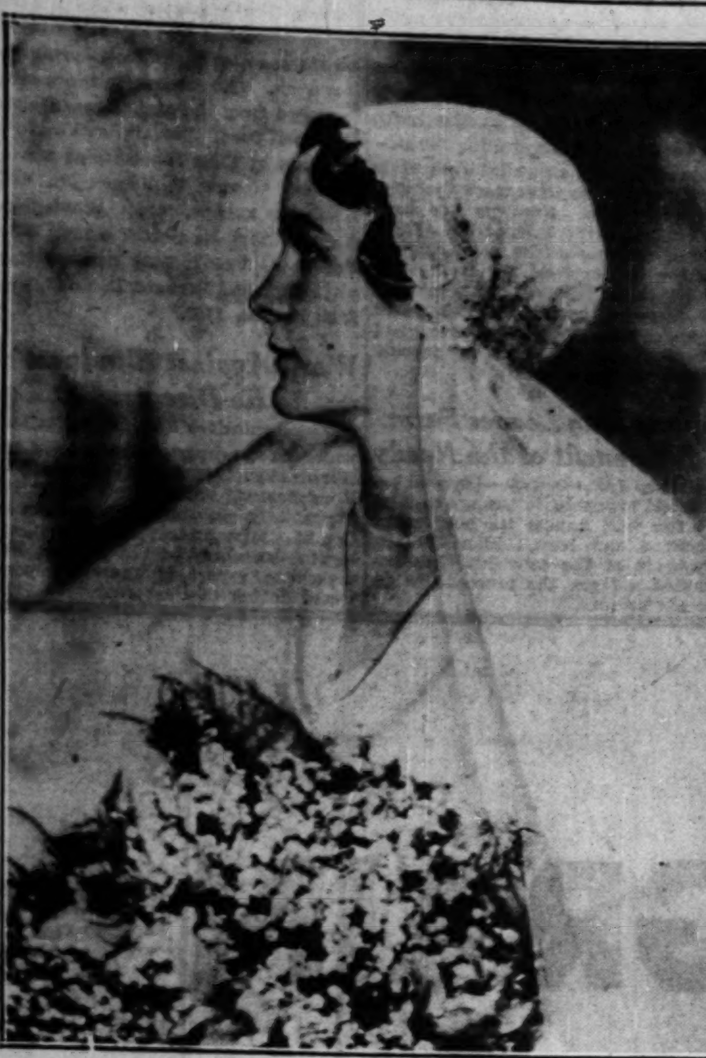
Service club bulletins—The cabaret supper after the Service club show on Oct. 24 will be held in the Drake ballroom. Tickets for reserved tables at $3 per person may be purchased from Mrs. John Dern at 27 East Bellevue place or through the Drake hotel (the girls hope they'll be purchased in advance, so as to avoid a waiting line and crush at the door). . . . A skit called "The Limousine Number" looks promising in rehearsals. The act opens with Charles Attley singing before the curtain to Mrs. John Shaw (Barbara King). Hugh MacLeish, the Bruce MacLeishes' 14 year old son, then warbles the same ditty to little Nancy Lee Bowes before the curtain rises to reveal a chorus of debutantes and their escorts before a background of limousines and town cars, each with its chorus boy chauffeur.

Mrs. Douglas Johnstone of Tunbridge Wells, England, who was called to Chicago by the sudden death of her mother, Mrs. Perry H. Smith, several weeks ago, is disposing by private sale of the beautiful and rare things that filled the late Mrs. Smith's residence at 411 Roslyn place. Going through the library of valuable books, Mrs. Johnstone discovered in a volume of the correspondence of Napoleon I. a yellowed clipping from a TRIBUNE of 50 or more years ago saying that the book "had been purchased by the Hon. Perry Smith, who is said to possess the finest collection of works on Napoleon I. on the American continent." Another small tome is inscribed in Mrs. Johnstone's grandfather's handwriting: "This is the only volume to have been saved intact from the first Perry Smith library after the Chicago fire." Mrs. Johnstone is staying at the Belmont hotel while she's in Chicago, but is spending most of her time at the Roslyn place residence so as to conclude her task in time to sail on the Aquitania on the 24th. The family portraits, which are the only things to be kept, are to be sent to Tunbridge Wells, where the Johnstones and their three children, David, Gerald, and Elizabeth, dwell.

Has any one told you—that Mr. and Mrs. Laird Bell of Hubbard Woods departed last evening for a 2 or 3 weeks' trip to California [the Bells' eldest daughter, Helen, has returned to Bryn Mawr for her senior year, and Frances leaves this week-end for Smith] . . . that invitations for the wedding of Miss Jean Adams, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward M. Adams, to Samuel Carson Pirie Jr., to take place at St. Chrysostom's at 4:30 o'clock the afternoon of Oct. 29, have been sent out . . . that Mr. and Mrs. Henry L. Hollis are to land in New York City today on the Vulcania after their summer trip abroad . . . that Mrs. Philip Harris Giddens of New York City is visiting her mother, Mrs. B. D. Gresham, for a fortnight and is staying at the Chatelaine towers?

Chicago acquaintances of Miss Alice Benning, who has been the executive secretary of the Chicago Council of Foreign Relations, will be interested to hear of the announcement of her engagement to Charles F. Darlington Jr. of New York City. Miss Benning's family resides in Phoenix, Ariz., and she is a graduate of the University of Chicago. Her fiancé was graduated from Harvard in 1926. After studying at Oxford he was with J. P. Morgan & Co. for a time.

OCTOBER BRIDE



MRS. WILLIAM WARDER WALLACE.

The marriage of Miss Helen Powell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Powell of 747 Kenesaw terrace, to William Warder Wallace took place on Wednesday. The ceremony was performed at the Powell residence at 11 o'clock in the morning in the presence of the families of the bride and groom, and was followed by a large reception at the Blackstone hotel. Miss Powell's attendants were Miss Alice Bremner as maid of honor, and Miss Frances Weary and Miss Marjory Murphy as bridesmaids. Norman Harbridge Gerlach was best man for Mr. Wallace, and Daniel McGuire and John E. Powell ushered.

WASHINGTON SOCIETY

Washington, D. C., Oct. 8.—[Special.]—President and Mrs. Hoover gave a garden party in the south grounds of the White House this afternoon for the members of the Woman's Republican League of the District of Columbia.

The governor of Porto Rico and Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt are spending a few days in Washington at the Hamilton.

Silas H. Strawn, president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, and Mrs. Strawn, who have been here since the 28th of September at the Shoreham, left this afternoon for their home in Chicago. They plan to return to the Shoreham here in two weeks.

Jewish Group Founded in 1871 to Celebrate Tonight and Sunday

Congregation Beth-El, 3230 Palmer street, will celebrate its 60th anniversary with a religious service and a banquet tonight and Sunday evening. The congregation was founded on the morning after the Chicago fire. Rabbi Mayer Lipman has been officiating minister for the last five years and Mr. Michael Levy the president. Mrs. Josephine Tausig, 4845 North Monticello avenue, is the only survivor of the group of original founders.

The congregation started in a rented hall on Peoria and Ohio streets. Within a week land was bought and a building started. There now is a temple in Palmer square, 3230 Palmer street.

The congregation has consistently advanced toward liberal [Reform] Judaism, abandoning early the characteristic ceremonies of orthodoxy.

This evening in the temple speakers will be: Rabbi Joseph Stolz, dean of the Chicago rabbinate; Rabbi Tobias Schanfarber, Rabbis Abram and Maurice Hirshberg, and Rabbi Louis Mann. The banquet will be held at the Copeland hotel, 5009 Sheridan road, Sunday evening.

For further information call Rabbi Lipman, Belmont 6318.

Dead Swedish Poet Named Nobel Winner; He Greeted Lewis

STOCKHOLM, Sweden, Oct. 8.—(AP)—The Nobel prize in literature, won last year by Sinclair Lewis, was posthumously awarded today to Dr. Eric Axel Karlfeldt, Swedish lyric poet.

Dr. Karlfeldt is the first member of the Swedish academy, which selects the Nobel prize winners, to receive the literary award. He was permanent secretary of the academy and chairman of the Nobel prize committee. As long as he lived he refused to allow the committee to consider him for the honor, although his name frequently was suggested.

Last year Dr. Karlfeldt introduced Mr. Lewis to the king of Sweden at the presentation ceremony in connection with which the American novelist made a speech declaring the way of art in America was hard.

Take no chances

the only pad "like" Kotex is genuine Kotex

THE instant you hear the expression "just like Kotex," be on your guard!

Unique, patented machinery makes Kotex from start to finish, in surroundings of hospital-like cleanliness. Materials used are superior, made especially for Kotex.

You don't have to take chances. Why should you? Kotex is available everywhere—the world's standard—the pad that is used by so many of the very finest hospitals.

So important do we consider genuine Kotex to your health that we urge you, when you buy sanitary napkins already wrapped, to be sure to ask: "Is this Kotex?" And be sure you are getting nothing but the real Kotex.

Kotex is splendidly comfortable. And it may be worn with perfect safety on either side. It is easily and completely disposable.

New Drought Relief Project for Red Cross

With their task almost completed among the drought-stricken farmers of the southwest, the American Red Cross faces a new task in a new drought area in Montana and North Dakota. That was the statement of James L. Fieser of Washington, D. C. He is acting chairman of the National Red Cross and spoke yesterday at the Congress hotel before the annual meeting of sixty Red Cross chapters of the northern Illinois region.

"In those two states, which have had continuous drought, the Red Cross expects to relieve between 15,000 and 20,000 families before winter sets in," Mr. Fieser said.

"As for the suffering caused by unemployment," he added, "the Red Cross chapters will work with the other local agencies in relieving suffering. Where there are no social agencies established in the community for that purpose, the Red Cross will do all the work, but where there are agencies the Red Cross will join in and help as it can."

Mr. Fieser told of the growth of the Red Cross since it was founded 50 years ago by Miss Clara Barton at Dansville, N. Y. The first chapter had 57 members, he said, while now there are 3,600 chapters and 12,000 branches, with over 4,000,000 adult members and over 7,000,000 junior members.

"Beside this there are more than 8,000 men in industry who have been taught first aid so they will know what to do in case of any of their fellow workers meet with accident. Over 350,000 men and women have been trained in life saving in the past decade and over 650,000 women have completed class work in home hygiene and care of the sick, thus helping and supplementing doctors."

The speaker referred to the drought relief work of the last year as the largest disaster relief project the Red Cross has ever known with the exception of the work in the world war. Over 600,000 families in 1,000 counties in 23 states were given relief. He said that at the present 1,000 Red Cross chapters are working with other agencies in relieving the families of the unemployed and predicted that this number would be doubled before winter.

Among other speakers were Mrs. Benjamin Van Riper, Rockford, chairman of the Rockford chapter, who presided; Col. Hugh E. Scott, head of the Edward Hines Memorial hospital, and L. M. Mitchell of St. Louis, assistant national director of roll call and public information of the Red Cross.

EMBARRASSING MOMENTS

Admonition from Son.

Sunday I had guests at the house and put a dish of candy within their reach.

My little son came in the room, saw just one piece of candy left on the dish, and remarked, "You shouldn't have put that candy there, mama; they ate it all up."

I surely was embarrassed, but we all laughed it off good naturedly.

MRS. R. C.

Collected at the Door.

My most embarrassing moment occurred recently when my boy friend and I thought we knew of a free dance. We went to night school and afterwards asked three girls to accompany us, which they did. Imagine our embarrassment when we arrived at the hall to find that there was an admission fee. To make matters worse, when we suggested paying, the girls wouldn't hear of it.

D. D.

Bright Sayings of the Children

Little daughter was amusing herself one morning in the sewing room where I was busy at the machine. She suddenly came to me looking pale, and in a frightened voice said, "Mother, fix my bed; I want to lie down."

I said, "Why, Jean, what has happened? Are you sick?" She answered, "No, but I swallowed a big button and I don't want to die standing up."

M. H.

My brother Roland, aged 6, was to start to school in the afternoon. His mother was making him try to write his name in the morning. After several unsuccessful attempts he became disgusted and said, "I hope they don't give me writing in school, only talking, 'cause I can do that pretty well."

GERMAN PLAYWRIGHT TO PRESENT DRAMA OF GEORGE WASHINGTON

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, Oct. 8.—Under the title of "Hero of His Land," a new drama, based on the life of George Washington, is being produced in the little town of Wuppertal-Elberfeld in Westphalia. The playwright, Walter Ploem, now a Berlin resident, is a native son of the town where the première performances of this latest stage presentation of the "father of his country" take place. It is a dramatization of the same writer's novel of like name.

In the words of Herr Bloem himself, the play "presents the most important episodes of the creator of the American Union's activity as commander of the forces in the war of independence."

Like the novel from which it was made, and an earlier romance of Washington's youth, "Son of His Land," by Bloem, is based on historical facts, but in contrast to the two books the drama takes advantage of historical license to bring close together on the stage episodes which actually were widely separated in time.

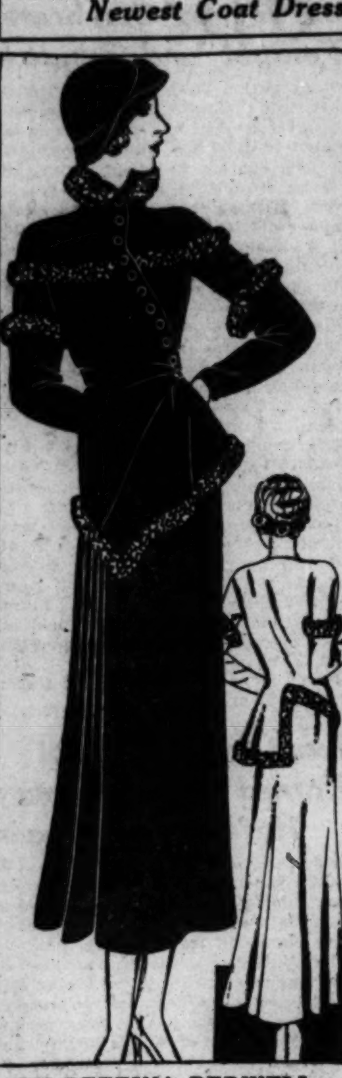
The two chief strands which are thus woven together to form the fabric of the piece are the treason of Benedict Arnold and Washington's famous march toward the south.

Among the characters which appear are the Marquis de Lafayette, Benedict Arnold, Alexander Hamilton, John Hancock, Gen. Friedrich Wilhelm von Steuben, Martha Washington, the English generals Howe, Clinton, and the earl of Cornwallis, Capt. John Andre, and others.

Business Leaders' Meeting to Aid Purdue Research

Lafayette, Ind., Oct. 8.—[Special.]—Leaders of industry from over Indiana and adjoining states were assembling in Lafayette tonight for a week-end conference at Purdue university. There important projects of the Purdue research foundation will be considered. President Edward C. Elliott and David E. Ross, president of the board of trustees, are the hosts. The 200 visitors, manufacturers, and industrial experts will be guests at a dinner tomorrow evening and will attend the Purdue-Illinois football game Saturday afternoon. Speakers at the dinner will include Gov. Harry G. Leslie, Howard W. Blakeslee, science editor of the Associated Press, and John M. Moody of New York City.

Newest Coat Dress Has a Basque Waist



BY BETTINA BEDWELL.

PARIS.—[Special.]—It is going to be fashionable in Paris this fall to wear a fur trimmed coat dress and if that dress has a modernized basque waist it will be smarter because of this touch of quaintness.

Most of the coat dresses the French dressmakers are showing have capelets, little half jackets or big collars that make them comfortable on frost-bitten mornings, and these items are almost always removable so that the frock can be worn under a coat later on.

The Yteb frock illustrated has a fur trimmed capelet and this may be unbuttoned and removed at will. The dress is made of shiny black broadcloth and buttons in a diagonal line from the center front of the neckline down to the left hip. It is a modernized basque frock and trimmed with bands of curley black astrakhan.

The capelet, which is given an astrakhan collar, makes this dress look like a suit, and when it is unbuttoned and taken off the dress has a simple round neck as shown in the smaller figure. The glove sleeves, which flare above the elbows and are trimmed with astrakhan, can also be peeled off, like gloves, leaving a plain short sleeve covering the upper arm.

By these tricks you have really two frocks in one, one for outdoors and one for indoors or under a winter coat. This is a chic economy.

Open Safety Pin Removed from Throat of Boy of 5

Divorced, but Each Is the Other's Heir; Ex-Actress Tells Why

Hollywood, Cal., Oct. 8.—Kathlyn Williams and Charles Eyton, divorced since January of this year, see each other frequently, and maintain an agreement, made before they separated, by which each is the beneficiary in the other's will.

She explained she had no near relatives and added: "I have certain charities and I want to continue giving to them after my death. I know Mr. Eyton will carry out my wishes. And if there is any left, I want him to have it. He often has expressed the same thought.

"Our separation was due solely to incompatibility. If there had been anything terrible in our lives, do you suppose we would have lived together fifteen years? When both of us were working, our careers kept us busy. We always had different interests and we found that after we quit working our lives didn't quite hitch."

She was an actress, he a studio executive. Both have retired.

Cabbies Bet on Turnstile Turn; 7 Seized and Freed

A new gambling device, called "turnstile roulette," was discovered by police in Evanston yesterday. Sergt. Dan Hanke and Detective William Bussean seized seven cab drivers at the Davis street elevated station in the north shore suburb. While waiting for passengers the men had whiled away their time by betting on what mark the turnstile would stop. Numbers had been chalked below the bars of the device. After a conference the police agreed that the cab drivers' plea was valid and let them go free. They argued that they had not actually operated the device since the motive power had been furnished by persons passing through the turnstile.

Work Against Blindness to Be Discussed at Tea

Representatives of organizations which have supported the work of the Illinois Society for the Prevention of Blindness will gather for a tea at the Fortnightly club on the afternoon of Oct. 15. Miss Audrey M. Hayden, executive secretary of the society, will present a report of the work completed during the last year.

Sensible Way to Lose Fat

Start taking Kruschen Salts today—that's the common-sense way to reduce.

This is what they do—they clean out impurities in your blood by keeping the bowels, kidneys and liver in splendid working order—a vigor and tireless energy you'd almost forgotten had existed returns.

As a result instead of planting yourself in an easy chair every free moment and letting flabby fat accumulate you feel an urge for activity that keeps you moving around doing the things you've always wanted to do and needed to do to keep you in good condition.

Be careful of the foods you eat—then watch the pounds slide off! Take one half teaspoonful of Kruschen Salts in a glass of hot or cold water tomorrow morning and every morning—and if they don't change your whole idea about reducing, go back and get the small price you paid for them. Get an 85 cent bottle of Kruschen Salts—lasts 4 weeks—at any progressive druggist anywhere in the world.

350 Consecutive Appearances

Young actress discovers how to be on the job every day

SHE USED to lose one night at least every month from her work. Valuable time that lost money for the show.

But for over a year now she's been on the job every single day, for 350 consecutive appearances in the record-breaking run of a Broadway hit. What made the difference? Such a simple hygiene habit that it's surprising more women haven't found it out.

She takes a spoonful of Nujol regularly for a few days beforehand, each month. Nujol regulates the intestinal functions of the body at times when they're apt to be upset. Helps to keep normal, even under abnormal conditions. Cleanses the whole system.

Why don't you try Nujol, as this woman did? Take it for the next three months. You'll be amazed at the difference it makes.

Nujol can't possibly hurt you. For it contains absolutely no drugs or medicine.

Broadway Favorite

It was perfected by the famous Nujol Laboratories, 2 Park Avenue, New York City. Be sure you get the genuine.

IT'S A WISE WOMAN WHO USES CHIFFON POWDER

Powder's VERY important indeed these days. Because these very feminine gowns call for a natural make-up and the new hats show it off.

That's why you need a powder that looks natural ... that gives your face FINISH instead of just covering it up. And that's why you'll like PRIMROSE CHIFFON POWDER. It has the rare gift of looking as if it were an actual part of your skin. It's as soft as velvet and as delicate as chiffon ... yet it clings for hours without caking or clogging the pores.

We'll be glad to show you all the lovely shades.

AT ALL Walgreen DRUG STORES

Eat WHOLE GRAIN foods —not devitalized foods!

Tune in Radio Station KYW for "Uncle Bob's" POPS Program at 5:50 p. m. on Tuesdays, Thursdays and Fridays ... also tune in Station WBBM at 11:55 a. m. every day except Sunday.

LOOK at this enlarged picture of Wheat Pops. You have never seen a breakfast food that looks like it. What is more important, you have never eaten a breakfast food that tastes like it.

There is a very simple reason—a very vital reason—for this remarkable difference. Wheat Pops is made from the natural whole grains. Most cereal foods today are devitalized foods—deficient in important food elements, lacking in the fine, rich flavor stored by Mother Nature in the whole kernel.

For years, food chemists have sought a way to pop whole grains into a tasty breakfast food. Time after time they have tried and failed—and America has gone on eating its devitalized cereals.

But now at last the way has been found. The food world was electrified by the announcement of Wheat Pops and Rice Pops. The experience of more than twenty years went into their perfection.

In Wheat Pops and Rice Pops, you not only have that wonderful whole grain flavor, you have the nourishment, the food value of the natural whole grain—the protein, iron, lime, carbohydrates, cellulose.

Yes, indeed, the bran is there along with all the rest—Nature's corrective. You enjoy eating your bran as it comes to you in Wheat Pops and Rice Pops. These new whole grain foods take your palate completely by surprise—they're so different, so supremely delicious!

Wheat Pops and Rice Pops are ideal foods for fall and winter. All the energy—the heat-producing elements of the grain—come to you intact. Their warming qualities stay with you. Serve them to the children—to the whole family—all winter long.

These are days when every food dollar must do its full share. Don't spend your money for devitalized foods. Ask your grocer by name for Wheat Pops and Rice Pops. Accept no substitutes—there is no other food like them. Eat these whole grain foods—for deliciousness, for nourishment, for health.

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

St. Louis, Mo., Oct. 8.—It may not be long now before the Athletics, thought to be invincible, relinquish their hold on the world title which has been theirs for the last couple of years.

The Cardinals, made bold and powerful by the sensational deeds of the speeding John Pepper Martin, think they'll ring down the curtain on the 1931 event by tearing through to their fourth victory when the series is resumed with game No. 6 here tomorrow.

It all depends on George [Blue Moose] Earnshaw of the Swarthmore clan. The wily Connie Mack has no other choice. This is no time for any of his ingenuity. Earnshaw must not only pitch as only Earnshaw can pitch, but he himself must rally a team that apparently is badly whipped.

Derringer St. Louis Choice.

It probably will fall to Paul Derringer, the freshman of the Cardinal staff, to draw the honor of pitching what might be the game which is to sustain the unwritten law that no team can win a world title three times in a row. The Athletics beat him in the opening struggle and since then he has been crippled by a nose infection. But the unassuming Gabby Street, boss of the St. Louis machine, sent him into the eighth inning of the Tuesday battle to see what would happen. What Derringer did in that brief workout is supposed to have earned him the right to start tomorrow.

If Derringer starts and fails the Cards still have a wonderful ace with which to lead off in the seventh and deciding fight on Saturday. Burleigh Grimes will be ready for that assignment if it becomes necessary. The little finger on his pitching hand is still sore as the result of stabbing at a drive off Haas' bat in the memorable two hit game of last Monday, but the 38 year old fellow promises that he won't let the injury prove a handicap.

Mr. Mack Is Up a Tree.

Mack's problem for tomorrow is big enough, but if he wins he'll face another in the seventh game. The long limbed Bob Grove will be ready so far as that is concerned, but the Cards don't fear him. He trimmed them in the opener, but was hammered for twelve hits. When he tried to repeat his victory last Monday eleven more hits were rolled up against him in eight innings. Those 23 hits might make Mack believe that Grove would be too great a risk in a game that meant the difference between winning and losing the big end of the purse. What might happen is that Earnshaw would be sent right back.

No matter how the series eventually ends, one thing is pretty certain. That is that there will not be much more popping off by the gentlemen who like to broadcast that the A's are the

You're Not Alone, Mr. Mack; Think of Poor Rabbits

Dallas, Tex., Oct. 8.—(AP)—The Texas league has its own legends about the amazing speed of Pepper Martin, hero of the world series, and one of the best is told by Roy Moore, teammate of Pepper on the 1929 Houston club.

"Old Pepper goes out on the prairie and scares up a bunch of rabbits," Moore explained.

"He runs along with these rabbits. He reaches down and feels the sides of these rabbits.

"If the rabbit is a bit thin, he lets him go and takes out after another one, but if the rabbit is nice and fat, old Pepper picks him up and puts him in his bag."

OUT OF TOWN FANS AT N. U. GAME TO SPEND $750,000

Out of town football fans attending the Notre Dame-Northwestern game at Soldiers' field tomorrow will spend $750,000 in Chicago, the Association of Commerce predicted yesterday. The figure is based on an estimated 25,000 visitors to the city for the game.

The statisticians believe the per capita outlay will be $30, divided as follows:

Hotel rooms for two nights	$ 7
Five meals and tips	12
Taxi fare, other transportation	3
Amusements	4
Miscellaneous	4
Total	$30

VESSER SUFFERS BROKEN LEG IN CARDINAL DRILL

John Veser, left end on the Cardinal football team, yesterday suffered a broken leg in scrimmage. He will be lost for the season. Coach Ernie Nevers will use Creighton or Rogge in Vesser's place Sunday in the game against the Packers at Green Bay.

Vesser was graduated from the University of Idaho in 1928. This is his second season with the Cardinals.

JEWEL ENS IS GIVEN RELEASE BY PITTSBURGH

Pittsburgh, Pa., Oct. 8.—[Special.]—Jewel Ens, who succeeded Donie Bush as manager of the Pittsburgh Pirates during the latter part of the 1929 season, was given his unconditional release, club officials announced this afternoon.

The Pirates, under the leadership of Ens, finished in fifth place both in 1930 and 1931.

MAROONS LOSE THREE BACKS FOR MICHIGAN GAME

University of Chicago's hopes for a strong showing against Michigan went glimmering yesterday. In one disastrous day of injuries and ineligibility Coach Stagg lost three of the four back field men he planned to start against the Wolverines.

Vinson Sahlin, whose broken field running was Chicago's greatest offensive threat, turned up yesterday morning hardly able to move. In Wednesday's scrimmage he was hit hard by a freshman tackler on an end run when Berny Johnson failed to take out his man. He went back into the game but developed a severe strain in his back muscles overnight. Physicians have ordered him out of the Michigan game.

Both Pat Page Jr., the best plunger on the squad, and Lou Kanne, the best punter, will be lost for at least tomorrow's game through ineligibility. Young Page's performance in his German test Wednesday was reported unsatisfactory. He will have a final opportunity to become eligible in the make-up quiz next week. Meanwhile, he is on the bench.

Three Reserve Backs.

Kanne needed an A to establish his academic credit but his report yesterday showed only a B. His only chance of eligibility this season rests in the possibility of his making up an incomplete law course.

The only news that cheered yesterday was the report that Joe Temple, veteran back field man, had cleared the standards set up by the Midway faculty.

With Paul Stagg's leg injury almost certain to limit his chance to play tomorrow, the riddled varsity back field yesterday consisted of Pete Zimmer and three reserves. Coach Stagg will have to choose among Don Birney, Bob Wallace, Al Summers, Berny Johnson, Gene Buzzell, and George Mahoney for the three open jobs, and his replacement strength will be meager.

The crippled squad will leave for Ypsilanti this afternoon at 3:30, where it will stay overnight.

MICHIGAN LOSES TWO

Ann Arbor, Mich., Oct. 8.—[Special.]—Michigan will be minus the services of two regulars, Harry Newman and Stan Hozer, when it meets Chicago in its opening game of the Big Ten season here Saturday afternoon. Leslie Douglass, a letter man, will be at Hozer's guard, while Louis Westover, a sophomore, will be at quarter back.

The backs and ends had a long drill blocking out tackles this afternoon, while the line scrimmaged.

Northwestern Will Drill on Soldiers' Field Today

BY HARVEY WOODRUFF.

Northwestern's Wildcats were snarling and vicious last night in their last strenuous two hour practice session before the all important contest against Notre Dame at Soldiers' field tomorrow.

In fact Coach Dick Hanley took his troupe to a manicurist before the signal drill to have their claws sharpened. The only question arising in the minds of the coaching staff was whether the crippled Wildcats would have opportunity to use their claws.

Northwestern will work out on Soldiers' field this afternoon to become accustomed to the surroundings. Coach Hanley will point out to his charges the opposing goal posts; whether that sense of direction will avail cannot be foretold.

When one says the Wildcats were snarling and vicious, it does not mean that they had notions of victory necessarily. It means, rather, that they refused to curl up under the injury of Reb Russell, whose loss is greater than the public at large can understand. Russell was the one sure ground gainer of a year ago, who almost alone gave the Purple a long anticipated and oft deferred victory over the Irish.

Dilley Is Hurt.

If the Wildcats were snarling and vicious, as we interpreted their practice, it means they are not entirely confident but that they refuse to quit under the hard luck avalanche of injuries and ineligibilities. Speaking of injuries, Dilley, guard, has been added to the list and did not participate in the dummy scrimmage owing to a leg injury. He probably will play part of tomorrow's game.

So the Wildcats were vicious with determination rather than with the elements which bring touchdowns on the gridiron.

From the psychological viewpoint alone, one need anticipate no weakling Purple eleven. It will be fighting, there is no doubt of that. Psychology plays an important rôle, but there always has been plenty of psychology emanating from Notre Dame. When that element is equal, it becomes a question of man power.

Fear Notre Dame Reserves.

In this department there is no question of Notre Dame's supremacy. That is what Northwestern coaches, primarily, and players secondarily feel. Northwestern does not compare with the Irish in replacement and that very thing may determine the issue.

Even Notre Dame's powerful line, adjudged by critics to be far superior to that of Northwestern, does not arouse the fear in Evanston that one might expect. Hanley's men are not willing to admit they will be outplayed by the South Bend forwards, even if you and most others think they will. But when the substitutes trot out against the second stringers or third stringers or fourth stringers of Notre Dame that is another story.

In the back field, despite the loss of Russell, Northwestern thinks it has a powerful quarter in Rentner, Meenan, Potter and Olson, three of them sophomores. Whatever their offensive power, there naturally must be skepticism, until proved otherwise, of their defense. Can this inexperienced bunch meet the overhead attack expected and stop the runs of Marchy Schwartz from left half back?

Privileged to view a secret practice, in which scrimmage was barred for fear of injuries to an already depleted squad, the writer could not determine exactly the Northwestern attack. Deprived of Russell's plunging, it looked as if the attack would be varied, attempted plunges by Olson, wide runs by Rentner, and plenty of passes in which receivers for passes were deficient.

Big Parade Tomorrow.

If the attitude of the team was grim, yet determined, like the grim attitude of an underdog, undergraduate sentiment was a bit more cheerful. There will be an auto parade Saturday morning which ends at Soldiers' field. All cars participating will have placards on the windshields reading "Beat Notre Dame."

There is nothing hostile in those placards, simply the thought that it is time for a turn in the tide. Placards, some of them objectionable from their wording, led to a severance of football relations between Nebraska and the South Bend eleven. No such spirit actuates the Evanston undergraduate body. Notre Dame is still a respected and feared foe.

Plenty of Seats

KENNETH L. WILSON, athletic director at Northwestern, said last night that approximately 63,000 tickets had been sold for the Notre Dame game. There are nearly 30,000 unsold seats. If all tickets are disposed of there will be $70,000 to turn over to Gov. Emmerson's unemployment fund. This amount is in addition to the $100,000 which Northwestern advanced last November.

IRISH OFFENSIVE REACHES PEAK IN FINAL SCRIMMAGE

BY WILFRID SMITH.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

South Bend, Ind., Oct. 8.—The Notre Dame football machine, which defends two national championships Saturday at Soldiers' field against Northwestern and hopes to score its 21st consecutive victory for an all time record, is ready for its task.

After watching the first team's offensive scrimmage tonight against the best 11 freshmen in the squad of 200, one could not avoid this conclusion. If Notre Dame ever gets the ball at midfield Saturday the team is ready to go to town. The blocking tonight was clean cut. The backs had drive. They cut and pivoted with a determination not apparent either in the charity game with the Notre Dame reserve or against Indiana.

Breaks Worry Coaches.

However, this must not be construed as positive proof that Notre Dame will defeat Northwestern. The Irish first must halt Northwestern's passes and plunges before they can turn loose their own plays. And the breaks of the game, fumbles and mental errors, may handicap a team which has great physical possibilities.

These errors, over which Hunk Anderson and Jack Chevigny have no control, worry the coaches more than plans for defense and attack.

Observers are at a disadvantage in describing Notre Dame's attack. The official pass which permits reporters to enter barred gates and watch practice presumes discretionary judgment on their part. Practice is secret. Otherwise the number of spectators would inconvenience the hundreds of freshmen, reserves and varsity who work out each night on Cartier field. But the secret drills also shroud a shrewd adaptation of Notre Dame's play to Northwestern's weaknesses as revealed to scouts at the Nebraska game.

Blocking Is Superb.

Anderson's subject at the noon lecture today was offense. The varsity not only reviewed its play, but it also was instructed why these plays are used. Northwestern's personnel has been discussed minutely. Correspondingly, the attack is prepared to take advantage of these weaknesses.

Despite these mental preparations victory or defeat still depends on fundamental ability to block and tackle. And Notre Dame's varsity in its scrimmage tonight was on edge. Moreover, the speed and precision, which always characterizes Notre Dame play, was present for the first time this season.

Tonight's practice was dummy scrimmage equally divided between offense and defense. First and second

Talking it Over

BY ARCH WARD.

Amid the conjecture anticipating the result of the Northwestern-Notre Dame football game protrudes the impression that nobody, not even the coaches, knows what to expect when the two teams collide at Soldiers' field tomorrow afternoon.

Neither team is proved. The season is too young for that.

Up to this time Notre Dame has uncovered no particularly bright star. But it has length and strength and fury and fight. Notre Dame undeniably possesses great explosive force The team showed at Indiana it can hit a blow that travels like a thunder clap. Whether it can hold a stout pace under steadily applied pressure is something nobody knows.

Northwestern had a good test against Nebraska. It showed remarkable promise of power and versatility. In addition it gave convincing evidence it has one of the most dangerous ball carriers of the season in Rentner.

For ten minutes it looked like one of the strongest offensive elevens Northwestern has seen. But after that spurt it sagged and stepped back. The Wildcats thereafter were battling on about even terms with a Nebraska team made up mainly of substitutes.

Both teams have strong, aggressive lines. Each has one experienced man in the back field, Schwartz for Notre Dame and Rentner for Northwestern. Neither team showed much skill with the forward pass in their opening games. With back fields made up largely of green material it is reasonable to presume that neither is well grounded in forward pass defense.

Northwestern has one marked superiority. That is in punting. Olson, full back, and Potter, quarter back both kicked well against Nebraska Notre Dame's showing in this department was disappointing.

Notre Dame, of course, will miss the directing genius of Frank Carideo, the outstanding quarter back of 1929 and 1930. But what team has a Carideo this season? Jaskwich and Murphy, who have been alternating at the job, seem ordinary, but only in comparison to Carideo.

After you get through comparing the two squads, man for man, you likely will arrive at the conclusion that their meeting shapes up as a lightning fast, slam bang affair in which both teams will score probably a couple of times.

A poor kick, an intercepted pass, or a fumble may be the deciding factor.

It looks like that kind of game.

Jackie Fields Wins Ten Round Verdict Over Tut

CHAMPION ENDS CAREER WITH 1½ LENGTH VICTORY

Quits Turf with Mark of $376,744 Earnings

BY FRENCH LANE.

Old Sun Beau can now travel down into the valley of Virginia to Willis Sharpe Kilmer's breeding place and in a few years tell his sons and his grandsons about the time when he was the champion.

For yesterday Sun Beau won the Gold cup, worth $20,700, at Hawthorne for the third straight time, defeating Mate by a length and a half. Plucky Play was third. Sun Beau's time was 2:05 for the mile and a quarter.

When in a reminiscent mood Sun Beau will recall a hazy Indian summer afternoon at the old Hawthorne track in Chicago back in October of 1931, where he demonstrated to the world that he was the champion. He will tell 'em about winning the Hawthorne Gold cup after running in front nearly all the way, a race different from that which he usually runs.

What a Roll—$376,744.

"When I shook my heels into Mate's eyes all the way down the stretch and beat him by a length and a half I had rolled up a money winning bank roll of $376,744, which is enough for any man's horse to win," Sun Beau will tell the kiddies as they listen to him recall the good old times. Then he will say, "I came to the conclusion that I had enough of the race tracks and I left 'em flat."

Old Sun Beau will not be stretching his story much if he tells it just that way. For when he won his third straight Hawthorne Gold cup yesterday before a crowd of 20,000 at the ancient race track on Chicago's west side, he won it as a champion should win it, he beat back the challenge of Mate, winner of a $70,000 Classic at Arlington Park, winner of a Preakness stakes, and the winner of an American Derby. He beat him so soundly that Mate was just floundering around in second place when the finish came.

It was Sun Beau's last race. He will soon endeavor to become a noted sire.

In rolling up his third straight Hawthorne Gold cup triumph Sun Beau's time of 2:05 was much slower than he had traveled the same route to win the race twice before. But he didn't have to go any faster.

Sun Beau Draws Away.

For when the others refused to go out and make the pace, Sun Beau drew clear from his field on the club-house turn and from there until the finish his lead was never threatened. He ran the first quarter in :24 3-5, he was at the half in :48 3-5, he stepped to the three quarters post in 1:12 2-5 and he was at the mile in 1:39. It was a pace that would cause most any horse trying to catch him to weaken. It caused Mate to falter in mid-stretch, then Sun Beau sprinted out into a new lead to make sure of victory in the last start of his career.

Johnny Maiben rode Sun Beau to his last great victory, and when Maiben shot Sun Beau to the front so early in the battle the Sun Beau backers groaned. For the famous old money winning champion of the world has never been noted as a front runner.

But he became a front runner in this tussle and he continued to make the pace from the club house turn to the finish.

Jockey Albert Robertson on Mate evidently had been instructed to ride a waiting race. He followed his orders to the letter. Then, at the head of the stretch, when he asked Mate for everything the gallant son of Prince Pal-Kilashandra had, Mate didn't have enough left to catch Sun Beau.

Mate had ruled as the even money favorite. In the mutuels Sun Beau paid $5.06 to win and $2.74 to place. Mate paid $2.40 to place. Plucky Play wound up in third place. Jim Dandy, the famous mud runner, brought up the rear.

John (Pepper) Martin, hero of the world series, unpacks at St. Louis. Today he'll be out to break the record of 12 hits.

Mike Koken is a second string half back, but Notre Dame followers predict he'll convince Northwestern he should be ranked as a regular.

Third straight Hawthorne Gold cup victory for old Sun Beau. The world's champion money winner leads Mate, which shares the three year old title with Twenty Grand, by a length and a half at the finish line. Sun Beau now will retire to Willis Sharpe Kilmer's Virginia breeding farm.

Harold Weldin of Northwestern, weighing 163 pounds, isn't as heavy as the general run of centers. He depends on something more than brawn, as he will attempt to prove against Notre Dame tomorrow.

DON LEON RACES TO EASY VICTORY IN WORTHWHILE

Rushes Through Mud at Latonia.

New York, Oct. 8.—(AP)—Don Leon, an outstanding juvenile of 1930 and one of the winter book favorites to win the last Kentucky Derby, showed a flash of his two year old speed as he reeled off six muddy furlongs in 1:13 4-5 to romp away with the Worthwhile purse at Latonia today. He stepped off three-quarters in 1:11 1-5 on the opening day.

George Collins' Patricia Marian, second choice, forced all of the pace and had little trouble in holding J. C. Ellis' Honey Locust safe for the place. Don Leon was the shortest price winner of the Latonia meeting, his backers receiving only $2.58 for each $2 ticket.

Three year old fillies held sway at Laurel, J. W. Y. Martin's Con Amore running the six furlongs in 1:11 3-5 to win the Anne Arundel purse. She was carried wide at the stretch turn, but under Pat Remillard's smart handling finished strong to win by a scant head over W. R. Coe's Masked Ball, with Robin's Egg third. Back among the two also-rans was Victor Emanuel's The Beasel, one of the most consistent fillies on the turf.

Notre Dame's Offensive at Best in Drill

teams alternated. Reserve elevens used Northwestern plays. The program for tomorrow is the same, insuring that, with the exception of Lukats, Notre Dame will have its full strength Saturday.

3,000 to Accompany Team.

Nordy Hoffman, right guard, and Edwin Kosky, left end, dominated the excellent line defense in the final scrimmage. Hoffman was a substitute tackle last year, but he has now become one of the best of guards. Kosky, a 1930 veteran, is better than ever. Notre Dame's line, if it carries the same drive against Northwestern it has shown on the practice field this week, will make the work of the sophomore backs easier. These linemen play smart football.

Three thousand students will follow Notre Dame to Soldiers' field. The athletic office today announced that 2,891 student tickets have been given out. The Notre Dame band of 85 pieces has drilled each afternoon in preparation for its share in Saturday's pageant. An assembly of students and band on the campus tomorrow night, with speeches and red fire, will denote official recognition of the game.

After practice tomorrow Anderson will announce the members of the squad of 45 who will make the trip to Chicago. The reserves also will attend the game, but they will be seated in the stands.

Save for a smattering of box seats Notre Dame's quota of 30,000 tickets have been sold.

best team in baseball. The Cards have given them a lesson in everything. The National leaguers have fielded and hit. They have run the bases in such a way as to prove that the Macks haven't been accustomed to opposition which resorted to something more than brute strength at bat. Most of this has reflected on Mickey Cochrane. Mack's great catcher is either rapidly burning out or his all around ability has been overrated.

Cochrane Flops at Bat, Too.

The flop of Cochrane undoubtedly is a big part of the answer to the failure of the American leaguers to do the things expected of them. Mickey not only has been found lacking when the Cards started running, but his hitting has been a total loss. He has connected safely only twice in the five games. His attitude seems to be that of indifference.

There's another thing that probably has helped to spread depression through the Athletics' ranks. It's that Pepper Martin fellow. For three years the American leaguers have been doing to others just what the Pepper now is doing to them. It's a new sensation for them and they don't like it. They had come to consider themselves invincible, and what has happened? A young man they hadn't ever figured good enough to worry about looms in front of them and in five successive games shows them how baseball can be played. The Pepper has knocked their conceit right out of them.

Pepper Supplies New Punch.

What all the experts now are hoping for is that the Pepper doesn't stop in the game or games still remaining. Even if he is stopped it isn't going to dim his luster, but the experts are pulling for him as a means of showing their appreciation. He's brought back something that has been missing. The experts have grown weary writing about the brute power of the home run clouter. With Martin it is a case of not knowing what's going to happen next. That's just what the Athletics are wondering. They've tried every trick at their command and thus far he's laughed at them.

All that Martin has to do before the show ends is to come through with another hit. He's already collected twelve. One more will put him ahead of the all time mark for individual world series hitting. In five games he has equaled what Buck Herzog and Joe Jackson did in eight games in 1912 and 1919, respectively, and Sam Rice in seven games in 1925. And if the sacrifice fly rule still was in effect Martin's batting average would be .750 instead of .667.

SCHUMAN FIGHTS WISEMAN TONIGHT ON WEST SIDE

Hymie Wiseman, Des Moines, Ia., featherweight star, and Solly Schuman, west side youngster, meet tonight in Promoter Billy Cepak's eight round main event at Eagles' hall, 62d avenue and Madison street. There will be five supporting matches, three six rounders and two fours.

Schuman received his first real test against Wiseman on the Schaaf-Griffith card, losing to the Des Moines star after six rounds.

Among Schuman's ring victims are Paul Dempsey, Joe Palazola, and Carl Mazzola of Detroit, Harry Culberts, Juan Cruz, Harry Alberts, Mickey Gill, Frankie Murphy, Ernie North, and Frankie Lamping.

ST. PAUL WINS, 9-5; ONLY ONE GAME BEHIND

Rochester, N. Y., Oct. 8.—(AP)—St. Paul strung out the Little World Series for at least one more day by defeating Rochester, 9 to 5, here today in the seventh game of the series.

The Saints, champions of the American association, advanced to within one game of their International league rivals by the win. Rochester still leads, four to three.

ROSENBLOOM SIGNS.

Minneapolis, Minn., Oct. 8.—(AP)—Max Rosenbloom, light heavyweight champion, will fight here Oct. 20, it was announced today. Jimmy Braddock and Joe Sekyra are sought as opponents.

Be Sure You Get All Birds You Wound, Hunter

BY BOB BECKER.

Dog fanciers in the middle west now are celebrating national dog week. The canine enthusiasts have been focusing attention on a movement for better dogs in the home.

When this observance reached the kennel of our trained springer spaniel, Horsford Hereunto, we decided he had better join in the spirit of the week by taking a little workout in anticipation of his hunting and retrieving work which will begin Nov. 1. So with whistle and a threatening whip, which when displayed exerts a splendid influence for discipline, Jack, the springer, was put through his paces.

Jack will be called upon to retrieve birds this fall just as he has been doing for the last three seasons. We use a springer in a duck blind to pick up down birds and also to retrieve cripples.

Last year this eager springer, trying to get to us so that he could go on a duck hunt, leaped through a window into the garage, cut a big gash in his head and nearly bled to death before the doctor could sew him up. [Heavy boards have replaced the glass, so there will be no more hospital bills like that.] Inasmuch as this accident happened early in October, Jack was too weak to help much during the pheasant season and the duck shooting.

There isn't any doubt but what a good retriever for waterfowl and upland game bird shooting is a conservative measure. This is especially true in hunting ducks. This year, more than ever, sportsmen are being urged to take the time and the trouble to capture wounded ducks.

In the past, conservationists point out, there have been too many careless hunters in the blinds who have either been too lazy or too wasteful to chase a winged bird. As a result thousands of ducks that should have been picked up were allowed to swim away. Thus wounded, many of them cannot survive a winter.

A good Irish water spaniel, springer, Labrador or Chesapeake Bay retriever can trail wounded birds and get many a duck the hunter cannot locate. Therefore no better slogan for dog week than "Use a retriever; don't waste a bird," could be adopted by waterfowl hunters.

LONDOS TO SEE COLISEUM MAT CARD WEDNESDAY

One of the spectators at Promoter Doc Krone's first indoor wrestling party of the season next Wednesday night at the Coliseum will be Jim Londos, claimant of the heavyweight wrestling championship.

Londos has agreed to meet the winner of Krone's tournament, which takes in the main event and semiwindup performers. Frank Bronowicz wrestles Ray Steele in the feature, and George Zaharias and Rudy Dusek meet in the semi-final. The victor in these two matches will meet and the victor will grapple with Jimmy here at some future date.

One change has been made in the program. Hans Kampfer, 225 pound German, will meet Charley Fox instead of Jim Clinkstock in one of the supporting matches.

DE PAUL OPENS HOME SEASON WITH WESLEYAN

Steffen and O'Brien Out of Tonight's Game.

De Paul university will play its first home football game of the season tonight against Illinois Wesleyan at Mills stadium. The kickoff is scheduled for 8:15 p. m. It will be the third game of the year for the Blue Demons. They beat the University of Detroit in the opening game but lost to North Dakota university at Grand Forks.

De Paul has not yet recovered from the latter contest and will be in a crippled condition for tonight's game, according to the starting lineup.

Mat Steffen, nephew of Judge Wally Steffen, is on the hospital list for at least two weeks, along with Eddie O'Brien, the sophomore half back who was injured in last night's short scrimmage. O'Brien was to have started in Steffen's place tonight, but Joe Dea was finally nominated for the position.

Though badly bruised in the Dakota battle, Ernie Butcher will play right half back. Jablonski, a full back, and Jim Doody, sophomore pilot, round out the back field for the Demons.

Illinois Wesleyan will be at full strength. The star of Wesleyan is William Craig, acting captain and all-conference end for two years. Another young man who will give De Paul plenty of trouble is Williamson, 180 pound full back, who is a place kicker. Lineup:

ZBYSZKO POSTS $1,000 FORFEIT FOR LEWIS BOUT

Wladek Zbyszko, Polish heavyweight wrestler, sent his $1,000 forfeit to Gen. John V. Clinnin, chairman of the Illinois athletic commission, yesterday for his world championship match with Ed [Strangler] Lewis at the Chicago Stadium Nov. 2. Gov. Emmerson's unemployment commission will receive the receipts from the match.

J. Russell Forgan, chairman of the athletic division of the unemployment commission, which is staging the show, announced that negotiations have been opened for a title match in another weight division.

"We hope to give Chicago the best wrestling program ever held here," Mr. Forgan said. "Gen. Clinnin has announced that the winner of the Zbyszko-Lewis match will be recognized as the world's champion. Gen. Clinnin is chairman of the National Boxing association and the title thus will become national."

In the WAKE of the NEWS

EARLIER CHICAGO.

DEAR WAKE: The original Hawthorne race track, still in the same location, opened on May 1, 1891, two years before the World Fair. At that time, it was surrounded by miles of prairie. The only way to get there was by Illinois Central, C. B. & Q., or horse and buggy, if you owned one. "Big Ed" Corrigan, afterward known as "Master of Hawthorne," and his associates created the track.

The town of Hawthorne at that time had one street, three or four blocks long, with more saloons than other business places. There were no hotel accommodations or rooming houses near, so Corrigan had cottages built for racing owners and stablemen.

The big double-decker grand stand, opened with bunting and music, later burned. Under the first deck was the big "round bar," then famous. Back of this was the "foreign book"—where bets were accepted on races at other tracks—presided over by Joe Ullman. Beyond that were two betting rings. One of Corrigan's iron rules was that no women be allowed in the betting ring. "Big Bill" Gaffney was in charge of the bar, as many old timers will remember.

The early days of Hawthorne recall "White Hat" McCarthy, "Lucky" Baldwin, John W. Gates, Tony and Johnny McCafferty, and Harry Kuhl, the track secretary, who later became secretary of the Western Jockey club, and was succeeded in that position by Harvey T. Woodruff, present conductor of The Wake.

It was a time of factional strife in racing and the feud between Corrigan and Condon continued for years with only an occasional truce.

Michigan State and Army.

Over in Michigan, many followers think Coach Jimmy Crowley's Michigan State college eleven is going to take the Army team in that little affair at West Point tomorrow. In fact, several Helpers have so advised and warned us just how to predict the score. Such a result would not be surprising.

When Michigan State played a scoreless tie with U. of Michigan in an early game last season, there was a tendency at Ann Arbor to think the Wolverines were not up to par. Then Michigan went on and tied for the Big Ten title with a clean slate. Michigan State was not quite so fortunate, but took Colgate into camp before losing a point after touchdown decision to Georgetown and held Detroit to a tie in its final game, the only breaks in an otherwise clean record. Michigan State may this year do that very thing its supporters are predicting.

BENNY LEONARD TAKES A POKE AT BOXING INDUSTRY

Pugilism Totters, but It Never Seems to Fall.

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Oct. 8.—[Special.]—Once more the noble structure of pugilism in New York state is tottering on its foundations as the result of a suspicious prize fight. In the present case, Benny Leonard knocked out one Pal Silvers, an obscure middleweight, and the prize fight commissioners doubt that Silvers put forth his best efforts.

The noble structure of pugilism is a more redoubtable structure than the leaning tower of Pisa, however. It has rocker foundations, just as some prize fighters have round heels, and though it totters practically all the time it does not crash. This is not to say that some of the prize fighters and their managers have not tried hard to crash it. The fact that there is any structure left after all their efforts shows that it is practically crash-proof.

Tip for Statesman.

The noble structure of civilization itself may over-totter some day and fall, but the noble structure of pugilism will sway on its rockers forever. The statesmen of the world could do worse than to inspect the rocker foundations of the pugilistic edifice which provide against the most violent swaying, and adapt the principle to government and the economic system.

It all took place during the excitement of the world series, so I did not happen to witness this latest knife thrust in the bulwarks of clean sport, but I am sure that the present alarm is exaggerated. In one place I read that the grand old game with its fine purpose to inculcate the ideals of chivalry and self-reliance in the young is in danger of extinction.

But if it could not be extinguished by some of the major fouls and phonies of the era of the three million dollar gate, surely nothing that could happen now in a fight which drew only $20,000 could stifle the taproot of the structure.

Why Should Anybody Complain?

I can't see why any one should complain of the present case, even granting that the case was exactly as the prize fight commission suspected. Only a short time ago Mr. Kearns arranged a similar convenience for Mickey Walker in Chicago. That night K. O. Christner, the old rubber puddler, went into the sink, as the saying goes, for Mickey. The patrons, far from resenting this, were much pleased to have been present at an unusually gay and amusing act.

Mr. Kearns was building up Walker for his bout with Jack Sharkey and he only did his best, according to the well understood ethics of the game, to promote the build up. Now that he is handling the remnant of Benny Leonard it was quite natural to expect that he would again apply his genius to his problem. Any blame in the case should be laid to the party of the other part, Pal Silvers, who seems to have given a very bad performance, hopping up quite lively prompt upon the stroke of ten.

This ruined the illusion, of course, and he is to be censored for his awkwardness, because the censors love their illusions. An actor who has been stabbed dead in a play does not bounce right up and walk off, however eager he may be to spend the rest of the act in the speakeasy across the alley.

It's Best to Be Shock-Proof.

I have never shared the indignation over Primo Carnera's selection of opponents, but it seems strange to me that those who were so annoyed about it all have not been even more indignant about Jack Dempsey's selections on his recent all comers' come-back tour.

There is some mourning over this belated stain on the record of one so illustrious as Benny Leonard, but here again I am shockproof. I had thought Benny's record was pretty well soiled when he was lightweight champion of the world.

One time when he was fighting Lightweight Tendler the boys hustled Benny into a private room for a private weighing-in ceremony notwithstanding grave public doubt that he could make the weight.

A deputy boxing commissioner bounced out of the door a minute later to announce, "Well, well, he made it after all! Isn't that fine?" but when the boys, as we are called, set up a yell of suspicion, demanding that Benny get on the scales again, his manager, Uncle Will Gibson, said: "It is too late; why, he has got his pants on now. Surely, you boys do not expect him to weigh with his clothes on?"

So Benny has been a prize fighter to me for a long time. He is pleasant socially and he has never been in any trouble with the law, but a prize fighter with a prize fighter's ethics, nevertheless.

It is unfortunate that Benny, like Dempsey, must return to the ring after long retirement. These boys and some others who made great fortunes when they were at their best seemed secure for life. But any one who made investments five or six years ago expecting to live at a certain rate forever on the proceeds must now find both his capital and his income greatly curtailed.

The laugh is little Jack Sharkey's. He made $100,000 and he spent $100,000, but he had a dollar's worth of good time for every dollar he spent. The others practiced copybook thrift, and now that much of their earnings are gone they haven't even had a good time for their money.

Strong Men of Purdue Pale at Word "Illini"

BY EDWARD BURNS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Lafayette, Ind., Oct. 8.—Old Purdue's football team, which for years and years led the nation in being facetiously feared, is going back to 1927 for reasons to be askeered of Illinois, the foes of next Saturday.

On arriving here today we found Coach Noble Kizer, Scout Piggy Lambert and other Old Gold and Black notables speaking in awed whispers about the manner in which Coach Robert Zuppke of the Illini got together a coterie of sophomores in 1927 and knocked over the Big Ten in most amazing fashion.

"That man is up to devilment when he fixes to start nine sophomores against us," the Purdue fellows say, shuddering the while. "He has 12 letter men on his squad, yet he's going to shoot only two of 'em at us. We know he's not high hatting Purdue by holding back any of his best talent. So the only thing that you can figure out is that he's dug up a lot of sophomore miracle men and is going to pounce on us without mercy."

Mr. Lambert Views with Alarm.

Scout Lambert, who saw the Illini beat St. Louis U. last Saturday, is much sadder than we've ever seen him outside of the basketball season. He says that Zuppke has developed the nearest thing to a "Grange attack" that Illinois has had since Grange was available in person.

Lambert reported a fast, hard, charging line, composed of 200 pounders, which is capable of mowing down tacklers engaged in the enterprise of trying to throw Gil Berry and Dave Cook to the ground without gain. Berry, Lambert says, is following massed interference better than ever before and Piggy also avers that Cook, a 200 pound sophomore, is better yet than Berry.

Afetr the boys had been permitted to shed crocodile tears on our ample shoulders for a spell, we demanded information about Purdue. And here's what we found out.

No Sophomores in Lineup.

Purdue, which has a unique football record covering the last three years, will enter the Illinois game with a group of brilliant ball carriers and a line that must prove itself at guard and tackle.

There will not be a sophomore in the starting lineup and for this reason there is significance in the accomplishments of the team during the last few seasons.

In the last three years the Boilermakers have played 24 games and have los. only four. Three of the four defeats were suffered by one point on a missed kick after touchdown, a circumstance which has caused many good Purdue partisans to near the doors of the crazy house.

If Illinois should win by a missed kick this year it is estimated that at least 4,400 of the 4,500 students here will immediately start cutting out paper dolls as a respite from their anguish.

They Get Their Touchdowns.

The Boilermakers have played 24 successive games without being outscored on touchdowns. The last time that any team was able to score more touchdowns than Purdue was in the second game of the 1928 season, when Minnesota turned the trick.

The missed kick business is one of the reasons that Frank Carideo, late of Notre Dame, is looked upon as something more than just an assistant coach.

Frank, you will recall, kicked 22 points after touchdowns without a foozle during one stretch in behalf of Notre Dame. Purdue observers believe that Frank has been able to teach the knack to several of his pupils here.

Risk on Hand Again.

Last year Purdue was quite inconsiderate of the Illini, with chunky Ed Risk leading the rout. The Boilermakers eventually stopped scoring at 25 to 0. This season will again find Risk, whom Zuppke last season called "the best running back in the conference," leading the veteran back field composed of four senior lettermen. At right half back will be Jim Purvis, a Mattoon, Ill., boy who has a few accounts to settle with Horsley, the Illini quarter back, who was Jim's high school teammate.

At full back will be the veteran Alex Yunevich, the boy who came back into form most amazingly, 'tis said, when he reported for drill this fall minus 20 pounds of avoirdupois that seemed to bother his ramblings last season. Just how much the loss of weight meant to Alex was evident last Saturday against Coe when he gained 220 yards on 12 attempts from scrimmage for an average of 18 1-3 yards a crack.

Jack White will be the usual fixture at quarterback. Jack has called signals for Purdue in 17 games and has only been defeated twice, both by the one point, remember, and it would seem that he knows what it is all about.

There are also a lot of rumors running about concerning a second back field foursome that has Roy Horstmann, veteran full back, as the steadying influence for three speedy sophomores, the first year men being Fred Hecker, Doxie Moore, and Paul Pardonner.

Olson May Make Wheaton Forget That Grange Fellow

BY CHARLES BARTLETT.

A few years back a red headed kid from Wheaton High school turned up for football practice at the University of Illinois. They gave him a blue jersey with the orange numerals "77" stitched into the back. His name was Red Grange, and before he was through at Illinois he had put Wheaton on the football map for all time.

Last year Coach Dick Hanley of Northwestern, while rummaging among the Purple freshmen candidates, came upon one Oliver Olson, who was reported to have done great things for Wheaton, even as Grange had before him. Thus far this year Oliver has done nothing to prove those stories were wrong. Oliver is no red head, for an unruly thatch of vanilla ice cream hair covers his head. And his number is not 77. It's 25. But Oliver now finds himself in a position to make it almost as famous as Grange did 77.

Olson Has Plenty Talent.

Suppose you were playing your first year of varsity football with a powerful team like Northwestern, and you were trying out for full back, and you discovered a big guy named Reb Russell had taken over the duties of same and was doing quite nicely. Then suddenly Mr. Russell limped in with a wrong vertebra and a dented rib, and the coach said "You're taking Russell's place. Get going."

That's the situation that confronted Oliver Olson the other day. And he's more than well qualified to step into Russell's job, even though he is just a sophomore in the liberal arts school. He probably will never make a name for open field running as his one time fellow Wheatonian did, but he has plenty of other talents to make up the difference. He can do his share of ball carrying and tackling, but it's in kicking where Oliver really shines. They'll tell you anywhere on the Northwestern campus he is one of the finest punters that ever came to Evanston, being able to place them as well as boot them far.

Does Some Track, Too.

Olson is 19 years old, weighs 172 pounds and stands 6 feet 1½ inches tall. He kept in shape this summer as a life guard along the Evanston beach with Ken Meenan, a fellow sophomore in the back field. They room together with Dick Fencl at the Phi Delta Theta house.

Oliver is another of the versatile athletes Northwestern boasts of, for he not only captained the Wheaton High football team, playing full back and doing all of the kicking to help his school win the Little Seven conference championship twice, but he also distinguished himself as a center in basketball and figured as a high jumper with the track team. He won his freshman track numerals at Northwestern last spring.

Yale Is Urged to Play Notre Dame Charity Grid Game

New Haven, Conn., Oct. 8.—[Special.]—Urging the arrangement of a post-season football game with Notre Dame, the Yale Daily News today reiterated in an editorial its plea that Yale play such a contest to aid the unemployed. The editorial supported a resolution passed by the student council of the college last night, in which athletic authorities were asked to approve a benefit game, provided the members of the team were willing to play.

Two members of Yale's coaching staff, Adam Walsh and Arthur [Bucky] O'Connor, are Notre Dame graduates.

The date of the game suggested by the News is Dec. 5, a week before the Army-Navy game at New York. The site proposed is Yale bowl.

NOTRE DAME WILLING

Notre Dame, Ind., Oct. 8.—[Special.]—Jesse Harper, director of athletics, said tonight Notre Dame undoubtedly would consider an offer to meet Yale in a postseason charity game if an invitation were presented by duly authorized officials of the eastern university.

"Notre Dame always has been willing to do its share for charity. It expects to continue that policy," Harper said.

"Any charity game for Dec. 5 of course must be sanctioned by the president of Notre Dame, the Rev. Charles O'Donnell, and the university authorities. Such an arrangement is more a university matter than an affair of the athletic department.

"If Yale university or any other university wishes to play Notre Dame in the interests of charity, the proposition undoubtedly would be duly considered at the proper time."

Yarr Extends String of Star N. D. Centers

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

South Bend, Ind., Oct. 8.—Capt. Tom Yarr, a senior finishing his second season as regular center at Notre Dame, is successor to a long list of stars, and the prestige of the Notre Dame system of attack, which requires 100 per cent accuracy on passes from the center, has not suffered while Capt. Tom has held the position.

Yarr served his apprenticeship under Tim Moynihan and Joe Nash in 1929. The thousands who saw Notre Dame sprint over the frozen sod of Dyche stadium and score four touchdowns on Northwestern that year may remember Tom Yarr, the third string center. He cost Notre Dame 30 yards that afternoon with one of the longest and wildest passes any center ever made.

Helps in Victory Streak.

But last year, when Yarr was given full responsibility for the center job, he turned in a splendid performance which helped the Irish run through nine games without defeat. And his teammates honored him with the captaincy at the end of the season.

Last year would have been sufficient to prove Yarr's right to follow such Notre Dame men as Al Feeney, O. J. Larson, Harry Mehre, now head coach at the University of Georgia; Adam Walsh, captain of the Four Horsemen; Bud Boeringer, John Fredericks, and Moynihan.

But Yarr gave an excellent performance against Indiana which eliminated worry about the center of the line for the Northwestern game.

No player ever traveled farther to attend Notre Dame than Yarr. This husky, black haired lad, 197 pounds of muscle, comes from Chimacum, Wash. In his veins is Indian blood, for Tommy is one-fourth Squoschomish. The Indian strain makes for endurance, but Yarr's Irish ancestors (his father was born in the old country) have willed him a fighting spirit.

Never Hoped for Captaincy.

Tom Yarr Sr. is a dairyman out at Chimacum. Tom Jr. is the fifth child in a family of four girls and two boys.

When Tommy was playing football, basketball and baseball at Chimacum High school it was beyond his greatest expectation that he ever would captain a Notre Dame team. Morrie Starret, a track athlete in 1921 at Notre Dame, is credited by Tommy with giving him incentive to travel 2,000 miles for a college education.

Yarr is enrolled in the school of physical education. After his graduation next spring he hopes to coach football. He never has gone out for basketball or baseball at Notre Dame. Last summer he worked at a summer camp in Wisconsin. He rooms with Stumpy Cronin, a Chicago boy, in Sorin-Sub, the basement rooms of old Sorin hall.

Yarr's number is 76 and the thousands at Soldiers' field Saturday will see a lot of 76.

Badger Grid Squad Takes Easy Drill

Madison, Wis., Oct. 8.—[Special.]—With most of the men sore from yesterday's scrimmage, Wisconsin's football squad got off with an easy workout today. Much time was spent on brushing up the offense and on running back kickoffs. Elliker and Goldenberg were absent but it was announced that neither is injured. The third and fourth teams scrimmaged the freshmen.

OHIO SEEKS ACE OF BACKS

Columbus, O., Oct. 8.—[Special.]—Coach Sam Willaman of the Ohio State football team spent most of today's practice session looking for a triple threat man among his backfield candidate. The Buckeyes have several men who can do two things well, but lack a real punter, passer, and runner combination.

The final hard workout of the week was taken by the Buckeyes tonight in a drizzle of rain. Offensive formations were stressed with the Ohioans attempting to bolster up their forward pass attack.

More than 40,000 are expected to see the game with Vanderbilt Saturday. Barring injuries in practice tomorrow the Ohio team will line up as follows: Capt. Holcomb and Lew Hinchman, half back; Carl Cramer, quarter; Joe Vuchinich, full back; Dick Smith, center; Junius Ferrall and Howard Rabenstein, ends; Bill Bell and Bob Haubrich, tackles; Martin Varner and Joe Gailus, guards.

BERRY TO LEAD ILLINI

Champaign, Ill., Oct. 8.—[Special.]—Gil Berry, Illinois half back, may be a triple threat man against Purdue Saturday at Lafayette, judging by the attention Coach Zuppke paid to the Abingdon player's efforts today. Berry took part in punting drill in addition to regular running and passing workouts.

Art Schultz, who did part of the punting against St. Louis, also participated in the practice for kickers. He was given the full back position when Zuppke ordered mock scrimmage, working with Berry and Cook, halves, and Horsley, quarter back.

With the injury of Bill Charlie yesterday, Zuppke's supply of reserve back field men was reduced to a minimum. Herman Walser, considered the squad's best punter, most nearly approaches the caliber of the leading back field men.

Sam Gorenstein, regular guard, rested today, but will participate in the final light drill tomorrow.

INDIANA MEETS FROSH

Bloomington, Ind., Oct. 8.—[Special.]—Despite a soggy gridiron, the Indiana university football squad today was put through one of its hardest workouts since the opening of practice. The work consisted principally of scrimmage against freshmen drilled in Iowa plays.

Coach E. C. Hayes announced that the open date Saturday would be filled in the morning by a regulation football game on Indiana field between the freshmen using their idea of the Iowa offense and the Crimson varsity employing their new plays.

Because Iowa had seven regulars out of the lineup against Pittsburgh last week, Indiana scouts were able to report very little. Coach Hayes expects to learn more about Indiana's foe of Oct. 17 from the report of scouts at the Texas A. & M.-Iowa game on Saturday.

STANFORD LOSES QUARTER

San Francisco, Cal., Oct. 8.—[Special.]—Minnesota's Gophers gained some slight advantage on paper today when it was learned that the first string quarter back, Harry Hillman, probably cannot start in the Stanford lineup at Palo Alto Saturday. Hillman was sent to bed with a fever of 102 degrees and there appears little chance for the Cardinal captain to be fit within 48 hours.

With Hillman out, Baker probably will draw the job. Although strong as a defensive player, Baker has not the line driving ability of Capt. Hillman.

The Gophers worked out again today at California Memorial stadium in Berkeley, spending the greatest portion of the session in defensive work against Stanford plays scouted by Dr. Albert Boles. Stress was placed on combinations calculated to nullify aerial gains.

The rest of the day was spent in skull practice, the visitors studying motion pictures of the Oklahoma Aggie game last Saturday in which they came out on the long end of a 20 to 0 count.

Mandell Fights 10 Round Draw with Harrison

Paterson, N. J., Oct. 8.—(AP)—Sammy Mandell of Rockford, Ill., former lightweight champion of the world, and Joie Harrison of Carfield, N. J., boxed ten rounds to a draw here tonight. The weights were: Harrison, 142½; Mandell, 146.

City Preps Take Last Drills for League Openers

Final drill will be held this afternoon by teams of the Chicago Public High School Football league which will open four sectional races tomorrow afternoon. Two games are scheduled in the central section, Lindblom, 1930 league champion, meeting Hyde Park, while Tilden will face Bowen.

Interest in the west division will not only be centered in the Marshall-Austin battle at Mills stadium, but also in the Harrison Tech-Mooseheart nonleague contest on the latter's field. Mooseheart has defeated Loyola, Catholic league titleholder, and rolled up two other victories.

Lane, last year's north division champion, will meet Lake View in its league debut, while Roosevelt and Senn will clash in another north section game. Parker and Morgan Park will meet at White City in the only south section contest.

Waukegan High school, which triumphed over Roosevelt, 28 to 0, last Saturday, will be host to another north section squad tomorrow, meeting Schurz on Waukegan's field.

"Leo last year defeated St. Rita in its opening game, but we expect a different result this season," writes the Rev. M. R. Kirk, St. Rita athletic director. "St. Rita looks for an easy victory over Leo in the opening game Sunday afternoon at the new St. Rita athletic field."

Pat Keanelly, injured St. Philip center, will join the squad Sunday afternoon when St. Philip meets St. Michael in its second league game at Mills stadium. Red Olson, substitute half back, now is the only player on the St. Philip hospital list.

Morton, which handed La Grange its second defeat in three years last Saturday, will meet Evanston, defending Suburban league champion, in its first league game at Berwyn stadium, 29th street and Ridgeland avenue, tomorrow afternoon.

Brumbaugh Back in Bears' Lineup Sunday

Brumy Brumbaugh, Chicago Bears' quarter back, who was shaken up in the Green Bay Packer game, is back in condition and may start in the Bears' back field against the New York Giants at Wrigley geld Sunday afternoon. Since he joined the north side club last season Brumbaugh has improved steadily and now rates as the Bears' first string quarter back.

It developed yesterday that Coach Ralph Jones was concerned over the injury that Red Grange received to his hand in the Green Bay game. Grange kept the injury something of a secret, believing it was nothing to worry about, but when Jones saw he was favoring the bruised hand in workouts, again after the Cicero game he called for an X-ray examination. No bones were broken and the hand has responded to treatment. Grange will be in shape for the game Sunday, which will be the first game for the Bears on their home grounds.

The Giants share with the Packers the distinction of being the toughest club in the National Professional league for the Bears to beat. Their back field will include Red Cagle, who will be showing here for the first time; Doug Wykoff, and Johnny Kitzmiller.

Tuskegee and Wilberforce to Meet Here Again Oct. 24

The third annual Tuskegee institute-Wilberforce university football game will be played Saturday, Oct. 24, at Mills stadium. Last year the two elevens played a scoreless tie at Soldiers' field and in 1929 Tuskegee won, 6 to 0. Big Ben Stevenson, the southerners' back field star, has been lost by graduation. The Ohio school has one of its strongest teams in years.

Place Maroon Field House Corner Stone

Corner stone ceremonies for the new University of Chicago fieldhouse, which will be opened Dec. 15, in time for winter sports, were held on the Midway last night as the climax of a student massmeeting. Hope that the $600,000 plant will "symbolize a new era in Maroon athletics" was expressed by Lawrence Whiting, former Chicago football star, who represented the alumni.

President Robert M. Hutchins and Director A. A. Stagg together placed the stone, which contained photographs of the Chicago teams of 1892 and 1930, athletic records of four decades, and a picture of the first gymnasium.

Contrasting the first athletic structure, built in 1892, with the new one, Stagg told the assemblage of 1,000 students that the first contained also the women's gymnasium, the university library, the University Press, and the university book store.

The new fieldhouse, which he described as the finest in the country, will seat 7,000, more than twice the capacity of the present Bartlett gymnasium. It will have a removable basketball floor and an eight lap cinder track. A block long, it extends from University avenue to Greenwood avenue along the north side of 56th street.

WOMAN PLANS TALL HOTEL IN KENMORE AVE.

Buys Site, but She Won't Build for Year.

BY AL CHASE.

Purchase of a parcel of vacant property at 6137 Kenmore avenue yesterday by Mrs. Theckla I. Giertsen of 1120 Lake Shore drive disclosed plans for a ten or twelve story apartment hotel which probably will be erected next year. According to C. H. Borden of Eisendrath, Solomon & Borden, attorneys, such a structure is contemplated but work will not start for at least twelve months. The 50x150 site was bought from Dexter Adelson for an undisclosed consideration. It is 250 feet north of Glenlake avenue.

William Seefeldt and wife have purchased from James S. Gillispie the six apartment building at 3030-32 Cheltenham place, lot 50x187, for an undisclosed price. Thomas Rooney of the Charles Ringer company was broker.

76 Flat Building Sold.

Hyman Phillips and his two sons, Louis and Meyer, yesterday sold the three story Glenwin apartments at the southwest corner of Glenlake and Winthrop avenues to Mrs. Freda Miller for an undisclosed consideration. The property is 150x107 and is improved with a three story building containing seventy-six apartments of one, two, three and four rooms. F. C. Janos was attorney for the sellers. There were no brokers in the transaction.

The Great Lakes Pipe Line company has purchased fifty-two acres on Bensenville road, west of Waukegan road, from the Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul and Pacific railroad. The property is improved with a pipe line terminal.

Frank W. Pearson has leased the store at 7110 Grand avenue, 12x70, to Peppy Frocks, Inc., for a term of years at an undisclosed annual rental. S. E. Terman & Co. were brokers.

Wine Brick Firm Lease.

C. F. Durland & Co. report a continuance of satisfactory fall renting in the near north side loft and warehouse district and state that they have closed twenty-two leases in the last sixty days. Among the more recent deals is the rental of 4,000 square feet on the first floor of 400 West Erie street to the Puro-Vino company, makers of wine bricks. Other leases in this building were to the Mordt company, twine merchants; Dier-Thomas company, toy and novelty makers; S. Saros, restaurateur. Ernest C. Hanning, imported and jewelry maker, leased space at 212 West Kinzie street.

Harvey M. Dammarell, Inc., has renewed a lease on the second and third floors and part of the first story of the building at the northwest corner of West Madison and Green streets for a five year term at an indicated total rent of $30,000. The lease expires Oct. 31, 1936. The Columbia Building corporation is the lessor. The property is used as a men's hotel.

CITE GOVERNMENTAL CONTROL OF TRADE IN SOUTHEAST EUROPE

[Copyright: 1931: By the New York Times.]

VIENNA, Oct. 8.—The Austrian government, following the example of neighboring countries, tonight framed and put immediately into effect regulations closely restricting traffic in foreign exchange.

Yugo-Slav Deputy Minister of Finance Uzimovitch also announced tonight that exchange traffic would be controlled and restricted by the Yugo-Slav National bank. The Greek government, which not only clapped on exchange restrictions weeks ago but has kept the Athens stock exchange closed, decided today to convert grain import business into a monopoly and place it under the control of the Greek National bank.

With the announcement of these measures in three different countries, southeastern Europe now presents a picture of government control of trade, finance, industry, and production, in some respects almost as complete as in soviet Russia. The difference is that administrative interference in what hitherto has been matters of private transaction has been dictated not by revolutionary economic theories but by unprecedented economic conditions.

Brazil Declares 60 Day Moratorium on Payments

RIO DE JANEIRO, Oct. 8.—(AP)—President Getulio Vargas tonight signed a decree declaring a sixty day moratorium on all foreign commercial and private payments in Brazil.

The degree specified, however, that sums of money to cover these payments must be deposited in national currency in the Banco do Brasil and other banks. Foreign exchange contracts are excluded by the decree.

The newspaper A Noite, anticipating the decree today, said the reason for it was a lack of sufficient bills on the Brazilian market during the last few weeks to permit the Banco do Brasil to furnish exchange needed by importers here, either in pounds sterling, dollars, or francs.

Graham-Paige Motors.

Will you please inform me concerning the present condition of Graham-Paige Motors corporation and the possibilities of its stock as an investment? Thank you.—P. A. N.

Graham-Paige Motors corporation is one of the prominent producers of trucks and pleasure automobiles. It constitutes a complete unit in the industy, manufacturing most of its own parts.

The company carried on an expansion program during 1928 and 1929, doubling the capacity of its plants. The decrease in sales volume and the necessity of liquidating car inventories at branches occasioned by the desire of dealers to reduce inventories were responsible for the unfavorable results reported in 1930. In that year the company produced 33,560 cars, against 77,007 cars in 1929. Sales were $27,777,481 and net loss was $4,969,320. Deficit after preferred dividends was $5,331,169. For 1929 sales were $64,489,904 and net loss was $1,463,587. Net income in 1928 was $1,055,678 and net loss in 1927 after extraordinary charges was $4,643,351.

In the first six months of 1931 United States passenger car registrations for this company numbered 10,742 units, against 19,301 units for the like period of 1930. Net loss was $833,056, against $880,960 for the first half of 1930.

On August 27, 1931, C. W. Matheson, general sales manager, stated that sales had increased each week over the previous week during July and August, 1931, whereas the corresponding weeks in 1930 had shown successive decreases.

On June 30, 1931, current assets were $9,095,931 and current liabilities were $2,895,643. Working capital was $6,200,288, against $6,127,041 on December 31, 1930, and $11,098,750 on December 31, 1929. On December 31, 1930, cash and marketable securities were $2,995,165. There were outstanding 16,312 shares of 7 per cent cumulative preferred [par $100], 35,517 shares of 7 per cent cumulative convertible second preferred [par $100] and 1,728,361 no par common shares. Profit and loss deficit was $10,906,806.

Although dividends are being paid on the first preferred none are reported on the second preferred or common. On April 1, 1931, accumulations on the second preferred were $24.50 per share.

The preferred is speculative and the second preferred more so. The common is purely a speculation.

The UNITED STATES of AMERICA

In terms of real wealth America is richer today than ever before.

Our natural resources are unimpaired by depression.

Our wealth in the form of buildings, machinery and equipment of all kinds increases year after year.

The progress of America as a going concern depends upon the spirit of Americans.

With the solid facts of wealth evident on all sides, the exercise of reason always results in faith in America.

Confidence in a land like ours is common sense.

Prosperity springs from confidence.

MONEY RATE
GOTHAM RAIS
TO 2½ PER CE

Seen as Reflecti

The New York Federal Reserve yesterday raised its rediscount r 1½ per cent from the historic rate of 1½ per cent which has in force since last May. The was seen as the abandonment o part of reserve officials of attem stimulate trade through the of an easy money policy.

The 1½ per cent rate had be effect since May 8, when it was re from 2 per cent.

This is the first increase
New York bank's rediscount rate the fall of 1929, when it was from 5 to 6 per cent, in an to restrict the credit availab stock speculation.

Beginning immediately afte crash in 1929, eight successive tions in the New York rate we into effect, the last being that o
8, when the 1½ per cent rat established.

The advance in the rate was prise to most of the financial munity, although a week ago had been some anticipation change.

Rates in Other Districts.

The Boston Federal Reserve rate is 2 per cent; Cleveland, Ch

Opponents of the easy money have contended that the lo proved a boomerang. The ra it was said, reduced commercial

MONEY RATE IN GOTHAM RAISED TO 2½ PER CENT

Seen as Reflecting Business Gain.

The New York Federal Reserve bank yesterday raised its rediscount rate to 2½ per cent from the historic low rate of 1½ per cent which has been in force since last May. The action was seen as the abandonment on the part of reserve officials of attempts to stimulate trade through the means of an easy money policy.

The 1½ per cent rate had been in effect since May 8, when it was reduced from 2 per cent.

This is the first increase in the New York bank's rediscount rate since the fall of 1929, when it was lifted from 5 to 6 per cent, in an effort to restrict the credit available for stock speculation.

Beginning immediately after the crash in 1929, eight successive reductions in the New York rate were put into effect, the last being that of May 8 when the 1½ per cent rate was established.

The advance in the rate was a surprise to most of the financial community, although a week ago there had been some anticipation of a change.

Rates in Other Districts.

The Boston Federal Reserve bank's rate is 2 per cent; Cleveland, Chicago, St. Louis, and San Francisco are operating with a 2½ per cent rate; Philadelphia, Richmond, Atlanta, Kansas City, and Dallas 3 per cent, and Minneapolis 3½ per cent. Changes in some of these rates are probable as a result of New York's action today.

Opponents of the easy money policy have contended that the low rate proved a boomerang. The rate had, it was said, reduced commercial paper and bankers' acceptances rates so low that bankers were less anxious to finance trade. The curtailed earnings forced the banks to reduce interest paid to depositors. This led to withdrawal of funds which has caused some apprehension in banking quarters recently.

Fits Into Bank Pool Scheme.

The action was seen as dovetailing with the organization of the 500 million dollar banking pool by President Hoover for the enlargement of bank credits.

A spokesman for the federal reserve bank pointed out that the move was not designed to check the outflow of gold from this country, which yesterday amounted to approximately $147,[illegible] in both exports and earmarks. This outflow has tended to cure automatically the lopsided distribution of the metal which has had a harmful effect on world trade, it was explained. The reserve spokesman said that the action reflected in some measure an improvement in business. This

Bankers Hail Hoover Plan as Turning Point in Business

BY O. A. MATHER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Atlantic City, N. J., Oct. 8.—Belief that President Hoover's plan for a broad program of banking and government financial aid to "unfreeze" the country's credit resources will mark the turning point toward renewed prosperity was expressed by the nation's bankers today at the closing session of the American Bankers' association convention.

This opinion was epitomized by Fred I. Kent, director of the Bankers Trust company, New York, who made the closing address. He spoke in place of Ogden L. Mills, undersecretary of the treasury, who canceled his scheduled address, it was explained, because of pressure of work resulting from President Hoover's plan and consequent inability to leave Washington. The bankers had hoped that Mr. Mills would explain the President's program in more detail than was given in the first announcement.

Restores Confidence.

"We have just had the President present to us a plan aimed to restore confidence in this country," Mr. Kent said. "Confidence is what is necessary because so much uncertainty has developed in the minds of all men as to how things might go and a fear was created that was being exercised harmfully.

"There is not the slightest doubt that the development of this $500,000,000 banking pool will say to the people of the United States: 'The bankers of the country are going to stand together and protect the people,' and that is all the people want to know. Our problem can move along toward solution, although we cannot go too fast, because foreign matters must be taken care of.

"Last week I had an opportunity to discuss matters with Andrew W. Mellon, secretary of the treasury. If I can I want to carry to you a message from him, although he knows nothing about the message. Mr. Mellon, responsible for our treasury, distressed because there has to be a deficit, knowing that the budget should be balanced and realizing the situation in this country, having come from abroad, where he saw all of the difficulties there, still was cool, collected, and understanding, with marvelous poise, not affected at all, but seeing that the United States warrants the confidence of the people and that the world warrants the confidence of all the people. That was the impression he made upon me."

On Moratorium Extension.

Earlier in his address, Mr. Kent urged that the moratorium on international debt payments, which was arranged for one year by President Hoover last June, should be extended for several years. He warned, however, that any extension is conditioned on acceptance by France. He also attacked radical proposals for any system of government unemployment insurance in this country. He urged that every effort be made to check the increasing burden of taxes.

"We have recommended that our government immediately take up the question of an extension of the moratorium from July, 1932, in order that we may be in position to eliminate the uncertainty that surrounds that situation at the moment," Mr. Kent explained. "If commodity prices do not recover very much by that time the resumption of international payments probably will be impossible.

Eye Capacity to Pay.

"If this government, with the other governments, can arrange for an extension of the moratorium for one, two, or three years, possibly three years might be better, and allow business to resume and commodity markets to be stabilized, possibly at some higher level, then we could move on in a sound way. We should at the same time develop an arrangement under which a reconsideration of the capacity to pay of the nations involved should be undertaken for the expiration of the extended moratorium."

While predicting an eventual renewal of prosperity, Mr. Kent asserted that the United States is "faced with a real menace if we do not prevent any legislation that is going to fasten the dole on us.

"We always have in this country unemployment on the part of those who will not work." He continued: "It is estimated there are about 1,500,000 of them all the time. Then there are about 2,000,000 who are inefficient."

NEW YORK CURB STOCKS ADVANCE IN SHARP RALLY

New York, Oct. 8.—(AP)—The curb market rallied strongly today, reserving its best performance for the last hour after a slow upward movement during the earlier trading. Sales approximated 600,000 shares, which equaled yesterday's volume.

Utilities gave a good account of themselves, especially during the late advance. Several specialties were buoyant and the greatly improved tone was also reflected in the oils. Electric Bond and Share offered strong leadership, gaining 3¼ points net. American Gas, up 4¼; Commonwealth Edison up 15¼. Consolidated Gas of Baltimore up 7, and United Light "A" up 3, were other impressive performers among the power and light holding company issues.

Hoover Plan Is Seen Beneficial to Farmers

Substantial benefit to farmers in the Hoover plan to strengthen the nation's credit is seen by E. A. O'Neal of the American Farm Bureau association. "Of especial benefit to agriculture are broadening of elegibility provisions of the federal reserve bank act and the proposed increase in capital stock of federal land banks," Mr. O'Neal says. "In most instances coöperative marketing associations can get good credit, but production credit for individual farmers is too costly at present and in fact farmers in some sections have no basis of credit whatsoever."

GRAIN TRADE HOLDS DECLINE IN PRICES DEFINITELY CHECKED

It was the general belief of the grain trade at the close yesterday that the declining tendency in prices was over and that the trend is to be irregularly higher. At no time in months has there been such a radical change in sentiment, not only in Chicago, but throughout the country, it is stated. Low prices for grains and all commodities are the basis for taking the buying side of all grains, particularly wheat.

One of the largest operators, who has been bearish for months, expressed himself strongly in favor of the belief that a change has come and that the grain trade is likely to lead in an upward trend of commodity prices. Action taken by the government at Washington has been responsible for the change, he asserted. Coming at a time when prices were the lowest in years, he said that not only grains, but cotton and stocks should do better. The banking situation, which has been against an upturn in prices, has changed most decidedly, he added.

"For a long time it has been almost impossible to borrow any money at the banks, but now the banks are more disposed to take an optimistic view and are willing to assist in restoring confidence by a more liberal loaning policy," the operator stated. "There has been forced liquidation in securities and the worst is over."

The cash grain situation has improved and markets are in a position where an increase in buying power can work a revival within a short time, it is said. For the first time in months the market appears to have leaders on the buying side.

National Tea September Sales Total $6,162,333

The consolidated sales of the National Tea company for the month of September, 1931, amounted to $6,162,333 as compared with $6,850,862 for the corresponding month of 1930.

Chicago Stock Exchange Prices Sprint Higher Again

Stocks on the Chicago exchange got their second wind yesterday and again swung into the strong forward dash which was started on Tuesday following the Hoover conference, but which was interrupted by profit taking on Wednesday. As at the beginning of the advance, the utilities provided the feature of the trading.

Insull securities were especially noteworthy in the long list of gains. Commonwealth Edison leaping ahead 14 points to close at 153. Middle West Utilities was the most active issue of the day, advancing ⅞ on a turnover of 16,900 shares to close at 10⅞. Insull Utility Investment likewise was active, going up 3 points to close at 18. The second preferred of this issue registered a gain of 11 points in closing at 45.

Gain Eleven Points.

Corporation Securities advanced 1⅝ to close at 8 and the certificates finished at 30, eleven points to the good. Public Service $100 par shares, in which there has been little trading, moved against the general trend to lose 17 points in closing at 159. However, the no par, moved up 5½ points to close at 160.

Everything was cheerful in the automotive section where Bendix scored an advance of 1⅛ to finish at 16¾. Borg Warner, too, scored a healthy gain of 1⅝ in finishing at 13⅛. Trading in both shares continued fairly active. Cord Corporation in selling at 5⅝ was up 1⅛ and Pines Winterfront, which recently reported its business in good position, finished at 13¼, with a gain of 1¼.

In the general list U. S. Radio & Telivision once more was quite active, going up 1⅝ to close at 17¼ on a turnover of 7,350 shares. Great Lakes Dredge gained 2⅜ in closing at 15⅛. Marshall Field, too, was stronger, picking up 1⅝ to finish the day at 16⅝.

Quaker Oats returned to the century group by advancing four points to 101. Both Swift and Swift International were a point to the good, the former closing at 23 and the latter at 31. U. S. Gypsum improved 1⅝ to end the day at 26¼. Perfect Circle at 30 was up 2 points and Walgreen in closing at 14¼ was up 1 point.

Lindsay Light Reports.

While trading was not particularly heavy, the volume for the day amounting to only 130,000 shares, the atmosphere about the exchange was considerably more animated than it was in the long dull period of the downward movement.

The Lindsay Light company reports net earnings, after all charges, including federal, state, and local taxes, for the nine months ending Sept. 30 were $92,464, equal to $1.35 per share on the common stock after preferred dividends. This compares with $74,829 for the same period in 1930 when the per share earning was $1.02.

Further evidence of the tightening of short selling restrictions was found in a request made by the business conduct committee for members to furnish "in addition to the reports giving the short position of accounts now being submitted, a list of all short sales of stocks listed on the Chicago Stock exchange made each day and covered the same day." This requirement is effective today.

THE FAIR PUTS DIVIDENDS ON $1 A YEAR BASIS

The board of directors of The Fair department store yesterday reduced the dividends on their common stock from a $2.40 a year basis to $1 "for the present, at least, in view of the general conditions," a statement by the company said.

The regular quarterly dividend of $1.75 per share was declared on the preferred stock, payable Nov. 2, to holders of record Oct. 20, 1931.

The following facts in connection with the general condition of The Fair at the present time were made known:

Assets, $12,280,356. Preferred stock, 38,500 shares. Common stock, 375,000 shares. Book value, $22.48. Market price, as of Oct. 8: Preferred, $87; common, $11 per share.

Assets as of Aug. 31, 1931, are $4,805,856 in excess of the total market value of preferred and common stock, based on current price quotations. The preferred stock yields eight per cent at current market price. The common, with the quarterly dividend of 25 cents per share, yields 9.1 per cent.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Oct. 8.—Wall street beamed at evidences of returning prosperity today.

The stock market, after its breathing spell yesterday, shot upward again, carrying price averages to the highest levels they have reached since the Hoover credit rehabilitation plan was broached.

Pivotal shares scored gains of anywhere from one to seven points with a scattering of the more volatile descriptions performing even more spectacularly. Auburn Auto showed an advance of 22 points on its closing sale. Peoples Gas was up 11 and International Business Machine 8⅛ points.

Trading was at a steady pace, but on a lesser scale than Tuesday, when the street was revelling in enthusiasm over the President's new proposals.

Rate Boost This Week, Report.

On top of growing confidence in the project—as reflected in a steady stream of oddlot orders from small buyers all over the country—the market had the benefit today of a report that a rate increase for the railroads would be announced before the week is out and assurances that the dividend news from one or two quarters is going to make better reading in the immediate hereafter. Knowledge that President Hoover was at work to relieve the real estate mortgage strain also helped sentiment somewhat.

The buying movement gained progress gradually but steadily, the most active trading of the day taking part in the last hour and the final prices being with few exceptions the best or within a fraction of the best of the session.

Leaders Forge Ahead.

Another encouraging aspect of the market's performance was the way in which stocks commonly looked to for leadership kept in the van of the forward movement. Some of the highest priced stocks of the list were among the most active, showing that buying of a substantial character was in progress.

Since then, State and Madison has become the world's busiest corner, and the business founded by N. W. Harris has grown to a bank with capital and surplus of $12,000,000 and total resources of over $114,000,000.

The men in whose charge N. W. Harris left the business continue to manage it, following the same conservative policies laid down by the founder in the early days.

One year ago	7.00@9.00

Top yesterday, $6.50; average, $5.75. Estimated receipts at Chicago today: Cattle, 3,000; hogs, 10,000; sheep, 25,000.

Hog receipts dropped off again yesterday and sellers were enabled to push choice grades up 5@10c more and to the highest level of the week. Top sales equaled the highest point since Sept. 22.

Total arrivals at 20,000 were smallest for Thursday in three weeks and compared with 30,118 a year ago. The leading market centers the first four days of the week show a decrease of 5 per cent compared with a week ago. There is also a growing tendency to hold back the underweight hogs which glutted the market during the last ten days, but anything weighing under 200 lb continued to sell slowly. The extreme top at $5.80 was paid for 240 lb averages, while about 3,000 medium to good 170@190 lb averages went to local packers late at $5.05@5.35. The general average for the whole day, including all marketable hogs except pigs weighing under 135 lbs, showed 5c gain at $5.25.

Winter Hogs Bid $4.50.

Numerous bids of $4.50 were made on December and January contracts in the futures market yesterday, but the lowest offer of the day came in December heavy grades that were quoted at $4.75 near the close. October light, medium, and heavy grades were bid $5.00.

The cattle market held firm on light supplies yesterday, only 6,000 arriving at Chicago, the smallest run of the week. However, previously this week receipts have been large and the week's total is expected to reach 54,000, the largest of the year. The biggest weekly total in 1930 was 50,588. Despite this liberal supply of cattle, top prices worked upwards to new high levels during the first half of the week.

Support of the market for best grades the last few days came principally from local interests. Outsiders were buying fewer than they were last week. Since the close of last week top kinds have advanced 25@50c, but plain steers show reductions of 25@75c for the week. No steers were good enough to top $10.75 yesterday, though highly finished stock is quoted up to $10.60. Cows and heifers were steady yesterday and 10@25c lower for the week. Calves recovered 50c of the recent sharp losses.

Lambs Hold Steady.

Buyers held lambs down to a steady basis on the smallest Thursday receipts in six weeks yesterday, but the clearance was good. Most natives sold to packers at $6.25, while city butchers paid up to $6.50 for their selections. Most range lambs to packers cost $6.25 and less, shippers paying up to $6.35 for the best.

Aged sheep and yearlings were steady. Country buyers are more eager to buy feeding lambs lately and have been paying $5.00@5.25 for white face stock on file, while choice black face stock is quoted at $5.35@5.50. There has been a big decrease in sheep receipts since last week's close. Arrivals at the leading markets for the first four days of this week shows a decrease of 16 per cent compared with a year ago.

Use Modern Methods
TO SELL YOUR BUSINESS!

NOT so long ago in this country the official town crier was also a walking advertisement for those who had articles or businesses to sell. With his bell and bulletins, he walked up and down the street shouting the news and the advertisements of shopkeepers.

His methods were effective because towns were small and buyers few, but word-of-mouth advertising reaches too few people for business today.

The modern method of selling quickly is advertising in the newspaper with the largest circulation among responsive prospects. A want ad appearing in the Tribune can place your offer to sell before more than 825,000 families every week day. Use this powerful, inexpensive method to sell your business!

statement is borne out to a certain extent in the weekly report of twelve banks in the federal reserve system which showed an expansion in credit throughout the country.

Extend More Credit.

Total borrowings of the member banks of the system showed an increase last week of $136,014,000, bringing the current total of borrowings to [illegible]. The reserve banks also put more money into circulation through the purchase of an additional [illegible] of bankers' acceptances and increasing their holding of government securities by $18,497,000.

These changes suggest that bankers have become more liberal in the extension of credit to customers. It has been pointed out recently that it was [illegible] difficult to borrow money because of the uneasiness felt by the bankers over uncertain domestic and world conditions.

One important result expected to flow from the higher rediscount is along these same lines in loosening the credit strings of the member banks.

Note Circulation Rises.

Total deposits of the 12 institutions showed a decline of $20,123,000 to [illegible], while note circulation expanded $182,196,000 to $2,209,989,000. The increase in note circulation is accounted for in part by the fact that there has been considerable hoarding of money recently.

The steady increase in gold exports is reflected in the system's report, which shows a decline of $101,231,000 in gold reserves during the week. Total gold reserves now stand at [illegible]. Total reserves showed a shrinkage of $107,297,000 to $3,193,-[illegible]. The changes in the position of the banks is reflected in the lower reserve ratio which stood at 67.1 at the close of the week as compared with [illegible] at the end of the preceding week.

New York Borrowings Up.

The report of the reserve bank of New York showed a big increase in member bank borrowings. Member banks borrowed $69,911,000 from the reserve bank, bringing the current total to $122,432,000. The reserve bank also increased its holdings of bankers' acceptances by $16,233,000 and is now carrying $171,580,000 of such paper. Holdings of government securities were unchanged at $225,705,000.

Reserves of the New York bank declined $127,877,000 to $1,032,832,000, which reflected the shrinkage in gold reserves. Gold reserves dropped $128,-[illegible] to $996,223,000. Deposits declined $60,697,000 to $1,053,057,000. The changes in the reserve position were reflected in a decline reserve ratio to 63.9 per cent as compared with [illegible] per cent a week ago.

Chicago Borrowings.

The Chicago reserve bank reported an increase in member bank borrowings of [illegible] to $28,486,000. The Chicago institution added $14,674,000 to its holdings of bankers' acceptance and [illegible] in government securities. Deposits declined $4,125,000 and total reserves fell $3,961,000. The reserve ratio receded to 77.4 per cent as against [illegible] per cent last week.

BROKERS' LOANS SINK

The crushing liquidation which burdened the stock market during the last week resulted in a substantial reduction in the requirements for speculative credit, the weekly report on brokers' loans discloses. The report issued last night covering the week ended Wednesday shows a decline in loans to brokers and dealers of $171,-[illegible], which is one of the sharpest declines recorded for any week in recent months.

The decline brings the total credit now devoted to stock market speculation in this country to $1,001,000,000, which is considerably less than a half of what it was a year ago at this time. It is the lowest by a wide margin for any week since the present method of compiling the figures was inaugurated in 1926.

All Loans Reduced.

All classes of lenders reduced their loans, the report shows. The New York banks accounted for most of the decline by withdrawing $150,000,000, bringing their current loans to $798,-[illegible]. Interior banks drew down [illegible] and are now lending a total of $77,000,000. Nonbanking lenders, including corporations, are now lending $126,000,000, which is a drop of [illegible] from the previous week's total.

WALL ST. BEAMS AS STOCKS GO SCOOTING AHEAD

for the dispiriting performance it put on yesterday by rushing up more than 5 points. The closing sale on the old line bellwether was recorded at 72⅞, only a small fraction below its high of the day. American Can shot up 5⅝, American Telephone 7⅝, Westinghouse 4½, Consolidated Gas 5, Columbia Carbon 7⅛, Eastman Kodak 7⅞, and General Electric 3¼ points.

Railroad shares had another boom day with the favorites enjoying lively bidding at constantly rising prices. New York Central, New Haven, Northern Pacific, Baltimore and Ohio, Rock Island, Illinois Central, Union Pacific and others wound up sporting healthy plus signs. The gains among the more active members of the group averaged from 3 to 6 or more points.

Another scintillating group was the New York traction stocks. Brooklyn Manhattan Rapid Transit was up about 7 points over last night's close at one stage of the proceedings and held all but about a point of its runup right through to the finish. Interborough Rapid Transit spurted 4 and Third Avenue Railway more than 2 points. A revival of reports that important news bearing on the project to unify the various systems of the city is imminent was responsible for the enthusiasm in this quarter of the field. Legislation paving the way for unification has been on the statute books for months, but the local authorities and representatives of the various units have been unable so far to iron out the differences which are holding up the fulfillment of the plan.

Motor and oil shares trailed with the procession, General Motors being turned over in large blocks at better prices despite the announcement of a sharp decrease in the corporation's sales for September. Houston Oil distinguished itself with an upturn of more than 7 points.

GENERAL FUTURE BUYING SWEEPS WHEAT UPWARD

Report Russia May Cut Exports of Grain.

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Legimate supply and demand factors affected the wheat market yesterday for the first time in weeks. These factors, together with unconfirmed rumors that Russia had cancelled charters to load wheat at Black sea ports, resulted in general buying of futures which swept prices up 2⅜@2⅜ over the finish on Wednesday to the highest level since Sept. 26. December touched 48⅞c on the advance.

Efforts to confirm the Russian rumor were without avail, but the trade was convinced that there was some ground for the report. A London cable to the Uhlmann Grain company said: "Rumored ships now loading are being asked to leave with ore instead of wheat, as wheat is moving slowly."

Russia Key to Situation.

For nearly two years the spector of unlimited supplies of wheat that might be shipped from Russia has acted as a wet blanket over the market, and a number of operators expressed the belief that if later developments showed that there was no danger of heavy clearances from that country this season a decided revision in ideas might be necessary as to the price North American farmers would receive for their grain. From July 1 to Oct. 7 this season Russia has exported around 46,000,000 bu in comparison with 20,000,000 bu during the same period in 1930, when the total for the entire crop year was around 97,000,000 bu.

An outstanding feature in the wheat markets was that buying orders followed the advance, and readily absorbed profit taking and short sales, and the best figures of the day were made shortly before the close with the finish at net gains of 2⅜@2½c, December being 48⅝@48⅝c; May, 52⅞@52⅞c, and July, 53⅜@53½.

Lower German Estimates.

Traders were inclined to comment favorably on commercial estimates from Germany which suggested a crop of 140,000,000 bu, a reduction of 16,000,000 bu from the recent official returns. This makes the total practically the same as the crop harvested in 1930. Hedging pressure caused the Winnipeg market to drag as compared with Chicago, and it closed only ⅝@⅝c higher, with December at 53⅝c in Canadian funds, which were about 10¼ per cent discount as compared with America. Liverpool was affected by exports of only 4,256,000 bu from the Black sea, including 3,072,000 bu from Russia, compared with an aggregate of 6,120,000 bu the previous week, and closed ⅜@⅞c higher, with December at 52⅝c, figured on the basis of sterling at $3.83. Export sales of 500,000 bu, largely Manitobas, were reported in all positions during the day. Buenos Aires gained 1⅞@2c for the day, with December closing at 41⅞c.

Bullish enthuasiasm in wheat spread to the corn market, and with aggressive buying, which was partly attributed to a leading local professional, prices advanced 2@2⅜c over Wednesday's finish and the close was at the top, with December at 35⅝c; May, 40c, and July 40½c, and there was not material pressure on the way up. Sellers of daily and weekly offers were forced to protect themselves on the way up.

Good Class of Buying.

Expectations of a further reduction in the German rye crop, and prospects that a reduction on the import duty on that grain would be announced shortly, combined with strength in wheat, brought in a good class of buying and the close was 1⅞@2c higher, with December 39½c and May 41⅞c. The German rye crop was recently estimated at 275,000,000 bu, against 302,000,000 bu harvested in 1930.

Oats were influenced largely by the action of other grains, but there was no material pressure on the market and the close was ⅞@1⅛c higher, December being 22¼ to 22⅜c, and May 25@25⅛c at the last.

State Cancels License of Mathews & Co. After Probe

Ruppert F. Bippus, head of the Illinois securities commission, stated yesterday that the license of Mathews & Co., 105 West Adams street, a stock distributing firm, has been ordered canceled. The firm was recently cited by the commission for questionable methods in the solicitation of business. The concern which had been blacklisted by several better business bureaus had employed telephone solicitation extensively in its retail distribution campaign. One of the stocks in which it was operating was suspended by the New York Curb exchange because of the methods used in the retail selling.

SUGAR.

NEW YORK, Oct. 8.—(AP)—SUGAR—Raw was quiet today and in absence of business prices were unchanged at 3.45c for spots. Futures were quiet, but with no selling pressure. Prices were firmer, with the market closing 1@2 points net higher. The day's business aggregated only 2,000 tons. Prices follow:

	Open.	High.	Low.	Close.	Prev. close.
December..	1.37	1.39	1.37	1.39	1.37

The advance of 10 points to the basis of 4.60c for fine granulated became effective at the opening this morning and as the trade had covered their requirements for about 30 days no new business was reported.

WORLD'S GRAIN MARKET NEWS

J. E. Bennett & Co.'s Kansas City house reports that very little wheat is being sold in the immediate Wichita vicinity, much of it remaining in storage and a large amount being fed to live stock. Some few reports coming in from around Dorge City say from 50 to 80 per cent of the wheat has been moved in that territory.

There are indications of a decided improvement in the export demand for Canadian wheat this month, according to the statistical department of Grain Commissioners of Canada. The temporary discounting of the Canadian dollar should give Canadian wheat a slight advantage in the export markets, unless other exporters reduce prices to a competitive basis. Australia probably will continue to hold the large share of the Oriental market for export wheat for the present, because of the substantial discount of her currency under the British pound.

There has been a large absorption of December and May corn in the past four days. Part of it was said to have been covering shorts by two large local operators, who turned to the buy side. Yesterday their purchases were significant and had a decided influence on the entire trade.

NEWS OF THE CROPS

A wire from Lincoln, Neb., to Jackson Bros. says reports from the western part of the state indicate a substantial decrease in sowing on account of dry weather, and if rain does not come before next week it will be considerably more.

Broomhall says Argentina's new crop has started well and all indications point to a normal yield, but weather conditions during the next two months will be of vital importance. Weather in France is extremely warm for this time of year and field work is progressing actively. Native offerings are scarce.

CASH·GRAIN NEWS

Early reports from the seaboard indicated a decidedly disappointing foreign demand for cash wheat, but later it was claimed 50,000 bu had been sold in all positions, mainly Manitobas. Owing to the general election in England, to be held Oct. 27, it is generally expected the demand from that country will remain slow until after the result is known.

Chicago handlers sold 6,000 bu wheat, 14,000 bu corn, and 28,000 bu oats to the domestic trade with 50,000 bu oats sold to go to store. Purchases of 112,000 bu corn and 4,000 bu oats were made to arrive.

Official receipts of grain at Chicago Thursday: Wheat, 16 cars; corn, 309 cars; oats, 46 cars; rye, 2 cars; barley, 19 cars.

Copper Price Firm at 7 Cts. as Demand Holds Steady

The price of zinc has weakened and prime western is now quoted at 3.50 cents a pound, East St. Louis, compared with 3.55 to 3.60 cents previously. The decline was the result of offerings that pressed the market in the middle west. Copper buying for domestic delivery is in fair volume, with the demand sufficient to more than absorb the intake of custom smelters. The price is firm at 7 cents, domestic, and 7½ cents a pound for export.

PRODUCE MARKETS

Fresh eggs were in good demand and 1c higher. Receipts, 2,128 cases. Butter in fair demand with prices unchanged. Receipts, 7,037 tubs. Live heavy hens and spring chickens advanced 1c with leghorn hens and springs up ½c, and geese 2c; while spring ducks were 1c lower. Receipts, 3 cars and 32 trucks. Northern potatoes were in better demand and prices somewhat higher. Receipts, 109 cars with 269 cars on team track.

CROP REPORT BEARISH; COTTON PRICES GAIN

A government crop report of 16,284,000 bales of 500 lbs each, given to the trade yesterday, was the second largest on record. It compared with 13,932,000 bales last year and 15,685,000 bales estimated on Sept. 1, a gain of 599,000 bales for the month. In 1925 the crop was 16,103,000 bales.

The government's figures were about 500,000 bales more than trade expectations. On the resumption of trading after issuance of the report prices dropped 5 to 10 points, from which there was a rally of as much as 40 points, equal to $2 a bale, before the demand was satisfied. New Orleans sold early in anticipation of a bearish report and were understood to be buying later. The crop figures and the market's action was one of the greatest surprises the trade has had of late.

The close was at a moderate reaction from the top, with net gains on futures in Chicago of 3@9 points and 4@11 points in other markets, New York leading the upturn. Spots advanced 10 points in New York to 5.85c; New Orleans was unchanged at 5.45c; Galveston was 5.60c, and Houston 5.50c. Liverpool closed 8@16 points net lower, with sales of 6,000 bales. LARD MAKES SMALL GAINS

A stronger situation was on in the lard market yesterday. Hogs were higher. Liverpool advanced 1s 9d to 3s 3d. Grains were higher and shorts were more nervous and were buying as also were the packing interests. Specialists say that heavy marketing of immature hogs promises a scarcity of good heavy hogs later in the season. Cash trade in lard and meats was fair. Prices follow:

The West Side Trust and Savings bank, Roosevelt road and Halsted street, recently distributed its 87th consecutive dividend to stockholders, according to Louis H. Heymann, president.

BOND MARKET CONTINUES FIRM; PRICES ADVANCE

New York, Oct. 8.—(AP)—The bond market continued to advance today, although a moderate reactionary tendency appeared in the forenoon. Closing prices were generally higher than on Wednesday. The average price of sixty corporate bonds, consisting of twenty issues each of public utility, railroad, and industrial loans, was 82.8, a net gain of seven-tenths of a point.

The higher average price may not convey a correct impression of the width of many of the gains. Net advances of 1 to 5 points were common throughout the list and a few were even larger.

Active bonds, impressive in number and diversification, to close with net gains ranging upward from two points were: St. Paul 5s of 1975, Rock Island 4s of 1934, Erie 5s of 1967, several Interborough issues, Missouri Pacific general 4s and several of the 5s, New York Central new 4½s, Pittsburgh, Cincinnati, Chicago & St. Louis series C 4½s, St. Louis-San Francisco 4½s of 1978 and series A 4s, Southern Pacific 4½s of 1969 and of 1981, Texas corporation 5s, Youngstown Sheet and Tubes series A and B 5s, and Chile Mortgage bank loans.

Railroad loans were generally stronger than other groups. United States government obligations were moderately active and closed firm.

Report 3.5% Increase in Mutual Fire Insurance

According to figures issued yesterday by the American Mutual alliance, Chicago, mutual fire insurance business, shows a net increase for the first six months of 1931 of 3.5 per cent, or 170 million dollars net. For the same period the assets of these companies have increased 10 per cent and the surplus 13 per cent. Mutual insurance companies now have in force over 44 billion dollars worth of fire insurance on property in the United States, it is stated.

James S. Kemper, Chicago insurance man, president of the Kemper Insurance company, yesterday was elected to the presidency of the National Association of Mutual Insurance Companies at its 36th annual convention, held in the Stevens hotel. Harry Harrison of Worchester, Mass., was elected vice president and S. P. Fowler of Indianapolis was made treasurer. W. E. Straub of Lincoln, Nebraska, was elected national councilor.

U. S. Treasury Is Offering $50,000,000 90 Day Bills

The United States treasury offers $50,000,000 ninety day treasury bills to be dated Oct. 13, maturing Jan. 13, according to Secretary of the Treasury Mellon. The bills will be sold to the highest bidder. The proceeds of the sale will be used to retire an equal amount of treasury bills retiring on Oct. 13.

Why pay more than Household's low rate?

The Nationally known Household Loan Plan offers cash loans of $50 to $300 to husbands and wives at reasonable rates.

Household's rate on all loans above $100 is almost one-third lower than the maximum permitted by the small-loan law. We voluntarily established this low rate in 1928, and our customers have benefited ever since. This rate remains the same until the loan is paid off. It does not increase as the unpaid balance decreases.

For example:

The average monthly cost of a $200 loan, repaid in 20 equal monthly payments, is $2.63. This is the lowest cost in Chicago.
